President Says He's Guilty Of Nothing

Claims His Coolness Changed Russian Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon says he is guilty of nothing to justify his impeachment and unwilling to appease his critics by naming a Watergate prosecutor he cannot fire. (See other stories, page 2.)

He also said last night his coolness under pressure made the Russians back away from a showdown in the Middle East in a confrontation every bit as tense as the Cuban missile crisis of 1962.

"The tougher it gets, the cooler I get," Nixon declared near the end of a tense 38- minute news conference.

"Even this week, when many though the President was shellshocked, unable to act, the President acted decisively ..."

Meeting reporters for the first time since events had removed from office Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson, his deputy, William D. Ruckelshaus, and Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox, the President:

Announced acting Atty. Gen. Robert H. Bork would appoint a new special prosecutor, who would be independent and given White House cooperation, but not access to presidential papers demanded by and denied to Cox. This failed to meet the demands of congressional Democrats.

Disclosed the partial relaxation of the military alert of nuclear bomber and missile crews and of 2.3 million U.S. servicemen worldwide and declared "the outlook for a permanent peace is the best that it has been for 20 years" of Mideastern conflict.

Acknowledged his administration had been weakened by the Watergate scandals but blamed most of his trouble on "outrageous, vicious, distorted reporting ... frantic, hysterical reporting."

Nixon's move on naming a replacement for Cox failed to placate any but his most loyal supporters on Capitol Hill. It did nothing to disarm those in the House pressing for Nixon's removal from office through impeachment.

Fifty-three senators introduced a bill yesterday to permit U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica to appoint a new special prosecutor, independent of Nixon's influence. After Nixon spoke, many of the cosponsors said Nixon's pledge of White House cooperation was not satisfactory.

"The last man to whom he pledged the same total cooperation, Mr. Cox, was summarily fired," said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., a member of the House Judiciary Committee which has started an impeachment inquiry.

Bork said he sent a list of five or six names to the White House. A spokesman said all the potential nominees were figures not now in government.

Nixon said the White House would be "cooperative," but in the interest of preserving confi-

WHAT, MORE UFOS?

A squadron of what appears to be flying saucers soars over Mount Tamalpais, casting an eerie light over an otherwise dark landscape. Corte Madera Police reported receiving telephone calls at 1:45 and 1:51 a.m. today, reports of strange yellow, blue and white lights in the eastern sky. Officers decided they were just unusually bright lights from a plane. Independent-Journal photographer Jim Kean supplied this interpretation of the continuing spate of unidentified flying object reports. He combined a photograph of ceiling lights in the Marin Civic Center with the view looking southwest from Canal Street in San Rafael. For other versions of the recent sightings, see page 3.

MIDEAST SITUATION

Peace Keepers On The Scene

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The first of 7,000 "Blue Beret" peace keepers from the experienced U.N. force on Cyprus today put themselves between Israeli and Egyptian forces near the Suez Canal.

Israel and Egypt agreed on one thing—the war of bullets had turned into a war of words.

The first group of about 80 Soviet truce "observers" arrived in Cairo today. It was expected that more will arrive within the next few days. Russian Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev has asked for U.S. observers, but President Nixon said yesterday he would send Americans only if the United Nations asked for them.

The Pentagon, called off another major portion of the alert of American military forces. It left still on alert troops stationed in Europe, the Mediterranean and along the Atlantic coast. Yesterday, Nixon ordered the nuclear-equipped Strategic Air Command off alert.

At the United Nations the Security Council met in closed session today to thresh out details of the composition and financing of the new U.N. Emergency Force in the Middle East.

Sir Laurence McIntyre of Australia convened th session at 11:20 a.m. (EDT) behind closed doors.

A U.N. spokesman said the meeting was an "informal consultation" and no official records would be kept.

The Council was following up its authorization last night to Secretary General Kurt Waldheim to send more U.N. peacekeeping forces from Cyprus to the Middle East.

Six hundred U.N. volunteers from Sweden, Finland and Austria, commanded by a Canadian colonel, arrived in Cairo last night and early today and by dawn "some of these men had already taken up positions" between the warring sides, a U.N. spokesmen in the Egyptian capital said.

"We expect them (all) to be deployed to the front some time today," Canadian Col. Clay Beattie said.

Egypt, however, charged Israeli forces had blocked a 54-man Finnish U.N. truce contingent from taking up its position

IT'S CONFUSION TIME AGAIN

The puzzled gent wondering what time it REALLY is, is typical of most persons trying to remember what to do when Daylight Savings Time end tomorrow. If he remembers the adage, "Spring forward, fall back," he'll do the right thing and set his timepieces back one hour before going to bed. The official time change is at 2 a.m. tomorrow, when it'll suddenly become 1 a.m. again for everyone except bar patrons — who won't get an extra hour of imbibing, despite what the clock says — but will get an extra hour's sleep like everyone else.

AN ANALYSIS

Mideast Role Hurts Relations

BRUSSELS (UPI) — One casualty of the Middle East war is the relations between the United States and its European allies. The United States is virtually isolated in its support of Israel.

Some of its allies, including those who get large doses of U.S. aid, not only kept hands off the war but even hindered U.S. efforts to help Israel. Others responded to threats of an Arab oil boycott by banning oil exports to the United States.

The reason, according to evidence in Washington and Europe, was fear that Arab oil nations would cut off oil supplies if European nations aligned themselves with Washington's pro-Israel stand. Europe gets 85 per cent od its oil from the Middle East, the United States gets only 6 per cent.

"Europe...would have frozen to death this winter unless there had been a settlement," President Nixon said last night in a news conference in Washington.

Events of the past weeks, according to analysts here, indicate that:

There is little chance of U.S.-European cooperation in an oil crisis so long as the United States continues to support Israel.

Since Western dependence on Arab oil is expected to grow over the next decade, there is little likelihood that Washington can count on any future help from its North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) allies in the Middle East.

The United States is almost alone in its support of Israel. The best that Israel can hope for from most European nations is neutrality—and even that hope is far from secure.

Once agian, as in Vietnam, the European allies are standing aloof from an area which

Democratic Leaders Reject Nixon's Prosecutor Promise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Democratic leaders of the Senate and the House today rejected as unacceptable President Nixon's promise to install a new Watergate prosecutor working under White House terms Archibald Cox declared intolerable.

"No soap," said Sen. Mike Mansfield, Mont.

He endorsed a bill cosponsored by 53 senators to give chief U. S. District Judge John J. Sirica authority to name an independent prosecutor — and said former Special Watergate Prosecutor Cox would be a "splendid" choice, this time working freed of potential presidential interference.

The same bill has 106 cosponsors in the House.

Rep. Thomas J. O'Neill Jr., Mass., the House Democratic leader, also rejected Nixon's announcement Friday night that Cox' successor would be named next week.

"I do not believe the new prosecutor will be acceptable to the Congress and the American public under the terms the President outlined," O'Neill said.

O'Neill said Nixon's firing of Cox "was an act of obstruction of justice and the House must continue with its impeachment."

Mansfield, however, said he did not expect Nixon's impeachment "at the moment" based on what has happened.

There was no indication if Nixon has decided on a choice for the post. Acting Atty. Gen. Robert Bork has submitted a list of names to the White House.

"It's time for those who are guilty to be prosecuted," Nixon said at a news conference last night, "and for those who are innocent to be cleared."

In announcing that a special prosecutor will be appointed to replace Archibald Cox, who was fired, Nixon said "the special prosecutor will have independence ... he will have total cooperation from the executive branch and he will have primary responsibility to bring this matter—which has so long

SAN RAFAEL POSTS WIN OVER DRAKE

Led by the running of quarterback Dave Steele, fullback Steve D'Ambra and halfback Craig Saunders, San Rafael High School rolled to a 32-6 Marin County Athletic League football victory over Drake last night at San Rafael.

In non-league games, Terra Linda defeated Sonoma, 20-6, and Marin Catholic topped Casa Grande, 21-6.

Petaluma High stunned previously unbeaten Vallejo, 15-14, in a crucial North Bay League game. The 15-game Sonoma County League winning streak of Rancho Cotate was ended by Cardinal Newman of Santa Rosa, 27-19.

Giacomini Calls For Construction Delay

A Marin County supervisor yesterday suggested the county delay construction of a $1.1 million exhibition hall at the fairgrounds until public use of surplus facilities at Hamilton Air Force Base is fully explored.

Supervisor Gary T. Giacomini said public use of excess air force buildings may eliminate the need for the multi-purpose exhibition hall or at least alter its size and design.

The board, during June budget hearings, allocated $1.1 million in federal revenue share funds for the new building which would be offered to local groups at cheaper rents than the Veterans Memorial Building.

"With creative planning and some available funds, we could provide resources at Hamilton for organizations that could in turn, generate their own revenue and become self supporting," Giacomini said in a letter to other supervisors.

"Use of one of the Air Force hangars by the youth commission for profit-making rock concerts, updating facilities at the existing child care center, performances at the little theater and running the NCO Club for public and private functions are just some examples that could be looked into."

Study might show that the $1.1 million would be better spent at Hamilton to serve more people, he continued, adding that "we can ill afford to construct a $1.1 million building

SYNANON

Foundation, Marin On Collision Course?

By ANNE WEST
Last of four articles

Is Synanon Foundation a threat to the Marin County General Plan?

There are some who say Synanon's argument that state law prohibits the county from limiting population on ranches is such a threat.

One who describes himself as "scared stiff" over the implications for the plan's future is Supervisor Gary T. Giacomini.

He recently spoke to the Independent-Journal about a visit to Synanon during his 1972 election campaign, when he was shown "a huge photo wall map of northwestern Marin" with lines denoting property boundaries, names of owners and values drawn in on overlays.

"A guy stood there with a pointer, and his knowledge of the ownerships, their children and the children's attitude toward ranching was staggering," said Giacomini.

A program of acquiring a ranch every year or so with a population of around 200 or 300 on each property was outlined, he recalled, though "they were very careful not to promise" an exact population figure for the properties.

Giacomini "mistook blue-sky speculation for concrete plans," replied Synanon attorney Sharon Green recently. She insisted the organization has no plans to buy other agricultural lands or to increase its Marin population beyond 500 at the two ranches and 150 at the original Tomales Bay facility.

The only exceptions, she said, would be if the foundation received as gifts either another ranch or money to be spent specifically for agricultural property.

These prospects are not impossible. George W. Wheelwright, for example, announced in 1967 that he had willed most of his Green Gulch Ranch near

MEETS THE PRESS — These two moods reflect President Nixon during his nationally-televised news conference from the White House. It was a far-ranging conference, laced with attacks from the President on the nation's news media. (UPI Telephoto)

ISSUE OF RESPECT

President Dishes Out Attack On Reporters

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Reporters again became a topic of President Nixon's public concern at his news conference last night, with the Chief Executive, at one point, implying he did not respect them.

"I have never heard or seen such outrageous, vicious, distorted reporting in 27 years of public life," Nixon said.

Although most of the 38-minute give-and-take was dominated by questions on the Middle East and the Watergate tapes, Nixon several times railed against his treatment from the news media, particularly television.

There was a tense pause in Nixon's usually rapid-fire recognition of questioners after he said, "Don't get the impression that you arouse my anger...one can only be angry with those he respects."

But Nixon later singled out the same television newsman who had questioned what specifically angered the President and toned down his comment, saying that what angered him was "when a commentator takes a bit of news and then with knowledge of what the facts are distorts them viciously, I have no respect for that individual."

"I didn't want to leave an impression with my good friend from CBS over here that I don't respect reporters," Nixon said.

He was speaking to CBS correspondent Robert Pierpoint.

The President said his ability to govern was not affected by media reports, but he said the American people might be. "When people are pounded night after night with that kind of frantic, hysterical reporting, it naturally shakes their confidence."

"I can assure you that whatever shocks gentlemen of the press may have, or others, political people, these shocks will not affect me in doing my job."

At one point in his criticism of television commentators, Nixon accused them of reporting events "the commentator knows is wrong."

He said he was particularly disturbed about television reports involving the financing of his home in San Clemente, Calif., and the financial affairs of his close friend, C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo.

News Executives Return Some Salvos

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

News executives got just as tough last night as President Nixon when he attacked the press.

In his news conference, Nixon said he was the target of "outrageous, vicious, distorted reporting," particularly by broadcast commentators.

"It is pathetic to see the last soldier standing gracelessly, flailing away at smoke," said Doug Turner, executive editor of the Buffalo (N.Y.) CourierExpress.

Nixon's remarks were "unworthy of a President," Frank Anderson, city editor of the Long Beach, Calif., Independent Press Telegram, said.

"The press didn't make Watergate, just reported it. But I think he just confirms his own bias, the bias he's had since he's been in politics," Anderson said.

CBS News President Richard S. Salant said "We are familiar, of course, with all of our own news broadcasts, as well as those of the other networks, and we are convinced that none of the network reporting justifies the adjectives the President used Friday night."

An NBC spokesman said "We have been trying to cover a complex major news story fairly and accurately and we believe we have succeeded in doing so."

Reg Murphy, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, called the President's attack "just one more indication of how serious the problem is at the White House now."

"By describing himself as not being angry at people he couldn't respect, he seems to think that we are not worthy of his personal feelings," Murphy said. "That never has been our goal and ought never to be our goal. We ought to be involved in reporting the news and in fact that is what has created the problem for this administration."

Buck Buchwach, executive editor of the Honolulu Advertiser, said "The Honolulu Advertiser accepts, perhaps with more honor than we earned, any share of President Nixon's blame-the-media blast.

Nixon Describes 'Cool' President

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon says he thrives on the pressure of his job. "The tougher it gets, the cooler I get."

In a free swinging news conference last night, the President attempted to allay any suspicion that the Watergate crisis was getting to him. "I have what it takes," he told reporters.

Nixon took a battle stance from the outset of his 38-minute confrontation with reporters, broadcast on national radio and television, and appaered to be declaring war on the news media, particularly television commentators.

He was smiling broadly when he entered the East Room of the White House, but still appeared tense as he walked to the podium for what he knew would be a test of his perserverance and stamina under fire.

In his answers, Nixon made it clear he plans to stay the course and remain in the Presidency despite what he termed the worst attacks against him "in 27 years of public life."

"When people are pounded night after night with that kind of frantic hysterical reporting, it naturally shakes their confidence," the President said.

"And yet, I should point out that even in this week, when many thought that the President was shell-shocked, unable to act, the President acted decisively in the interest of peace (in the Middle East), in the interest of the country, and I can assure you that whatever shocks you gentlemen of the press may have, or others, political people, these shocks will not affect me in doing my job."

With determination on his face and perspiration dotting his upper lip, the President said he had been subjected to "outrageous, vicious, distorted reporting" and quoted TV networks as saying he was a "tyrant, dictator...he has lost his senses, he should resign, he should be impeached.

"Of course," the President said, "it isn't pleasant to get criticism. Some of it is justified, of course, (but) it isn't pleasant to find your honesty questioned."

He added that some of the criticism does "tend to get under the skin of the man who holds this office. But as far as I am concerned, I have learned to expect it. It has been my lot throughout my political life, and I suppose because I have been through so much, that may be one of the reasons that when I have to face an internatiional crisis, I have what it takes."

The President's top aides standing on the sidelines laughed heartily at the President's sallies. Nixon, himself, appeared to be in total command.

Laced throughout the news conference was the President's emphasis on his lasting contributions in the field of foriegn policy. Speaking of the breakthrough with China and detente with Russia, he said: "that will be the major legacy of this administration."

Year-Round Daylight Savings Time Backed

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Year-round daylight saving time might be one way to save fuel, according to some experts, but it is an idea whose time has not yet come.

Massachussetts Gov. Francis W. Sargent yesterday said it would be too complicated not to turn back the clock Sunday morning.

Other officials in New England and across the country said keeping the clock ahead would slash one hour from nighttime electrical requirements during the winter. A power department official in Los Angeles said it would save 300,000 barrels of fuel oil a year.

And in California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke says extending daylight savings time through the winter is one of the "easiest" methods of easing the energy crisis.

Reinecke madethe comment in an interview yesterday a day after the Los Angeles Board of Water and Power Commissioners declared that maintaining daylight savings year-around would save 300,000 barrels of oil a year in the Los Angeles area alone.

Reinecke, chairman of the state's Advisory Energy Council, siad he will ask the Resources Agency to study the effects at prolonging daylight savings.

He said he will recommend such a move for California if the study shows substantial savings would result.

New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim Thomson said he had already taken the matter up with his state's congressional delegation.

Massachusetts House Speaker David M. Bartley suggested that Sargent act on his own and force a confrontation with the government on the federal uniform time statute. He said, "...the energy crisis (is) of such magnitude—especially to those of us in the Northeast this winter—that this step would be justified in my opinion as a means of generating immediate federal action."

Maine Gov. Kenneth M. Curtis said he felt it "definitely would be an energy saver," but he added that it might be ineffective and could be confusing unless all the New England states went along with the proposal.

In Washington, meanwhile, Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., urged passage of a a bill authorizing a one-year test of year-round Daylight Saving Time

Hikes Oil Price

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) —Venezuela, the world's third largest exporting nation, hiked its oil prices 56 per cent yesterday—an increase expected to hit the United States, the main buyer of Venezuelan crude, the hardest.

$1 Billion Loss

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Israeli diplomatic sources said today Israel lost $1 billion worth of planes, tanks and other military equipment by the time the United Nations appealed for an end to the fourth Middle East war.

Officer Wounded

PHNOM PENH (UPI) —An American Army officer was slightly wounded by rebel fire about seven miles south of Phnom Penh Saturday.

The spokesman said officer, who was not identified, was believed to be the first embassy employe wounded in combat in Cambodia. The only American troops stationed in Cambodia are Marine guards and a small detachment of advisers stationed at the embassy.

Gilda Wanes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tropical storm Gilda, which had lashed East Coast shorlines with high winds and rough seas, drifted out to sea today and lost much of its force.

Gilda, which produced 65 mile an hour winds and gusts nearing hurricane force at its peak, began losing its tropical characteristics last night, the National Weather Service said.

Line Reopened

During the fourth closure of the line in four months, troops and helicopters searched trains and the tracks and found no bomb, a British army spokesman said.

Cairo Letter Reaches Israeli

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —A letter from Cairo Thursday reached Amnon Barness, who was born in what is now Israel and is general chairman of the Israel bonds drive here.

"We have finally been able to catch up with you," the letter said. But it was not a terrorist threat.

It was a request for information from the alumni office at the American University in Cairo, where Barness was a member of the class of 1946.

YOU NEVER SAW THESE

Many people these days claim they're seeing things — things called Unidentified Flying Objects. So Independent-Journal photographers Bob Hax and Alfred M. Those floating jelly fish (below left) are photos of the Seattle Space Needle superimposed on a picture of a Marin valley. McCloskey; Nixon Should Step Down

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — U.S. Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., said yesterday President Nixon should resign to avoid the "very real possibility" that impeachment proceedings will move to the point of a House vote within 90 days.

"We're going to see impeachment a Congress act with speed and vigor we haven't seen in two or three decades," McCloskey said at a news conference.

By "reality," McCloskey said he meant "a very determined investigation into impeachment by the Judiciary Committee and a very real possibility the House will be faced by a yes or no vote in the next 90 days."

McCloskey called for "nonpartisan" action on the confirmation of Nixon's vice presidential nominee, Gerald Ford. He said impeachment is "more likely to occur as soon as we have a vice president."

McCloskey said a "mountain of evidence" was building to justify impeachment. He mentioned a possible income tax evasion investigation into funds reportedly held for Nixon by Charles G. (Bebe) Rebozo.

"There are many issues justifying impeachment — the Vesco affair, ITT, the milk price deal, improvements to the President's houses in California and Florida," McCloskey said.

"The American people are seeing clearly that this has been the most corrupt administration in the history of the United States," McCloskey said, citing the criminal charges against former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans, and former White House domestic advisor John Ehrlichman.

"It's hard to see how all these crimes could have been conducted without the knowledge or participation of the President of the United States," he said.

McCloskey said the controversial White House tapes would probably not reveal any evidence incriminating Nixon in the Watergate affair or coverup since "the President knew the tapes were being made and presumably didn't say anything incriminating."

But McCloskey said there must be other matters that motivated Nixon to fire Archibald Cox as independent investigator. "The President seems not to want an independent special prosecutor, and that means even more we should have one," he said.

He said House Republicans favored former Atty. Gen. Elliott Richardson, his former assistant William Ruckelshaus or Cox himself as a new special prosecutor.

He listed the felonies as:

"Ordering" the White House plumbers to break into Dr. Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office in connection with the Pentagon Papers trial.

"Permitting" the U.S. Attorney to falsely tell the judge in the Ellsberg case there was no record of wiretapping.

Allowing White House Ehrlichman to approach the judge with an offer of a federal appointment while the Ellsberg trial was going on.

"Ordering" Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman to refuse to disclose activities of the White House special investigations unit to officials investigating the Nixon administration.

Public Reaction Varies To Nixon's Press Conference

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Many Americans commenting on President Nixon's news conference last night felt the President had "lost all credibility" with the public and "should be impeached."

Others, however, thought his "word is good" and that the reporters were "a little rude" in asking questions.

Some thought Nixon was "sick" and "unbalanced," but others thought he was "great" and that the reporters were approaching "treason" and trying to "jam it to him."

The replies were elicited from a random sampling by UPI reporters across the nation. No effort was made to utilize scientific polling techniques.

"I don't believe a word he says," declared Mrs. J. L. Brown, an Atlanta housewife. "If I were a member of the press I would have walked out and left him standing there alone."

Mrs. Claire Perry, of Rochester Mills, Pa., termed the news conference "quite humorous," and said it was "simply ridiculous" that the President "actually thinks all the American public is gullible enough to swallow his appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate him—Nixon."

"I think the President has lost all credibility with the public and the sooner he resigns the better," said G. Downs Jefferson, a paint company executive from Louisville.

"I think Mr. Nixon is a very sick man," said Benny Andreoni, a tool grinder from Columbus, Ohio. "He makes Spiro Agnew look like a lamb.

"I still think he should be impeached," said Walter Kinney, of Chicago. "I'm not saying he was lying, but he didn't say anything to change my mind that he's not fit to hold office."

However, George Charland, of Wilmington, Calif., said the President "did a great job, considering the pressure."

Mrs. Virginia Cessna, a Berea, Ohio, school teacher believes "the President needs all of our support" and that "reporters should use more courtesy and not so closely approach treason in what they are doing."

William Mitchell Jr., a paint company manager from Crofton, Md., said, "I believe him (about) Watergate. I also agree with him that the press is trying to stick him and jam it to him."

And Mrs. Charles Falk, of Chicago, said, "I think he (Nixon) has been right as President and I think his word is good."

But Michael Molloy, a telephone installer from Glen Burnie, Md., said, "I don't believe him" about Watergate, and declared, "There is something fishy" about the President's sudden decision "to open up and give the tapes."

"I think the incredible hostility he showed to the press was completely uncalled for and showed him as being slightly unbalanced," said Miles Kahler, of Cambridge, Mass.

ROLE

Washington considers of prime importance.

The State Department provided part of the evidence describing this gloomy autumn in President Nixon's "Year of Europe."

State Department sources said Skyhawks and Phantom jets, which the United States sent to Israel during the war, had to land on aircraft carriers or refuel in flight because Spain, Greece, Turkey and Italy forbade them to land on their territory or fly over it. The one expection was Portugal, the sources said.

There were reports that U.S. planes flew over West Germany en route to Israel and Israeli ships took on American weapons at the German port of Bremerhaven. But the Bonn government, in an official protest Thursday, complained and ordered it to stop.

"The West German government is firmly decided not to allow itself to be drawn into the Middle East conflict," a West German statement said.

concerned the American people—bring it to an expeditious end.

But Nixon's decision to name a new special Watergate prosecutor without approval by Congress; his refusal to confirm that the prosecutor could go to the courts for White House documents; and no guarantee he would not meet the same fate as Cox provoked new hostility among Democrats and failed to placate all but the most loyalist GOP members on Capitol Hill.

"The President proposed to appoint a special prosecutor just to be his own boy, subject to being fired," Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., said. He added Congress "will not buy" Nixon's offer.

Pair Pleads Innocent To Grand Theft

Two women, suspected of bilking dozens of West Coast residents of thousands of dollars, pleaded innocent to grand theft charges yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

Suspected of operating a lucrative "pigeon drop" scheme throughout California and possibly in Oregon are Clara Rost Serrano, 23, of Los Angeles, and Gwendolyn Annette Ivey, 32, who gave an Oakland address.

Both women are said to have swindled an elderly San Rafael woman of $2,400 at the Northgate Shopping Center Oct. 17.

In the classic pigeon drop made the pair reportedly pretended to have found an envelope containing gambling winnings and promised to split it with their 63-year-old victim.

The only catch — the victim was required to put up $2,400 in "good faith" money. When she did, the swindlers disappeared, taking the money with them, San Rafael police said.

Miss Serrano also is charged with attempting to swindle another San Rafael woman last January, a scheme which backfired.

The pair was arrested in San Francisco Oct. 19 when a scheme to bilk a woman of $3,500 fell through when the intended victim became suspicious.

Recreation Club Plan Due Study

A master plan for a private recreational club in Tennessee Valley will be considered by the Marin County Planning Commission at 9 a.m. Monday at Civic Center.

The proposed Bear Creek Club would be located on 13 acres of a 74-acre site in an area known as Oakwood Valley, one mile south on Tennessee Valley Road.

The master plan calls for 24 tennis courts, five squash courts, a swimming pool, clubhouse, day-care center and playground, badminton and volley ball areas.

The county planning staff has recommended the plan not be approved unless a lodge or motel to accommodate visitors to the Golden Gate National Recreation Area is included.

MIDEAST

in the Suez city area. It also chaged that Israeli forces planned a huge attack on Suez City at the southern end of the 102-mile Suez Canal.

There were no fresh reports from the trapped Egyptian Third Army in and around Suez City Saturday. Egypt, while continuing to blast alleged Israeli roadblocks of plasma, blood and other medical supplies, made no official mention of the force in communiques.

In the last days of the fighting war late last week, Israeli armor crossed the Suez and encircled the decimated Egyptian force.

Israel said there was minor skirmishing up and down the armistice lines during the night, but no serious battling. Both sides in effect agreed with President Nixon's assessment made last night that "the cease-fire is holding."

There was some disagreement with the other major Nixon pronouncement on the Middle East made at his news conference—that the chances were better now for peace in the Middle East than at any time in the past 20 years.

Western and Arab diplomats said in interviews in Beirut with UPI that both sides will have to make compromises of such magnitude that a real peace agreement may not be possible in the foreseeable future.

Israeli officials were more optimistic, claiming that the Soviet Union was pushing Egypt to the bargaining table, a move that would hasten a peace settlement because any loss of Russian backing would undercut the Russian position.

But Israel was keeping its bargaining cards close to the vest. Foreign Minister Abba Eban, in the first hint of Jerusalem's position, said Israel had had no intention of capturing—let along keeping— Egyptian territory west of the Suez canal.

He said capture of the west bank territory was "a consequence of war," and hinted Israel would offer to trade captured territory in Egypt proper for Egyptian concessions if and when peace talks with the Arabs begin.

With Beattie leading the way, the U.N. truce force flew from Cyprus to Egypt in British Royal Air Force transports, although Nixon had offered U.S. planes to the international force.

Looking hot in their dark green camouflage fatigues, they stepped into the sticky Cairo night, paraded smartly for newsmen and an Egyptian guard, shouldered their kitbags and headed for a brief sleep at an Egyptian army barracks.

From there they went straight to their cease-fire positions.

that we might not need."

Giacomini's proposal will be considered by the full board Tuesday at 9 a.m. when it discusses interim uses of the air base.

A spokesman for the federal General Services Administration, clearing house for excess federal property, said yesterday final disposition of the property may be years away.

Edward Saylor, director of real property disposal for the federal agency, questioned reports that the Air Force plans to release surplus properties to local agencies without going through normal disposal procedures.

"The Air Force has no authority to dispose of any property worth more than $1,000," Saylor said.

He said the House Armed Forces Committee must first declare the property surplus. Then, detailed studies and reports are made. The excess facilities are first offered to other federal agencies. What is left over is offered local agencies, either at full or partial value, depending on their use.

Asst. County Administrator Thomas F. Campanella said Saylor may be technically correct. But, in practice, once local agencies get their foot in the door through interim use of the facilities, the federal government won't force them out, he added.

Sexuality Class Hearing Planned

Tamalpais High School District trustees will hold a public hearing on a course of study for a proposed class in human sexuality at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Redwood High School faculty lounge.

The course was developed in a summer workshop and is proposed for use in district schools in the spring.

Supt. Robert D. Torrey will also give a report on Redwood High School athletic field improvements.

NIXON

dentiality for future chief executives, "We will not provide presidential documents to the special prosecutor."

He said White House laywers would meet Tuesday with Sirica to work out the transfer of the tapes Nixon agreed Tuesday to furnish in compliance with orders from Sirica and a higher court.

Nixon appeared tense throughout the press conference. He faced some of the toughest questions ever publicly asked a President. He acknowledged some people—New York network executives among them, he said—thought the alert of 2.3 million U.S. servicemen had been ordered to create a crisis and divert attention from impeachment.

He had been called "tyrant," he said, "dictator," and there were those saying "he has lost his senses, he should resign, he should be impeached."

But the same thing had happened, he said, when he ordered Haiphong harbor mined and Cambodia bombed, and he had proven his critics wrong.

As for his emotional state: "Well, those who saw me during the Middle East crisis thought I bore up rather well ...

"I have a quality which is—I guess I must have inherited it from my midwestern mother and father—which is that the tougher it gets, the cooler I get. Of course, it isn't pleasant to get criticism.

Some of it's justified, of course. It isn't pleasant to find your honesty questioned ... But as far as I'm concerned, I have learned to expect it, it has been my lot throughout my political life. And I suppose because I have been through so much, that may be one of the reasons that when I have to face an international crisis, I have what it takes."

Nixon said his own coolness under fire, his "very firm notes to Soviet Premier Leonid Brezhnev and the existence of a state of detente before the Mideast exploded into warfare were the big factors in preventing a big power clash.

He said he ordered the worldwide alert of nuclear strike forces and troops Thursday on the basis of "information the Soviet Union was planning to send a very substantial force into the Mideast" and then convinced the Soviets to abandon that plan and to back a peacekeeping force composed of troops from non-nuclear countries.

He also chided Europe for its lack of support in seeking a ceasefire. Europe and Japan "would have frozen" this winter if the war had led to a total oil cutoff.

He also defended his friend, banker Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo, who told Senate Watergate Committee investigators he held $100,000 in cash contributions from billionaire Howard R. Hughes for two years before returning it in 1970.

He said he knew nothing about the Hughes gift until Rebozo returned it. "I suppose it would sound incredible to many people who did not know how I operate," he said.

The experience showed that Rebozo "is a totally honest man," Nixon said.

Is Synanon Threat To General Plan?

Bolinas to Synanon. He later changed his mind and gave it to Nature Conservancy, deciding he wished the land preserved in its natural state, and Synanon "backed out graciously" according to Conservancy spokesmen.

Some planning commissioners have complained they can get no answer to questions on Synanon's plans for the future. The organization's members brush such questions aside, saying precise planning would be inconsistent with their philosophy.

"No one can ever understand that we grow organically," said Miss Green during a recent interview in the cafeteria at the Tomales Bay site. "A couple of years ago we had no intention of buying property in San Francisco, but the National Lead Company gave us a paint factory there," she said, citing that as the kind of fortuitous development that constitutes "growing organically."

Synanon members refurbished and painted the old Dutch Boy Paint building, whose assessed value was $1.2 million according to news reports. They built dormitories and bathing facilities and are turning it into a university, residents said.

Is a Synanon City of several thousand people, repeatedly mentioned during the 1960s, still being considered?

Miss Green answers with a flat, "No."

In view of the loose goals in an "organic" growth plan, some observers believe it is still a possibility. If the organization were to incorporate as a city, they note, Synanon could then pass its own zoning ordinances and be outside the controls of the county general plan.

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney, queried on incorporation rules, said state law sets 500 residents as the minimum population for a city, but any locality seeking incorporation must also win approval from the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission.

The commission may refuse incorporation for a wide variety of reasons, he said, noting that an area with 50,000 persons seeking to form a city in Sacramento County was recently turned down by that county's commission.

Synanon argues that its communal lifestyles, wherever located, are based on an economic utilization of resources growing ever scarcer in today's environment and so no threat to the environment.

"It requires much less expenditure of energy — human, mechanical, electronic and otherwise —for people to live, dine, work and play in community," Miss Green said.

"For example," she continued, "it is much more economical for us to serve breakfast in the dining room, and have toast prepared and served for perhaps a hundred people in one location, than it is for each of those persons to operate their own toaster and prepare their own breakfast each morning."

William C. Long, chairman of the county planning commission, is one who found no harm and possible benefit after a September tour of the Synanon ranches and of a different agricultural commune at Paradise Valley near Bolinas.

"My feeling is that anyone who can raise the agricultural value of the county should be encouraged," he said, "because if agriculture doesn't succeed, then where are we?"

Even if such communes house far more workers than conventional agriculture, "it is better than letting the land go into development," Long added.

In the long fight over adoption of the county general plan, growth controls were and still are one of the most hotly disputed points.

West Marin is set aside as an open area devoted largely to agriculture and recreation, with growth limited mostly to the existing villages. Many speakers argued for this zone, not only to preserve it in open space, but also because they believed the transportation and other services necessary for large numbers of people could be more economically provided by clustering development along the existing Highway 101 corridor.

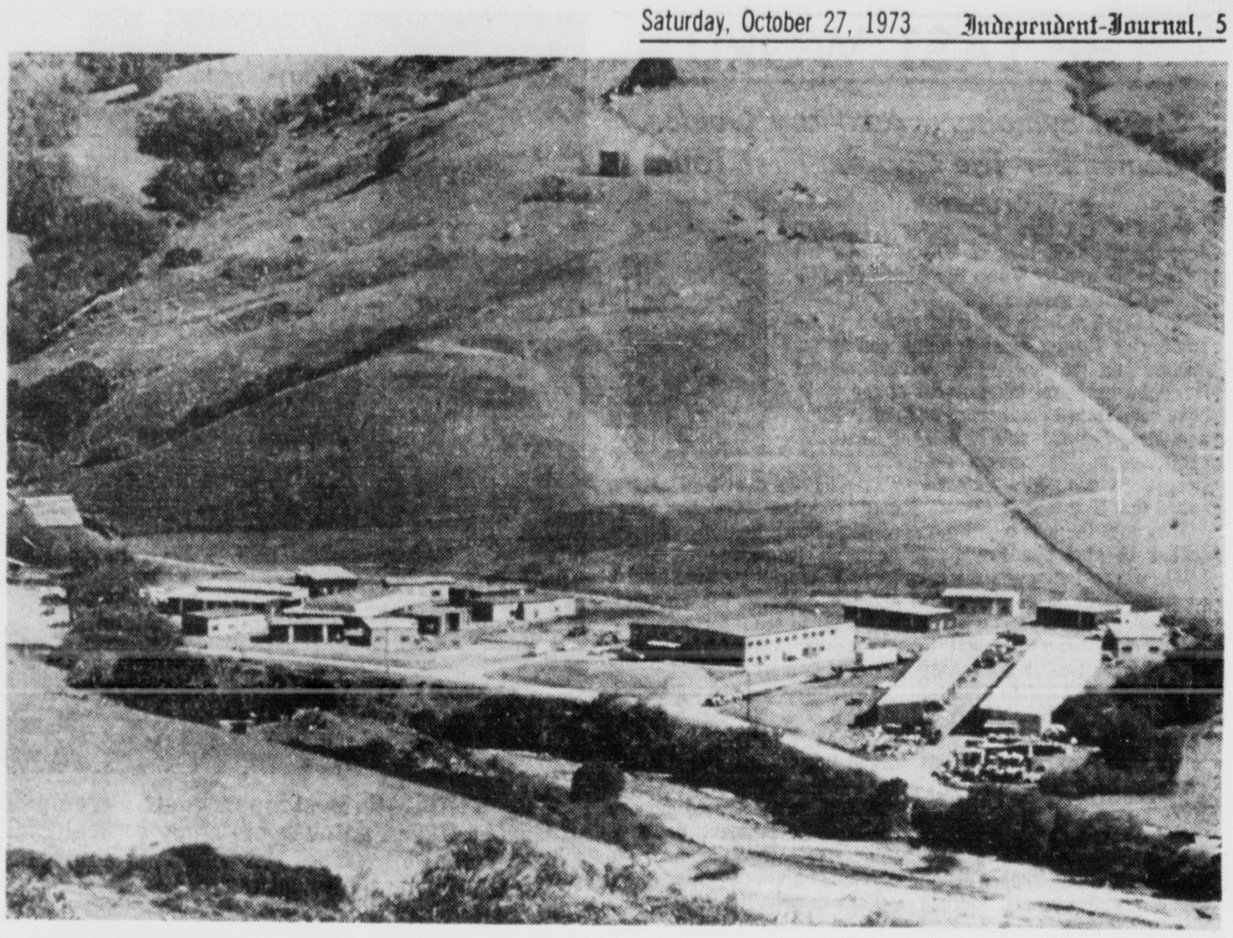

Synanon has met the services argument by building its own water and sewage facilities (in themselves regarded as growth controls), by providing buses to transport its own people, and by educating its children in its own schools.

Preservation of open space and the detriment of sheer numbers in a supposedly rural environment are still raised by critics who observe the thickly clustered dormitories and other buildings at Synanon properties.

Maloney has declared that nothing in state law prevents the county from setting reasonable limits on any agricultural operation. County planning director Werner von Gundell has proposed that a use permit be required for such operations providing more than 50 dwelling units or exceeding the number specified in zoning codes.

The issue, say Giacomini, Maloney and Von Gundell is not over Synanon alone but over whether any group can defy county growth controls by setting itself up as an agricultural enterprise.

As Synanon and county officials move along their collision course, it is apparent that much beside the interpretation of an obscure state code hangs in the balance.

NO CONTROLS? — This building cluster, one of two going up on Synanon's Walker Creek ranch, was approved by the planning department — but not the planning commission — because of light regulations on agricultural operations. Critics ask why more than 200 people are needed to run a ranch and fear Synanon could establish a series of villages in West Marin.

The Eagle rank will be given to Burton Bryan Gardner of Larkspur, Richard Sherman Taylor of Mill Valley and Jeffery T. Storey of Corte Madera.

Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Rex Gardner of 75 Cornell Avenue, is an eighth grader at Henry C. Hall School. He was active in Y Indian Guides two years before he started Cub Scouts and was a pinewood derby champion. He is his troop's senior patrol leader and a member of the Order of the Arrow.

He is active in the school chorus and band and has attained the rank of sharpshooter in the Junior National Rifle Association. Gardner is an Independent-Journal newspaperboy.

For his Eagle scout project, Gardner engraved and marked all troop equipment with a crime alert number and patrol number.

Taylor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Taylor of 80 Lee Street, and a ninth grader at Mount Tamalpais School for Boys in Ross. He now has 27 merit badges, three short of his first Bronze Palm.

Taylor's Eagle project was organizing and maintaining patrol equipment and setting up a master packing list, equipment purchasing directory and a check-out system.

Then his third year in scouting and he has been patrol and senior patrol leader. He is now an instructor.

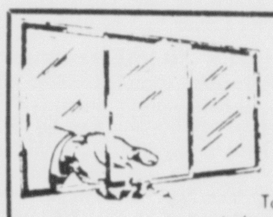

Taylor is on the staff of the school yearbook, newspaper and magazine. His interests include photography, back-packing, archery, geology and mineralogy.

Storey has been a scout for five years, and is now a member of Troop 88 Leadership Corps. He is a member of the Order of the Arrow and has earned the Duty To God Award, a church-scouting award.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Storey, he is a sophomore at Redwood High School. His interests include back-packing, camping, cycling and canoeing.

He repaired and renewed the hymn books for the Greenbrae ward of the Latterday Saints for his Eagle project.

All three scouts attended the National Eagle Scout Jamboree in Idaho last summer.

Marin Symphony Auxiliary Guides Remember The Chaotic First Tour

By JOAN LISETOR

Chaos is the only way Betty Klink can describe the first tour of Marin County led three years ago by Marin Symphony Auxiliary Tour Marin guides.

Next week will be the final session of the auxiliary's third annual training course for guides, and the new guides have benefited from the early mistakes. Most of the kinks have been ironed out, according to Miss Klink and Mrs. Edward Zeller, both of Kentfield chairmen of the current session. Good naturedly they recalled that first tour.

They met the tour bus, which seated 45, at a San Francisco hotel, where the tourists were waiting — all 75 of them, including one woman with a baby. They hand't thought to take reservations or the money in advance. But it didn't matter much how many people were on the bus because there was no microphone, so no one was going to hear the guides anyway.

If the tour began on a chaotic note, the ending was a near disaster. The bus stopped at the Tiburon Vintners, and tourists were given time to sample wine and visit the shops in Tiburon. At the appointed departure time no one was in sight, and the guides had to form a search party through Tiburon, rounding up the people for the trip back to the city.

THE PEOPLE loved it, Miss Klink said, and the guides learned to have people pay in advance and eliminated shopping from the agenda. Fort Baker and sometimes Old St. Hilary's Church in Tiburon have been added, but mostly tours are arranged to suit the group's size and interests.

Miss Klink recalled incidents that caused them to individualize the tours. On one tour her raves over the magnolia trees at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross fell on deaf ears. Finally a woman confided in her, "You know, we're from Louisiana and have a lot of magnolia trees . . ."

A contrast was a group who raved over what was growing, when about the only thing in bloom was pampas grass, Miss Klink said, and she was apologizing for the dearth of nature until someone told her they were from Boston, where "nothing blooms."

Most tourists have heard about the Marin Civic Center and want to see it for a variety of reasons, ranging from architectural to morbid.

Then there was the wide-eyed woman who, as the bus approached Puerto Suello Hill, asked Betty Klink, "Is this the Sierra Nevada?"

WHEN IT COMES to money, can the government do anything right? It takes away too much and gives too little.

For example, the Fairfax-San Anselmo Children's Center was offered some of that education money "found" by the state last spring. The money was to expand the center's program to include 10 to 12 more children.

The center's home, a classroom at Yolandsdale School in San Anselmo, is not large enough for more children, and the state money was not enough to afford a larger place, according to Ethel Seiderman of San Anselmo, director of the center.

Her solution is a day care center for infants, and she has just found a home the infant center can afford at the First Methodist Church in San Rafael. Cribs and other baby equipment are still needed. The babies will range in age from 6 weeks to one year.

The state requires a child-to-staff ratio of four to one, for children under 1 year. If a child is absent funds are withheld, but the teacher has to be there and paid regardless.

Mrs. Seiderman thinks it is a ridiculous way to fund, but is determined to provide a creative program, at $1.05 per hour per child.

DR. THOMAS Boslooper and Marcia Hayes go over his study of women for "The Femininity Game" which they wrote based on his research. Women are programmed to lose and denied the healthy need to be active in competitive sports as a part of the femininity game, Dr. Boslooper concluded.

Childhood Competition Is Seen As Key To Adult Communication

Marin Women

By BARBARA HOSMER

Men and women would relate to each other much more positively if they learned to compete in playing games and sports as youngsters, concludes Dr. Thomas Boslooper after several years' study of women's problems.

Author of a new book, "The Femininity Game" (Stein and Day), he interviewed some 400 women of all ages across the country, and has found that society's restraints on physical activity and sports for girls and women has kept them "the weaker sex" in more ways than one.

Men, he said, are urged from boyhood to compete in sports as a training for later life, when they will need a developed sense of individuality and strength, will to succeed and ability to compete.

WOMEN, ON the other hand, have from the 1920s been discouraged from developing such traits through physical activity, sports and games, he said in an interview in San Rafael Thursday afternoon.

Instead, they are expected to play "the femininity game," under whose rules if you win in competition, you lose as a woman.

"Men are taught that they are superior and that women are inferior." Either feels threatened when a woman beats a man at sports or overcomes him in any other competition, he said.

"I feel we should get rid of the idea of a superior sex. We need two strong sexes," said the clergyman and doctor of philosophy.

"Men have not learned as boys to lose to girls, so they can't as adults either," he said.

For women to be able to develop the traits of strength normally taught to boys, they must be free to participate in sports and physical activity without social restraint, Dr. Boslooper stated. He would encourage girls and women to go into physical sports and games at all ages for reasons of health, as well.

"I am not recommending that women get into men's professional sports as they are now" because violence has entered them in a destructive way, he said. Rather, he believes that women should take on more sports competition and men slack off a little from the super violent competitions for a more healthful balance to both sexes.

Dr. Boslooper, who is a Protestant clergyman in Closter, N.J., and teacher at Notre Dame Academy, a New York girls' high school, said that he has been researching the problems of women for many years through both his professions, and for his study, begun in 1957, he talked to both women with problems and healthy women.

From his research, he found that the physical activity and sports competition need emerged strongly.

"HEALTHY WOMEN express themselves physically and like competition and aggressiveness." In interviewing them and successful women athletes, he found that they usually had an encouraging man who promoted this in them.

Most of the top women athletes "have had a strong father behind them" and they developed their sports prowess "despite physical education programs in schools," he found.

"They used what they learned physically and could compete as adults," he said, adding that successful career women also often said that they had been active in sports.

Regarding current moves by some girls to enter Little League baseball, he said, "Girls should play at that age. Many parents think that developing strength in girls is unnatural, but remember, these rules (against girls competing) became law in 1920, and before that it all was much more open" for women to enjoy sports and games.

"It was then that physical education came into the hands of educators who took psychology rather than sciences, and it was then that Freudian psychology was rampant," embodying the notion that women were inferior, he explained.

"Also, the laws may have come about to keep women out of sports because they had just gotten the vote. I can't prove it, but I think so," he said.

THE SOCIAL qualities of strength, competitiveness and aggressiveness nurtured in boys to create healthy men have a physical basis, and denying such physical activity to women as "unfeminine" has kept women weaker, he said.

Of course, in the past women's strength and endurance have been economic assets to men as a source of cheap labor in industry and unpaid labor at home, Dr. Boslooper said. Yet women who use thier strength in competitive phusical recreation or in other games meet with male opposition, and some women are programmed to join in the opposition, he said.

As he traces the femininity game in the book, he says that women don't know how to succeed, to win — even fear it — because they have been programmed not to try, to lose instead.

And, he states in the book, the femininity game is like most games, a model for real life.

It is harmful to women, Dr. Boslooper said. "For health women should be free to be active, and this is physical. Many women who have been physically active keep on because they enjoy it but believe they are being unfeminine." This has a damaging effect on the psychology as well as the body for women, he said.

California Designers End Week Of Spring Previews

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California's trend-setting designers, wrapping up a week of spring 1974 previews, have focused their finale on accessories, new faces in the industry and advice from television's fashionable Mary Tyler Moore.

Miss Moore, who portrays a just-over-30 woman TV executive, in her series met with some 85 of the nation's fashion writers Thursday to discuss fashion needs of women her age.

Smartly dressed in a beige pants suit with print blouse, Miss Moore said she aids costume director Leslie Hall in choosing clothes for Mary Richards, the character she portrays.

LIKE MANY fashion watchers today, Miss Moore favors simplicity. Pants suits, two-piece dresses and jacket-and-dress ensembles are her frequent attire on the CBS show. Her designer is Norman Todd, and she confides that some of the outfits are so smashing, she keeps them for herself.

"We don't select clothes based on Mary's age," she said. "We think of classic lines and durability. A person like Mary Richards would keep her clothes from year to year, and I'm wearing things on this year's show that I wore the first year we were on the air." The show is in its fourth season.

The California Fashion Creators, who had stressed classic looks during the week's showings, allowed a touch of the funky in their final new faces preview, highlighting clothes for the junior-size figure.

In small sizes, designers like Strawberry Plant, Ms. Arpeja, Malibu Media and West Set looked backward to the 1940s and 50s. They included in their collections wrap dresses, fitted princess line jackets, floral chintz and even peplums.

However, most of the firms varied these hard-to-wear styles with the easy looks of the 70s — denim jeans and jackets, floor-length skirts and a few lacy evening dresses.

One firm, Ignatz, provided a compromise between past and present — a battle jacket and jeans suit in old fashioned flowered satin.

ACCESSORIES IN California have come to mean everything from jewelry to R-shirts. A design house calling itself For the Birds drew giggles with tiny T-shirts decorated with pop art pictures such as tap dancers across the bosom.

Cathy Accessories offered cut jackets, halters and shawls. And Knapp Sacs showed perky hats with matching purses.

Alex Hats, predicting a big comeback for the hat, did a collection of straws with green and white polka dot ribbon trim, as well as a set of pill boxes with nose-length veils.

In shoes, the news was a slimmer line from Shoes 'n Stuff, but the clunky heel still hangs on. Jewelry shown was mostly large — Sascha Brastoff's sculptured pieces and Jack Levin's impressive collection of Mexican pre-hispanic stones set in necklaces, earrings and belts.

The most unusual group of necklaces were designed by Jehri reproducing an Indian style so smooth it resembles a multi-colored snake.

AMONG THE interesting accessories shown at the annual press week of the California Fashion Creators in Los Angeles this week was this rayon and cotton shawl. By California Things, it is copper colored with a six inch fringe with cut-off floral design and open work. (UPI Telephoto)

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Loneliness Probably Associated With Those Very Difficult Years

DEAR RAP:

Everyone seems to be sending in a life story, so I thought for once I wouldn't be different. Here's mine:

WHAT IS ALONE?

Alone is when your best friend is suddenly very popular and you aren't.

Alone is when you have a birthday party and everyone decides they can't come.

Alone is when the other girls' new clothes are their new clothes, and your new clothes are your sister's old ones.

Alone is when the whole class is having a party and you're the only one not invited.

Alone is when you go to the beach and you see a lot of cute girls who look like brown hourglasses, and you look like a peeled white potato.

Alone is when you really study hard and get an "A" on your term paper and the kids call you a smack.

Alone is when you've been friends with everyone and now there's no one left. — S.B.

DEAR S.:

And not alone is tomorrow when the right person smiles, and you get an invitation you didn't expect, and someone says, "Hey, you look really fantastic today," and your mother figures a girl who pulls "As" needs clothes that aren't hand-me-downs ... What we mean is, for every "down" there's an "up." And the "ups" are more frequent when you graduate from junior high school. (You didn't say, but our educated guess is that you're in those super-difficult years between seventh and ninth grades.) — HELEN AND SUE

RAP:

Yes, men's hair is getting shorter, but there are still guys who like it long. I'm with "Tina" who wonders about discrimination when her fiance must face employers who say, "Come back when you've got a haircut."

A friend of mine was looking for a job at a burger place. The manager said, "Sorry, because of health reasons you can't have long hair." Just then a long-haired female employee walked by. Then the manager mentioned "public relations" but, as he said it, a group of longhairs came in to order food...

Employers are required to hire blacks and women (if they qualify) in spite of any personal prejudices. Seems to me that by barring long-haired men from work, they're catering to the fears of themselves and some of their customers, rather than to the rights of everyone in this country. — ANOTHER TINA

P.S. Would you cut your long hair, Sue, just so you could get a job?

TINA:

No. I'd look for an employer who wasn't so uptight about rules. Or, if there were a real reason (safety or health measures) I'd cover my hair — which Tina's boyfriend might have done if he wasn't trying to prove something about "all bosses." — SUE

DEAR TINA:

Aren't you beating a dead horse? First, men's long hair is on the way out, and second, most employers don't make rigid hair and dress rules anymore. Their main requirements are neatness and cleanliness, in styles that don't threaten the efficiency of the employee or his co-workers. — HELEN

P.S. Right, bosses?

'Swirl Skirt' Latest In Fashions

By EUNICE FARMER
Register and Tribune Syndicate

One of the newest novelty skirts is the "swirl skirt," seen everywhere in Europe and the resort cities. It's a novelty, and a great idea for yourselves or almost anyone on your Christmas list.

Best of all, it's a take-off of the famous "patch skirt" — you can mix and match your fabrics for each section, using many of the leftover scraps you have saved for years. The effect is great when you throw caution to the wind and combine just about anything.

One popular pattern company has come to the rescue just in time with a perfect pattern (McCall 3926) for this skirt. Look for it at your local pattern counter.

Try it — you'll love it and so will your friends. To me, part of the fun of sewing is being frivolous once in awhile and making something just for kicks.

DEAR EUNICE,

Thought you would like to know that with your enthusiasm and encouragement, my husband permitted me to purchase that expensive "ultra suede," and with fear and trepidation, I mustered my courage and made a gorgeous dress. I would like to tell others not to be afraid of it, since you can do almost anything with it that you can do with any other fabric. I even ripped seams and restitched them. Best of all, I threw my dress in the washer and dryer and the results were fantastic — it came out soft and like new. From this point on, you can do no wrong in my eyes. — MRS. P.S.

DEAR MRS. P.S.

You have just made my day. Yes, it is luxurious and very expensive, but as I've told you before, if you can't afford an entire garment of it, purchase enough for a skirt, vest, purse, trim for a suit, or whatever. But if possible, allow yourself the fun of working with this wonder of wonders.

Now that we have experimented with it more and more, there are a few more suggestions and tips I would like to pass on to you. First, pressing is virtually unnecessary since we depend on the top stitching to keep all seams flat. Remember, it resembles the real suede leather, so use leather techniques and details.

Trim your seam allowances to one-fourth inch; lap them instead of the usual method of seaming, and top stitch them. The first row of stitching should be as close to the cut edge of the garment as possible.

Collars, cuffs, and plackets don't need to be turned as we usually do. Instead, keep the cut edges on the outside. They are so much smoother that way and you can't see that this is the method you used unless you examine the garment closely.

Yes, you can rip out and restitch or re-fit seams provided your stitch length wasn't too short. I suggest about 10-12 stitches per inch.

One word of caution about garments with "ease." It is virtually impossible to ease ultra suede, just as it would be with real leather. Raglan sleeves are easiest but you can use a set-in sleeve if you are careful.

Keep sleeve and garment open at the underarm until the sleeve has been set it, then close the underarm seam in one stitching.

If you really are an accomplished seamstress, try a jacket for your husband — they cost from $150-$250 if purchased.

Three Experts In Food Field Explore Today's Eating Habits

By PAT BALMES

"Food Fads and Facts" was the topic examined by three food experts at Tamalpais High School Thursday. The panel discussion was the first in a public monthly series of consumer education programs directed by the school's homemaking and consumer education department chairman Dr. Marcelett Henry.

Panelists were Marin County Health Department nutritionist Frances Dahl; home economist and former high school and college instructor Marty Hill, and Stephanie Gray, consumer affairs officer for the Food and Drug Administration.

Mrs. Dahl opened the discussion by pointing out advantages and disadvantages of a vegetarian diet.

"From a conservation point of view it is wasteful to fatten animals to feed people. To make one pound of beef, it takes 21 pounds of plant protein in feed.

"SHOULD THE world's population explosion continue, we may have to stop raising cattle and rely on plant protein," the nutritionist said.

Some people do not want to kill to eat, she remarked.

"Nothing has been established that a vegetarian diet is healthier," she said acknowledging that Seven-Day Adventists, who are vegetarians, have a low rate of heart disease, "but they also do not smoke or drink coffee."

A vegetarian diet is cheaper, she said. Plant proteins are good proteins.

There are two kinds of vegetarians, those who include eggs, milk and cheese in their diets and strict vegetarians who do not.

The body, which is 20 per cent protein, needs protein to build cells, make hormones and fight bacteria. The body cannot make protein unless the eight essential amino acids are present, said Mrs. Dahl.

Complete protein comes from animal. Plant protein is incomplete because it lacks some essential amino acids, said Mrs. Dahl, who used gelatin as an example of a pure protein which could not support life because one or more essential amino acids are missing.

Strict vegetarians have learned to combine at the same meal foods from three plant-protein rich groups — legumes, grains and seeds and nuts. The native Mexican diet combines beans with corn tortilla. The native Chinese meals combine rice with soy beans, she said.

HER CONCERN is that strict vegetarians get enough iron. Breads labeled "enriched" are high in iron. California state law requires that all breads and pastas be enriched, she said, adding that women have a high iron demand.

Mrs. Dahl said the only thing lacking in a strict vegetarian diet is vitamin B12 which does not come in plant proteins. Lack of it causes macrocytic anemia.

In the second talk about organic foods, home economist Marty Hill said that no single food should be termed organic, health or natural.

"People claim that organically grown foods are superior because they are grown without fertilizers. A plant grows on inorganic substances; it does not know whether the fertilizer comes from the cow shed or the chemical plant," she said.

There is no difference evident in the laboratory between, for instance, apples or carrots grown with either type of fertilizer. There is no difference between eggs at the grocery and eggs at the health food store where chickens have been allowed to scratch the earth, Mrs. Dahl interjected.

"A LOT OF people are making a lot of money on health foods. The consumer pays from 30 to 100 times more than for regular food. By 1980 people in the health food business will be making close to three billion dollars," Mrs. Hill said.

Experts are not sure about additives, but without the preservatives consumers would face chaos. They would have to buy in hunks and shop every day. Foods would be less wholesome.

"A lot of additives which are lacking from our daily diet are put into foods. Perhaps that is why we are so healthy," said the home economist.

People are probably in greater danger from unknown bacteria in food than from additives that are added in known amounts, tested and controlled, Mrs. Hill said.

The Food and Drug Administration consumer affairs officer spoke about vitamin and mineral regulation.

In the early 1930s 100 people died from a patent medicine. Public outcry pushed through the 1938 Federal Drug and Cosmetic Act which forces drug and cosmetic manufacturers to prove their product is safe, that it is not adulterated with foreign material or bacteria, and that it does what they say it will do on the label.

"DIFFERENT AMOUNTS do different things. Some things are lethal in large amounts but small amounts are necessary for life," she said.

This principle applies to nutrients. If a food contains from one half to one and one half times the minimum daily requirement, it is subject to more stringent regulations than food of lower content. Higher content than one and one half times the MDR must be labeled as drugs which list dosage, what it does for you and what you should be careful about, Mrs. Gray said.

An exception is vitamins A and D which can build up to toxic levels. Large doses are prescription items so that people will realize they are taking large dosages.

"From a nutritional angle, eating is a whole lot better than popping pills," Mrs. Gray said.

IN WORLD OF RELIGION

Women Remain Inferior Citizens

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Women, as that cigarette ad keeps telling them, have "come a long way" toward sexual equality in business, the professions and politics.

But not in religion.

In a large majority of churches and synagogues, women continue to be in fact — and, even more galling to many, on principle—second-class citizens.

Their inferior status was officially confirmed earlier this month by the General Convention of the Episcopal Church—a denomination that has been relatively progressive on other social issues, such as empowerment of blacks and other racial minorities.

The Episcopal convention, meeting at Louisville, Ky., rejected Oct. 4 a proposal to permit ordination of women to the ministry. Only men are now eligible to serve as Episcopalian clergy.

OPPOSITION TO ordination of women was led by Bishop C. Kilmer Myers of San Francisco, who contended that "a priest is a 'God-symbol'" and women are not suited for the role because in the Bible "God is represented in male imagery."

Bishop J. Brooke Moseley, president of Union Theological Seminary in New York, called Myers' argument "perfect nonsense."

The fact that Jesus Christ—whom Christians regard as the fullest human expression of God's nature—was male "does not limit the ordained Christian ministry to men any more than Jesus' whiteness limits it to whites," Moseley said.

A SIMILAR theological argument is under way in the Roman Catholic Church—but the prospect of women priests seems even more remote in that body than in the Episcopal Church. Father Hans Kung, a leading spokesman for the Catholic reform movement, argues that "full participation of women is essential to a suitably renewed church today."

"This means not only including women in decision-making bodies but also the admission of women to all the church's special ministries and to ordination," Kung said.

But Pope Paul VI, who has the last word, emphatically disagrees. In a decree last year, he said women may be permitted to read the Bible at Mass and perform some services at the altar—provided a male priest wishes to let them do so. But they cannot claim a "right" to such offices, because "in accordance with the venerable tradition of the Church, installation in the ministries of lector and acolyte is reserved to men."

SO LONG as this view prevails in the papacy, women are barred from even the smallest formal role in Catholic ministry —let alone the priesthood.

"Women are the niggers of the Church," is the bitter comment of Sister Albertus Magnus McGrath, a nun who has written widely about the role of women in contempoary Catholicism.

Although she abhors the racist epithet "nigger," Sister McGrath feels it accurately conveys the fact that women, like blacks, have been stereotyped as "inferior in intelligence, intuitive rather than rational, emotional, childishly irresponsible, tricky and treacherous."

As a result, she says, women are relegated to serving the church in kitchen and classroom.

SEVEN MAJOR Protestant denominations in the United States do admit women to their ministries. They are the United Presbyterian Church, the United Methodist Church, the United Church of Christ, the American Lutheran Church, the Christian Church (Disciples), the Lutheran Church in America, and the American Baptist Convention. In 1971, American Baptists chose a woman as their president and United Presbyterians elected a woman moderator.

Even in these denominations, however, women have had to fight uphill battles for more-than-token representation on governing councils. It is commonplace throughout mainline Protestanism that "women raise the money" (through bazaars, bake sales, etc) and "men decide how it's spent."

Evangelical Protestants, who regard the words of the Bible as an infallible guide to God's will, are strongly influenced by several remarks of the Apostle Paul, whom many women regard as one of history's worst male chauvinists.

AMONG OTHER things, Paul laid down the rules that women should "keep silence in the churches," taking no part in leadership or public worship.

He also stated categorically that "women are created for man's sake" and said a wife should meekly bow to her husband's authority.

But many Protestant women look beyond these words of Paul to the example of Jesus Christ, who accorded women dignity in an age when society treated them as mere chattels. Perhaps the most striking instance of Jesus' advocacy of women's liberation was the fact, recorded in the gospels, that women were the first witnesses of His resurrection. This was a clearly-implied rebuke to the Jewish law of his time, which held that women could not be witnesses at a trial and were not capable of giving valid testimony.

BRITISH AUTHOR Dorothy Sayers, better known as a mystery writer but also distinguished theologian, once observed that women played a very large part in the life of Christ, being "first at the Cradle and last at the Cross."

Neither before nor since has there been a man who treated women as Jesus did, said Mrs. Sayers. Jesus "never nagged at them, never flattered or coaxed or patronized." He rebuked women without condescension, "took their questions and arguments seriously," and "never mapped out their sphere for them or jeered at them for being female." Although he was sharply critical of male vanity and hypocrisy, not one of his parables or sayings is aimed at "female perversity."

The Reform branch of Judaism ordained its first woman rabbi two years ago, and at least 30 women are currently serving as presidents of reform congregations (compared to 680 men).

CONSERVATIVE JUDAISM made a bow toward women's liberation this year by announcing that women henceforth could be counted in determining whether a "minyan" —the minimum quorum of ten persons required for a Jewish prayer service—is present. Previously only men could be counted.

Orthodox Judaism still ignores females in counting a minyan. It also stands firm on ancient Jewish customs forbidding women to mingle with men in the synagogue or play any role (such as reading the Torah) in public worship. An Orthodox Jewish man is traditionally enjoined to praise God each morning for not having created him a woman.

The women's liberation movement of recent years has engendered, as one might expect, vehemently opposing responses from church folk.

PERHAPS THE most stringently negative reaction came this month from N. Eldon Tanner, First Counselor of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. At a conference in Salt Lake City, this high Mormon leader declared that women's liberation is the work of the devil.

"Satan and his cohorts are using scientific arguments and nefarious propaganda to lure women away from their primary responsibilities as wives, mothers and homemakers," he said.

A quite different view was expressed by Dr. Cynthia C. Wedel, first woman president of the National Council of Churches, in a sermon preached Aug. 27 from the pulpit of Washington Cathedral.

SHE ACKNOWLEDGED that many women are content to let the church remain a "bastion of male supremacy" because they don't want the responsibility of making decisions.

But any woman who willingly accepts a subordinate role because it's easy, she said, is turning her back on God's most precious gift to human beings—the gift of freedom.

In His "infinite patience," God has tolerated for centuries social systems which deprived not only women but many other groups of their right to freedom, she said. "But it looks as though He has now decided that the time has come to bring liberation into the world."

"At last we may begin to realize what God meant when He created us free. We no longer need to yield to the tyranny of those who want to make our decisions for us—no matter how benevolent they are. Each of us—black, brown or white, rich or poor, young or old, male or female—is God's beloved, made in the image of our Creator, to live joyously and triumphantly with our loved and respected sisters and brothers."

FEMALE RABBI— Women have come a long way toward sexual equality in many fields — but not in religion. Rabbi Sally J. Priesand, who recently became the world's first woman rabbi, blessed wine in a cup during model Seder in New York City.

Missionary To Speak Tomorrow

S. Malek will speak in the Southern Marin Assembly of God Church in the morning worship service at 11 a.m. tomorrow. Malek and his family are Assemblies of God missionaries, soon leaving to pioneer the Full Gospel witness in the North African countries.

Malek was born and raised in Egypt and Arabic is his mother tongue. He also speaks English and French fluently. Both him and his wife, Jeri Sue have served for three years as teachers at the Assembly of God Continental Bible College in Brussels, Belgium.

Before joining the full-time ministry, Malek practiced as a pharmacist for 10 years.

Gas, Gospel Go Together

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — "If gas will get you to heaven, then I'm going to get there," said Dr. James L. Robertson, minister of Arlington Temple.

Robertson's church may be unique, for while he administers to spiritual needs upstairs, his flock's cars are being gassed up down below at an Exxon station that's part of the church building.

"If they pump as much down there as I do up here, we'll gradually fill 'em up," the United Methodist minister said.

The temple's arrangement with Exxon is profitable to both. The church gets 2 cents for each gallon sold. The revenue makes up about a third of the church's annual budget, which was $105,000 this year.

The church owns the property and the gas station facilities are leased by Exxon. The bright "Exxon" signs flank the smaller, simple one saying "Arlington Temple."

The unlikely alliance is directly across the Potomac River from Washington, D.C., just off Key Bridge.

"The bishop appointed me to organize and build a church here, because in the midst of a resident population of 25,000 and a working population of another 30,000, there was no church," said the 61-year-old Dr. Robertson.

The land was given to the church in 1971. Dr. Robertson asked Exxon whether it would be interested in a working agreement. Exxon was, and that's how it began.

Arlington Temple was perhaps the only church in the country that could have been directly hurt by the gas shortage. But Dr. Robertson said business never fell off - either downstairs at the pumps or upstairs in the pews.

Bible Is Israeli Troop Handbook

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Israel is the only nation on earth whose army can use the Bible as a handbook in troop orientation.

"Orientation" is a military euphemism for pep talks designed to build and maintain soldiers' morale.

Since much of the Old Testament is devoted to the history of wars which Israel fought long ago in its never-ending struggle for survival against hostile neighbors, there are numerous passages of Scripture which are readily applicable to the contemporary situation.

When the great King David returned victorious from battle, the Book of Chronicles reports, the people greeted him with the cry:

"God is your ally!"

At a time when Israel was gravely menaced by the mighty Babylonian empire, the prophet Isaiah proclaimed:

"I am confident and unafraid;
"For the Lord is my refuge and defense
"And has shown Himself to be my deliverer."

Isaiah assured the Israelites of his time that "The Lord of Hosts, like a bird hovering over its young, will be a shield over Jerusalem."

And he warned Israel's attackers:

"When you cease to destroy, you will be destroyed."

The most eloquent affirmations of God's protective concern for Israel are found in the compendium of ancient Hebrew poetry known as the Psalms. Thus the 46th Psalm declares:

"The Lord will not abandon his people, nor forsake his chosen nation."

Of course, there have been many dark hours in Israel's long history when it seemed that the Lord had turned His back on His "chosen nation." Then Hebrew poets and prophets would storm heaven with prayers:

"Bestir Thyself, Lord. Why dost Thou sleep? ... We sink down to the dust. Arise, come to our help!"

But the dominant tone of the Psalms is trust. Over and over, the poets recall times past when things looked bleak for Israel, but God came to its rescue.

"If the Lord had not been on our side when they assailed us, they would have swallowed us alive."

That the Psalms actually do serve to uphold morale in the Israeli Army was made clear recently to an American Christian who sent a message of concern to an old friend who now is an Israeli general. The general sent this brief reply:

"We are not afraid. Psalm 121:4."

Psalm 121:4 says:

"Behold, He who keeps Israel will neither slumber nor sleep."

DR. JOHN BRIGHT
Old Testament scholar

Dr. Bright Is Deere Lecturer

The third annual Derward W. Deere Lectures are to be held at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary Tuesday through Friday.

Dr. John Bright, Cyrus H. McCormick professor of Hebrew and the interpretation of the Old Testament at Union Theological Seminary in Virginia, will be the guest lecturer.

The lecture series was founded in honor of the late Dr. Derward W. Deere, who served for 18 years as professor of Old Testament at Golden Gate Seminary. The public sessions will begin at 9:50 a.m. in the John A. Broadus Hall Chapel on the campus at Strawberry.

"Dr. Bright's topic, 'Covenant and Promise in Ancient Israel,' should be of interest to many Bay Area residents now that world attention is again focused on Israel and the Middle East," according to Dr. Wayne Peterson, associate professor of Old Testament interpretation at the seminary.

"Bright is widely known as an interpreter of the Old Testament who is carrying on the type of Biblical scholarship initiated by the famous archaeologist and Biblical scholar, William F. Albright," Peterson said.

The guest lecturer has written and contributed to a number of works in addition to his text. His books include "The Authority of the Old Testament," "Early Israel in Recent History Writing," and "The Kingdom of God." He wrote the commentary on "Jeremiah" for "The Anchor Bible" and contributed to the "Interpreter's Bible" "Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible" and "Peake's Commentary on the Bible."

Dr. Hancock In New Duties At Seminary

Dr. Charles E. Hancock, instructor in pastoral care, has assumed duties as associate director of professional training for Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary at Strawberry.

He will be under the supervision of the academic dean and will work with Dr. Paul W. Turner, professor of ministry and director of professional training, and Dr. J. Lyn Elder, professor of pastoral care.

Hancock will direct the first two years of supervised ministry, direct the current student placement program and counsel students in their professional and personal concerns.

He will also continue to supervise students in their clinical experiences and teach some classes in the area of pastoral care. Dr. Elder will serve as consultant for the development of these courses.

Hancock has been with the Seminary since 1967. He was awarded the D.Min. degree in commencement exercises Oct. 4.

He holds the bachelor of arts degree from Howard Payne College, Brownwood, Tex. and the bachelor of divinity and master of theology degrees from Golden Gate Seminary.

Witnesses Delegation Attends Circuit Affair

A delegation of Jehovah's Witnesses from San Rafael returned home Sunday evening from a two-day semiannual circuit assembly at the Oakland Auditorium.

The theme of the convention was "Keep Close in Mind Jehovah's Day". By means of talks, discussions and model demonstrations, the delegates were instructed on numerous ways to be more effective in their ministry. Emphasis was placed on the prophetic significance of the times and the need to apply oneself fully to his ministry was carried throughout the seminars to underscore the convention theme.

The highlight was when district overseer Harold K. Jackson, spoke to a crowd of over 3,500 on the subject "Act Wisely as the End Draws Near". Jackson said: "Look where you will, consider any of the systems that combine to form the present order, and you see signs of grave trouble. Political systems, religious systems, social systems — the list of those in crisis is almost endless.

"THOU SHALT LOVE THY NEIGHBOUR AS THYSELF."
Matthew 22:39
Read that again. Jesus didn't stop with "neighbour." did he? He was saying to understand yourself as the lovable, perfect idea of God, made in His likeness. And then to see your neighbor in the same way.
Better understanding of Jesus' teachings leads naturally to purer, better ways of loving yourself, and those around you.

Comeback For Boxing

By RON LENT

Boxing, an embattled sport which has been relatively dormant in Marin and southern Sonoma county for the last 40 years, is attempting to come back locally.

On Sept. 13, some 3,000 onlookers witnessed a state middleweight championship contest between king George Cooper and challenger David Love at Sonoma State College. The champ retained his title in Rohnert Park with a seventh-round knockout.

But more important than that is the aftermath. Promoter Ted Clark has said he would be interested in assembling more cards in Rohnert Park and Santa Rosa — thus giving needed oxygen to a sport locally where it is gasping for survival.

Last Friday night, the San Rafael Jaycees presented the first Redwood Empire Amateur Boxing Show, marking the initial Marin non-high school fight card in about 40 years, and drew 350 fans. Novato High School stages Fight Night programs annually.

There were times when boxing flourished here, such as during the 1900s when champions, like Joe Gans, conditioned themselves in San Rafael. And, during the 1950s, title challengers Paddy DeMarco (lightweight), Rocky Castellani (middleweight), and Don Cockell (heavyweight) trained at the Bermuda Palms Motel, along with light heavyweight king Joey Maxim.

But those days are gone. Castellani was decisioned by champion Bobo Olson, DeMarco was stopped by Jimmy Carter and Cockell was knocked out by Rocky Marciano. Maxim was awarded a 14th round knockout over Sugar Ray Robinson when the challenger succumbed to sweltering New York heat.

Additionally, Marin has had its share of champions and contenders, including middleweight crown claimant Fred Apostoli, formerly of Fairfax, contenders Bobby Scanlon (lightweight), Billy (Peewee) Thomas (featherweight and state champion), Irish George Sullivan of San Rafael (lightweight), Sixto Rodriguez ex-president of San Anselmo (light-heavyweight), Billy Carney of San Anselmo (welterweight), and Spider Ray Ravani of Fairfax.

In the 1960s, veteran fight second and trainer Jack MacPhee groomed seven Golden Gloves competitors, including two novice division winners (Frank Gallardo, 1962 heavyweight, and Dave Townsell, 1966 lightweight).

Other Golden Gloves participants were: 1964-heavyweight Randy Petrini; 1965 — Heavy-

San Rafael Whips Drake In Football

By LEW CODDINGTON

The San Rafael High School Bulldogs may be out, but they certainly aren't down.

Coach Bob Muster's football team, all but eliminated from the Marin County Athletic League title chase by two early-season losses, played the spoiler role to perfection last night with a 32-6 thumping of previously undefeated Drake.

The Bulldogs' veer offense hummed for 303 yards on the ground, including two touchdowns by Steve D'Ambra and Craig Saunders and one by Dave Steele, as an estimated 2,000 fans watched at San Rafael.

After the game, Muster admitted the team was one of the favorites of his long coaching career. "This club is gonna live with me for a long while," he said. "They practice hard and play hard. They've had a lot of nagging injuries, but they hide the pain, and I'm always the last one to know."

A case in point is D'Ambra, the senior fullback who galloped 57 yards from scrimmage on San Rafael's fourth offensive play for a 7-0 Bulldog lead. He had 94 yards in 11 carries for the evening, and had another score on a four-yard run in the fourth quarter.

The lead was quickly extended to 14-0 when Steele, a junior quarterback, ran 45 yards on the next series after Bill Gannon's fumble recovery. Steele had 110 yards in 17 tries, best of any ball carrier, and passed for 107 more yards.

Drake cut the gap to 14-6 later in the first quarter when Bob McCann recovered another Pirate running back's fumble in the San Rafael end zone on a four-yard play.

The Bulldogs went into the dressing room with a 20-6 lead after Saunders scored on a one-yard run in the second period following Tim McCandless' pass interception. The senior halfback also tallied on a 23-yard run in the last period and gained 75 yards in 10 tries.

"(Tackle) Gary Jordan and (guard) Dan Sheehy had some fine blocks on the right side there," said Muster. "That's where we gained most of our yards. And (tight end) Fred Hurst had a fine day catching the ball" with three catches for 36 yards.

San Rafael is 2-2 in the MCAL and 4-3 overall, while Drake is 2-1 and 3-4.

IN 1973 WORLD SERIES

Nearly A Controversy A Minute

By PHIL ELDERKIN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

The 1973 World Series, in which the Oakland Athletics defeated the New York Mets in seven games, produced nearly a controversy a minute.

The baseball played was not always summa cum laude, either. The Marx Brothers were well represented in the field. Quite a few players on both teams let balls run up their sleeves.

But in almost as bizarre a happening as the Empire State Building suddenly riding its elevator shafts, Oakland Owner Charles O. Finley got more publicity than his players. Dick Williams, the winning manager, quit after the last game. And Reggie Jackson, the Series' most valuable player, says he doesn't want to play for the A's anymore and he asked to be traded.

After the final game, it was announced that Jackson had played the Series under a death threat and was under the constant protection of the FBI.

To those covering the games, Oakland seemed more like a war than a baseball team. Finley ran his clubhouse like it was the last slave ship. After second baseman Mike Andrews made two errors in the second game, Charlie kicked him off the team and sent him home. Pre-game interviews consisted mostly of A's players rapping their owner.

Casey Stengel put the managers in perspective when he said: "Both them guys" (Williams and Yogi Berra) are good at taking out players. But I would have to say that Williams is a little quicker.

"I am 83 years old and I am still amazed at the size of today's gloves. Nobody misses the ball anymore, except in the World Series. It is easy for today's players to catch fly balls because anybody can do that standing up. But it is not so easy to bend over and pick up a ball when your pants are too tight."

Oakland players not only talk to each other, but about each other. If they were on a party line, they'd all be listening in and taking notes. They have had lip fights and fist fights. The floor of their dressing room is carpeted, not for beauty, but to keep the noise down.

"Honest, we like each other," said Darold Knowles, who set a World Series record by releiving in all seven games. "We are simply a lot of outgoing guys who say what we feel. If somebody messes up — well, sometimes we tell him about it a little.

"We weren't like this just during the world Series, you know," he continued. "We were like this all year, except the Oakland writers have seen so much of this that they don't even bother to report it anymore.

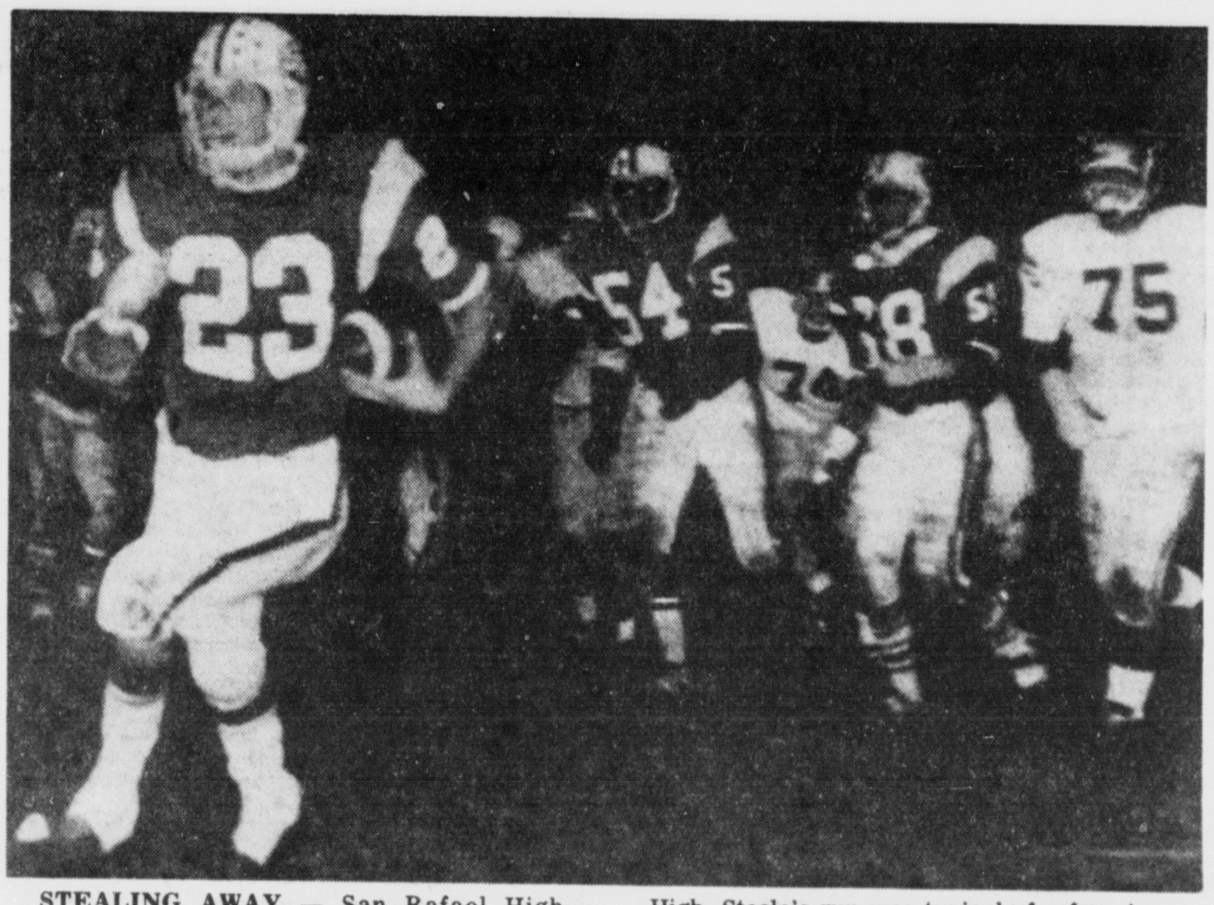

"But at the Series you get a lot of writers who aren't here during the year and they react to it. But it's nothing. A few guys yell at each other in the middle of October and it makes headlines. Course, we did create a Hall of Shame for Finley after he fired Andrews."

Williams, who manages as though all the world was a stage and he was the only personality on it, wore a trench walking from the dugout to the pitcher's mound. When he wasn't using his first baseman Gene Tenace as his catcher, he was moving his right fielder Jackson to center. And his bullpen took more calls than Joe Namath's answering service.

Although Jackson was named as the Series most valuable player, it could just as easily have been Bert Campaneris, Joe Rudi, Ken Holtzman, Rollie Fingers or Knowles.

This is assuming, of course, that you go with the theory that the man must be a member of the winning team. If not, you must then consider Ken Harrelson, Rusty Staub or Tug McGraw of the Mets.

STEALING AWAY — San Rafael High School quarterback Dave Steele (23) bolted into the secondary and outlegged his pursuers on a 45-yard touchdown run in the first quarter last night against visiting Drake High. Steele's run was typical of a ferocious Bulldog ground attack which produced a 32-6 Marin County Athletic League victory. San Rafael's Reggie Bryant (54) and Steve Curry (68) and Drake's John Segale (75) watched.

Fans Cheer Cazzie, Not Bill Russell

OAKLAND (UPI) —The fans came to cheer a coach named Russell—and wound up cheering a player named Russell.

That was pretty much the story at Seattle last night as more than 10,000 turned out to watch Coach Bill Russell's rebuilt Seattle SuperSonics host Golden State and saw Cazzie Russell almost single-handedly lead the Warriors to a 117-110 win by scoring 41 points.

The Warriors host Atlanta tonight at 8 o'clock. The Hawks are 4-4 after losing 127-110 to surprising Portland last night. What with Seattle and Phoenix already fading, the Pacific Division is shaping up as a three-team scramble among Los Angeles (6-2), Portland (4-2) and Golden State (4-2).

In last night's game at Seattle, Russell missed his career high by a basket. Hitting from all over the court, he scored 16 points in the hectic final quarter, which began with Golden State holding an 83-80 lead.

Russell hit eight straight at one point as the Warriors pushed to a 103-96 lead but Seattle cut it to 105-102 before

Rancho's Win String Snapped

By PAUL DWORIN

Cardinal Newman High School of Santa Rosa exploded for 19-third quarter points last night at Bailey Field in Santa Rosa to take a 27-19 Sonoma County League football victory from Rancho Cotate High School of Rohnert Park.

The win vaulted the Cardinals into first place in the SCL at 3-0, one-half game ahead of Rancho Cotate (3-1). The loss was the first in league for the Cougars in three years, ending their 15-game SCL win streak.

In other Southern Sonoma prep grid action last night, Petaluma High School edged host Vallejo, 15-14, in a battle for first place in the North Bay League race.

Down 10-8 at the start of the third period, Cardinal Newman moved 74-yards in seven plays to take over the lead, 14-10. Three times in that drive, quarterback Joel Faller passed to split end Bernard Proctor for key first downs.

After Rancho Cotate capitalized on a Cardinal fumble to take back the lead momentarily, 16-14, the Cardinals struck for two more touchdowns in three minutes. Both scores came on Faller to Proctor Aerials.

Petaluma's victory put the Trojans on top in the NBL with a 4-0 record, one-game ahead of Vallejo and Napa high schools (3-1). Friday the Trojans host Napa.

The Trojans scored both their touchdowns through the air. The first one was a five-yard pass from quarterback Tim Wallmark to Don White to climax a 51-yard drive, the second a Wallmark pass to Rick Schroeder which covered 16 yards. Petaluma scored two points for the victory after the second touchdown on a pass to Steve Hernandez after a fake kick.

Terra Linda Beats Sonoma Gridders

SONOMA — Terra Linda High School overcame Sonoma's defensive stubbornness last night with the help of a couple of big breaks, and earned a 20-6 non-league football victory.

"Sonoma hit as hard as anybody we've played all year," said Trojan coach Don Lucas. "They really decked our kids."

Terra Linda (4-3 overall) scored in each of the final three periods to pile up a 20-0 lead. The first score was set up on a 52-yard punt return by Al Little and the third was made possible by a pass interception return by Mike Kirby.

Brian Rodrigues scored on a three-yard sweep following Little's return, and Dick LaBarthe tallied on an eight-yard run after the interception. The second score came on a sustained drive of 77 yards in 14 plays, culminated by a seven-yard run by Kevin Kirby.

The Trojans rushed for 126 yards, with LaBarthe getting 41 in 10 carries and Rodrigues 32 in nine. Kevin Kirby hit 11 of 21 passes for 102 yards. Sonoma managed 104 yards on the ground and only nine yards on one pass completion in 12 tries.

Casa Grande Defeated By Marin 'Cats

Marin Catholic High School, accelerating rapidly after a slow start, won its third consecutive football game last night with a 21-6 non-league victory over Casa Grande at Durst Field in Petaluma.

The Wildcats (3-2-1) scored on a six-yard run by Jeff Reusche, a 30-yard pass from Bill Schalich to Herb Moran, and a three-yard run by Steve Lombardi.

"Schalich threw the ball well, called a beautiful game and mixed his plays up well," said Marin coach Bruno Banducci. The quarterback completed nine of 12 passes for 102 yards, with Cullen Jones catching five for 44 yards.

Reusche, who had an injured knee and would not have played had not Jeff Knotts suffered what Banducci called "a slight concussion," let the ball carriers with 38 yards in six carries.

"Our line play was good, and we stopped their ground game well," said Banducci, citing linemen Brian McCarthy, Jim Schneider, Jim Iavorone and Ted Hudson. Casa Grande (1-5) got 81 yards on the ground and 90 in the air to Marin Catholic's 108 and 102.

Terra Linda Shuts Out Redwood

In what Terra Linda High School soccer coach Bob Vasser called "one of the greatest matches ever played in Marin," the Trojans scored a crucial 1-0 victory over Redwood yesterday to strengthen their hold on first place in the Marin County Athletic League.

Terra Linda's Steve McCarthy tallied on a short kick from directly in front of the goal with about four minutes left to break a scoreless tie.

In yesterday's other games, host Tamalpais blitzed Drake, 6-1, host San Marin edged Novato, 1-0, and visiting Marin Catholic blanked San Rafael, 2-0.

About 100 spectators lined the field at Redwood to watch Terra Linda (7-1) keep the pressure on the Giants (5-3), taking 15 shots on goal to six, according to Vasser's statistics.

"Redwood had its chances, though," said Vasser. "They had two shots bounce off our goal posts. It was an outstanding match, and either team could have won." Vasser singled out fullback Jon Mann for playing an excellent defensive game for the Trojans, and credited Redwood goalie Jason Pierce with "save after save."

San Marin's Mike Linder scored on an assist from Bruce Smith in the last 10 minutes to give the Mustangs their victory over Novato.

Alfred Duncan scored three goals, Drew Peterson two and Geoff Webster one for Tamalpais in its lopsided triumph over Drake.

STANDINGS

Terra Linda 7-1, Redwood 5-3, Drake 4-3-1, San Marin 4-3-1, Novato 4-4, Tamalpais 4-4, Marin Catholic 2-6, San Rafael 1-7.

Marin Academy In League Soccer Win

OAKLAND — Marin Academy's soccer team shut out College Preparatory School of Oakland, 1-0, yesterday on the loser's field.

Inside left Bill Spencer scored from 15 yards out on the left side in the third quarter in a defense-dominated game. College Prep's record fell to 2-3 in the Bay Counties League, while the San Rafael school is 3-2.

Principle In Finley's Case

NEW YORK (UPI) —As far as Charlie Finley is concerned, it's "really a matter of principle."

Principle or not, the maverick owner of the Oakland A's is determined to get something in return for releasing Dick Williams from the remaining two years on his contract as manager of the world champions. Williams quit last week immediately after the A's beat the New York Mets in the seventh game of the World Series and was in line to succeed Ralph Houk as manager of the New York Yankees.

"This is really a matter of principle," Finley told United Press International in a phone conversation from his office in Chicago. "I'm sure you're aware that when a manager gets fired, he makes damn sure he gets paid for the contract he's under. Well now the shoe is on the other foot. I'm left holding the contract.

If the New York Yankees or any other club want the services of Dick Williams, "they'll have to compensate me with a front line player."

Finley added he is not interested in any financial compensation from the Yankees. "They'll have to give me a player—a front line player."

Finley said he talked to Williams yesterday morning and told the ex-A's manager "the matter will be taken to the courts if it is not settled to my (Finley's) satisfaction."

Finley said his conversation with Williams was cordial but that nothing was accomplished regarding the contract dispute.

Williams, at his home in Riviera Beach, Fla., said he may sit out the 1974 season if his contract dispute isn't resolved. He added his decision to quit the A's was "irrevocable. That's one decision that can't change."

"You're liable to see me sitting around here drinking beer and mowing the lawn," Williams said.

Williams said that American League President Joe Cronin was looking into the matter of Williams' departure, as well as Houk's departure from the Yankees to take over the Detroit Tigers.

How Dolphins Use Weak Sisters

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The weak sisters in the East are the sacrificial lambs that the Miami Dolphins are using to attain another Eastern Division title in the National Football League's American Football Conference.

Disposing of New England, New York and Buffalo in three of the last four weekends, the Dolphins start all over again tomorrow against the Patriots.

Larry Csonka was shutout from the scoring column by Buffalo last Sunday and that's enough to make the exSyracuse star hungry enough to make minute steak out of the minute men from the Boston area.

Csonka's scoring total is not up to par for the bruising Dolphins. He has only two touchdowns in six games. With eight games left, Coach Don Shula is certain Csonka will get at least four more t.d.'s to equal his 1972 figure.

Miami's two potent ground gainers this season have been Csonka, with 484 yards in 100 attempts and Mercury Morris, 470 in 68 carries.

Earlier this season, Miami rapped Chuck Fairbanks' Patriot crew with a 44-23 pasting. New England has steadied a bit since then, dropping two games by a total of 10 points and upsetting the Chicago Bears, 13-10.

Another interesting battle in the AFC East is the second confrontation between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati. The Steelers lead the Bengals by one game and are still smarting from a 19-7 setback by Cincinnati on Oct. 7.

Pittsburgh, however, played without running back Franco Harris in the earlier loss and after his 100-yard game against the New York Jets last Sunday, Harris figures to make the difference in the scoring this time.

If football buffs are looking for history to repeat, they can reflect on the 1972 season when Cincinnati clipped Pittsburgh the first time around and the Steelers came back to maul the Bengals, 40-17, in the second encounter.

A meetin' of unbeatens, probably the class game of the weekend is the Los Angeles Rams at Minnesota. Both teams have 6-0 marks, but on the records of the clubs meeting similiar opponents, Los Angeles has to have the edge. The Rams trounced San Francisco, 40-20, but the Vikings could only manage a 17-13 win over the Forty-Niners. L.A. also outhustled Green Bay, 24-7; Minnesota squeezed by the Packers, 11-3.

In other games tomorrow, Denver is at New York Jets, Oakland at Baltimore, San Diego at Cleveland, Atlanta at San Francisco, Dallas at Philadelphia, Green Bay at Detroit, New York Giants at St. Louis, Washington at New Orleans and Houston at Chicago. Kansas City is at Buffalo for the Monday night TV game.

The standings are close in four of the six divisions as the NFL reaches the midway point of the season. Miami leads Buffalo by one game in the AFC East, Pittsburgh holds a game margin over second place deadlocked Cincinnati and Cleveland in the AFC Central Division and Kansas City and Oakland are tied for the lead in the AFC West, with Denver a game back in third place.

Washington is a game ahead of Dallas in the National Football Conference East, but the other two division leaders have commanding margins as Minnesota tops Green Bay by three games in the NFC Central and Los Angeles holds a three-game bulge over second place Atlanta and San Francisco in the NFC West.

Big Gallery For Palmer In Sahara

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — David Graham shot a course record 64 before a handful of casual observers and Arnold Palmer drew his customary army of several hundred as he shot a creditable 67 in erratic fashion.

The scene was the second round of the 72 hole $135,000 Sahara Invitational at the sun-swept Sahara Nevada Country Club yesterday.

The Australian Graham had a 36-hole total of 137, five under par with his first round 73. He was tied in sixth place with two rounds to go with Allen Miller, Pensacola, Fla., who had 65-72.

Tied for the lead in the race for the $27,000 first prize were Nashville's Lou Graham with a pair of 67s and young John Mahaffey, a Ben Hogan protege from Houston, who shot 68-66-134, eight under par.

In third place at 135 was unknown Jim Ferriell, Louisville, Ky., with 68-67.

Tied for fourth were Bruce Fleisher, former U.S. Amateur champ from Miami, Fla., 67-69, and 44-year-old Dow Finsterwald, 65-71.

Palmer who has never won this tournament but has finished second twice, landed at 138 with his first round par 71 and was tied with Ben Kern, Toronto, Canada, 67-71, and Homero Blancas, Houston, 65-73.

In at 139 were Dave Eichelberger, Waco, Tex., 70- 69; Art Wall Jr., Honesdale, Pa., 69-70; Larry Ziegler, St. Louis, 72-67; and Bob E. Smith, Sacramento, Calif., 69-70, and another former amateur champion, Steve Melnyk, Jacksonville, Fla., 69-70.

The field was cut to the low 70 and ties for today and tomorrow rounds and 72 made it. A score of 146 or better was required to remain in contention. Napa's Ron Cerrudo made the cut with his 75-71—146.

Defending champion Lanny Wadkins shot 75-72—147 and was sidelined. Also out were the 1970 champion Babe Hickey, who withdrew after over-par scores, Dave Marr, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Rod Funseth, Fred Marti, Jerry Barber, Howie Johnson, and Tom Shaw.

Wadkins and Palmer along with George Knudson set the old course record of 65 last year in this tournament.

Graham's new mark of 64 was accomplished on nines of 32-32.

Ailing Meloche Plays—Glover

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

California Golden Seals coach Fred Glover says that goalie Gilles Meloche will make the current road trip and probably will be able to perform in the nets. One thing is sure, the Seals need him.

Meloche suffered an arm injury early in the second period last night but continued playing until relieved by Marv Edwards at the beginning of the final 20 minutes.

Atlanta got its first two goals off the injured Meloche and the final one off Edwards in taking the 3-1 win before 4,900 Coliseum Arena fans.

Meloche and the Flames' Dan Bouchard were locked in a scoreless duel after the first period and Gary Croteau, who had a hat trick the last time out, put the Seals ahead 1-0 early in the second stanza.

But then Randy Manery and Rey Comeau shoved the Flames in front off the injured Meloche and Comeau registered a second score off Edwards to put the contest away.

The Flames outshot the Seals 33-24 with Bouchard making several brilliant saves, but the Seals would like to have found out what the outcome would have been with a healthy Meloche going all the way.

The little net-minder was to undergo tests and testment on the arm today, but first indications were that the injury was not serious.

In the only other National Hockey League game last night, Bobby Schmautz, the top Vancouver goal-scorer last season with 38, finally broke the scoring ice this season by driving home three goals in leading the Canucks to an 8-3 romp over the disorganized Detroit Red Wings.

Secretariat's Final Race Set Tomorrow

TORONTO (AP) — Secretariat is expected to star in the final race of his career tomorrow, but the big chestnut colt will be performing with a new member of his supporting cast.

Joining the Meadow Stable trainer Lucien Laurin team for Secretariat's race in the Canadian International Championship at Woodbine will be jockey Eddie Maple, subbing for Ron Turcotte, who began a five-day suspension today as a result of a disqualification last Wednesday in a race at Aqueduct.

In the opinion of Turcotte, who had ridden Secretariat in all 20 of his races except the first two, the change shouldn't bother a horse of Secretariat's ability.

Secretariat, who will start from the outside post, is a big favorite to defeat 12 rivals in the race, scheduled to start at 1:44 p.m., PST, with a value of $142,700 and a prize of $92,755 to the winner.

The Triple Crown winner's toughest competition could come from Kennedy Road, Big Spruce and Golden Don.

Kennedy Road, owned by Mrs. Arthur W. Stollery, has won five stakes, all on the dirt, in California this year and finished sixth in the Marlboro Cup, won by Secretariat. The former Canadian Horse of the Year who will start from the No. 5 post under Avelino Gomez, set a Woodbine record of 1:082-5 for six furlongs in winning Oct. 21.

Elmendorf's Big Spruce has only one victory in 12 starts this year but in his last three races, all on the grass, he was third, second and then third to Secretariat in the Man o'War. Angel Santiago will ride him out of the No. 4 slot.

Golden Don, who will start from No. 6 under Mike Mangonalla, won the Michigan Mile and One-Eighth but was eighth in the United Nations Handicap in his last start on the turf.

Other entered, their post positions and jockeys, are:

Redwood Triumphs In Water Polo

Dave Russell scored two goals in the fourth period and three more in overtime to stave off San Rafael High School's strong bid for an upset and give Redwood a 13-11 water polo victory yesterday.

The outcome kept the Giants (9-0) on top of the Marin County Athletic League race, and virtually eliminated the Bulldogs (5-3) from title contention. In yesterday's other games, host Novato beat San Marin, 9-5, and visiting Terra Linda overwhelmed Drake, 23-4. Tamalpais drew a bye.

"Russell played a really great game," exulted Redwood coach Dennis Untermann. He scored seven goals, most of them after the Giants' leading scorer, Tom Schindler, left the game in the third period on a major penalty after netting four goals.

Terra Linda (8-1) was left as Redwood's chief threat. Thirteen Trojans, including five freshman, scored in the win over Drake. Dan Stewart had five goals and Tom Enright four.

Novato's Murad Ruona scored three goals in the first two minutes and the Hornets went on to victory, and Bob Patocchi added another three goals later on.

STANDINGS

Redwood 9-0, Terra Linda 8-1, San Rafael 5-3, Tamalpais 4-4, Novato 2-6, San Marin 2-7, Drake 0-9.

ANALYSIS

weight Norm Creuter and bantamweight Bill Goelz; 1966 — welterweight Marlin Smith; and 1968 — 71-72 Homer Hall.

Hamilton Air Force Base has produced 1972 Munich Olympic Games bronze medal winners Jesse Valdez (welterweight) and Ricardo Carreras (bantamweight).

In 1966, San Rafael's Jeff Westbrook, 10, and Phil Purdy, 17, fought and lost in the first Amateur Athletic Union Junior Olympic boxing at Camp Parks in Dublin. That was the place where heavyweight champion George Foremen learned boxing in the Job Corps.

Unfortunatley, boxing opportunities do not abound in Marin — despite the numerous fighters who trained or resided locally. The crux of the problem is the lack of adequate training facilities.

MacPhee claimed that fighters "used to train in my basement (in his San Rafael home), but there's not much glory in being the champion of the MacPhee basement."

"What we need," MacPhee continued, "is a club to work out of, something like a Central Marin Boys' Club." To this end, the Redwood Empire fight show last Friday night was a fund raiser for such an undertaking.

Local ring observers noted that the difference between Valdez ascending to the amateur boxing top and Marin's young pugilists is the facilities — or lack of them.

They state that "without a gymnasium or other club facilities, you just cannot do much."

Irving (Whitey) Litchfield, owner of the Bermuda Palms Motel in San Rafael, operated training headquarters for Cockell, Maxim, Castellani and DeMarco from 1952 to 1955. "We used to draw from 400 to 1,000 people a day. They paid a buck apiece to get in. But I closed down after Cockell left in 1955." With it went Marin's last big-time training operation, yet the dream of future boxing in the county remains.

County pugilist buffs hope that the enthusiasm generated from the Redwood Empire Amateur Fight Show will spill over and spread more interest in boxing — and facilities for aspiring boxers.

Thus, the first round is over, but the fight for Marin boxing has only just begun.

Heinsohn's Closed Door Policy Helps

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Tom Heinsohn's closed door policy may have opened the gate for an early Boston Celtic title run in the Atlantic Division.

Heinsohn, and no doubt General Manager Red Auerbach, read the riot act to the Celtics after their 15-point loss to Houston Wednesday night, keeping reporters locked out of the locker room until they finished dressing down the Boston players.

That one-two verbal punch is enough to shake anybody out of a dry spell and the Celtics responded last night with a 113-101 victory over the nose-diving New York Knicks.

The victory gave the defending Atlantic champion Celtics a 1-½ game lead over the Knicks, who dropped into a second place tie with Buffalo at 3-4 after losing their third straight game.

"The game proves a point that this is the way we can play," said Heinsohn after John Havlicek scored 34 points, including 14 in the final period. "Eighty per cent of the game is mental.

"In a game like this, you concentrate more...there's no lethargy because if you make a mistake against a team like this, you're going to get burned and its embarrasing to get burned."

The Knicks were hurt by the absence of their leading scorer, Dave DeBusschere, out with a knee injury. There were six New York players in double figures, led by Walt Frazier's 21 points, but the Knicks couldn't cope with a fired-up Celtic team that refused to face the wrath of Heinsohn once more.

In other National Basketball Association action, Milwaukee beat Philadelphia, 98-92; Buffalo clipped Cleveland, 104-97; Chicago downed Houston, 121-113; Kansas City-Omah stopped Phoenix, 98-93; Los Angeles nipped Detroit, 94-92; Golden State whipped Seattle 117-110, Portland 127-Atlanta 110.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 35 points and hauled in 18 rebounds against Philadelphia as Milwaukee rallied to win in the last period. Three straight baskets by Abdul-Jabbar put the Bucks in front for good early in the final quarter. Tom Van Arsdale and Fred Carter eached scored 19 points for the 76ers.

Jim McMillian netted 14 of his game-high 36 points in the fourth period as Buffalo erased a seven-point Cleveland lead to pin the Cavs with their fifth loss in six starts. Dwight Davis led the losers with 19 points.

Chicago won its fifth straight and remained a game back of Milwaukee in the Midwest Division on Chet Walker's 30 points. Calvin Murphy scoreed 32 points for Houston as the Rockets suffered their first road loss after four straight wins.

The absence of injured NBA scoring champion Nate Archibald didn't seem to bother KC-Omaha. The Kings received support from rookie Ron Behagen's 20 points and a 19-point output by Sam Lacey. Charlie Scott was the high man for Phoenix with 26 points. Gail Goodrich hit a season high 34 points and 7-foot Elmore Smith blocked 14 shots and added 18 points last night as Los Angeles rallied from a four-point deficit with 5:24 left to beat Detroit.Lakers nipped the Detroit Pistons Curtis Rowe, who led the Pistons with 18 points, missed a chance to tie the game when his 10-foot side shot missed with 11 seconds remaining.

Larry Steele and Greg Smith ignited a struggling Portland attack as the Blazers held off a late Atlanta charge to beat the Hawks. Steele, who set a career high with eight assists and tied a personal best with 10 rebounds, set off Portland's fast breaks in the third quarter to lead a 22-7 surge which moved the Blazers comfortably ahead to stay.

Notre Dame's Four Horsemen go for ride.

Notre Dame Takes 1925 Rose Bowl

PASADENA — It's Jan. 1, 1925. On Broadway in New York you can see the "Ziegfield Follies" for $1. At that show, in addition to the most beautiful showgirls in the world, homespun humorist Will Rogers displays his celebrated wit daily as he discusses "The Topic of the Day."

Here, the topic of the day is the great Notre Dame football team and their famed "Four Horsemen" backfield.

Coach Knute Rockne has brought an unbeaten and untied powerhouse into this year's Rose Bowl with Stanford University.

The "Four Horsemen" aren't a big backfield. They average only 160 pounds in weight, but their flawless timing and speed makes up for the lack of size.

When the leadership of quarterback Harry Stuhldreher is blended with the deceptive agility of "Sleepy Jim" Crowley, the speed of Don Miller and Elmer Laydon it forms a unit that can terrorize any opponent in the land.

Stanford, coached by Glen "Pop" Warner is led by All-American fullback Ernie Nevers. Nevers can punish a defense with his assaults into the line of scrimmage and Notre Dame is no exception on this day.

Nevers and the Indians are outrushing, outpassing and generally outplaying the Irish, but costly and critical turnovers of the football begin to indicate the outcome of the game.

A flat pass by Nevers is intercepted by Laydon who rambles 78 yards in the second quarter. Laydon does it again in the second half for a 70-yard touchdown romp.

In all, seven turnovers — five intercepted passes and two fumbles — destroy all hopes of a Stanford upset. Rockne's troops have capitalized on almost every Stanford error and the final score is a 27-10 victory for Notre Dame.

Greenbrae Bowler Leesman Has A 791

Greenbrae bowler Dick Leesman is probably savoring his October triumphs and wishing the month would never end.

The 1973 Marin County Men's Masters Bowling Tournament runnerup produced the top league bowling score at Greenbrae Lanes for the past four weeks. Thursday night, he turned in a 791 series — tops in Marin league action last week. Leesman had games of 245, 258 and 288 in the 910 Classic.

PERFECTO REVISITED. Before bowling his 300 game, Terra Linda's Rick Posusney was not doing well. He notched a 183 and 196 Thursday night in the 680 Mixed Scratch league at Country Club Bowl prior to his first perfecto. He had a 679 series. It was the sixth 300 game registered at the San Rafael bowling establishment.

PATTY CALAWAY and Ken Brown recently were awarded first place trophies in the B Division doubles competition of the California State Junior Bowling Tournament at San Jose in July and August.

They were the only local winners in the American Junior Bowling Congress event where competitors up to 22 years old bowled in team, doubles and singles action. Scoring was by total pins from in a three-game series.

Other Marinites receiving trophies were: Jim Schott and Wayne Ziegler, Classic Doubles, sixth; Jana Zipf and Rhythm Sorrentino, E Doubles, 14th; Jerry Walker, Classic Singles, 25th; Chris Moats, B Singles; Schott, Classic Singles, 9th and Classic All Events, 9th; Ken Van Larr, D Singles, 20th; Ziegler, Classic All Events, 11th, and Classic Singles, 45th; Tony Trowbridge, Classic All Events, 14th.

THE 600 CLUB of the Marin County Women's Bowling Association was to present its Princess Tournament at 1 p.m. today at Greenbrae Lanes.

MCWBA members with a 140 to 170 averages were to bowl three games, total pins scoring. Gals turning in the top scores were to advance in elimination play.

Nelson Surgery Is Successful

CINCINNATI (UPI) —Cincinnati Reds' pitcher Roger Nelson underwent surgery on his pitching arm Friday and doctors said the operation apparently was successful.

Reds' team physician Dr. George Ballou and Dr. Frank Mayfield, who performed the surgery at Christ Hospital here, reported the ulnar nerve in Nelson's right arm "was found to be entrapped in the fascial band—a normal tissue in the arm."

Nelson appeared in only 14 games during the 1973 season, compiling a 3-2 record.

Raiders In 5th Road Tilt In Row

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Oakland Raiders, virtually unknown at home with the National Football League season half over, play the Baltimore Colts tomorrow in their fifth consecutive road game.

With Ken Stabler the probable starting quarterback despite injuries to his right foot and ankle, the roving Raiders have been installed as 11-point favorites for the 11 a.m. (PST) contest.

Actually, the Raiders haven't played in their home Oakland Coliseum all year. Even their finest moment, the snapping of Miami's 18-game winning streak, was accompanied at Berkeley, following a schedule change.

While jumping around the country, however, the Raiders have managed a 3-2-1 record and a first-place tie with Kansas City in the Western Division of the American Football Conference.

Baltimore's 2-4 record is good enough for a third-place tie in the Eastern Division, but the Colts are a whopping three games behind Miami.

The Colts, who have an identity problem at home following 21 trades by General Manager Joe Thomas, have been on the road the last three weeks.

While the Colts were away, rookie quarterback Bert Jones was benched as the starting quarterback and veteran Marty Domres led Baltimore to a 29-27 upset victory over the Detroit Lions last Sunday.

Center Jim Otto of the Raiders will establish a National Football League record when he starts his 189th consecutive game — a streak which began in 1959. He also has played in 69 preseason and nine postseason games, and 12 All-Star contests. The old regular season mark of 188 was held by Forrest Gregg of the Green Bay Packers.

Oakland's 46-year-old placekicker and sometimes quarterback, George Blanda, also will be playing in his 189th consecutive game, but not all have been as a starter.

No Taiwan Li'l League Violations

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (UPI) —Peter J. McGovern, chairman of Little League Baseball, said today an investigation into the 1973 world champion Tainan City team has uncovered no violations of Little League rules.

The investigation into the Republic of China team, McGovern said, grew out of "rumors" that the team violated Little League rules by having over-aged members.

Although these were unfounded, McGovern added that the Taiwanese had admitted some discrepancies and have agreed to develop their program in close conformity with all league rules and regulations.

According to McGovern, the program in Taiwan would be approved for 1974, subject to review again after a year. He said school teachers would no longer serve as coaches and training would be given by local league adults after school hours.

McGovern said the program in Tainan City was investigated by a committee of Little League personnel from Japan, Hong Kong and the Philippines.

49ers–Falcons Game Is For The Whole Season

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Maybe no one else cares but for the Atlanta Falcons and San Francisco 49ers tomorrow's 1:05 p.m. meeting at Candlestick Park is for the whole season.

The two clubs go into the game with identical 3-3 records but are three full games behind the National Football Conference West pace-setting Los Angeles Rams and a loss this time means the end of the year and let's start thinking about 1974.

The oddsmakers favor the 49ers by four points, mostly because they are the home team and they beat the Falcons, then a team fighting itself, 13-9, three weeks ago.

Since that loss, the Falcons have turned around and last week reached a peak of sorts behind new quarterback Bob Lee with a 41-0 rout of the San Diego Chargers. The 49ers did almost as well, shutting out the New Orleans Saints, 40-0.

Lee, who completed nine of 17 passes for 146 yards last week before turning the ball over to Pat Sullivan, will be at quarterback again tomorrow. He'll face Steve Spurrier, getting the call for the second straight week over the retiring John Brodie.

While Lee was having a nice day against San Diego last Sunday, Spurrier couldn't get untracked against New Orleans. So Brodie, rated co-No. 1 with Spurrier by Coach Dick Nolan, came to the rescue.

Brodie announced he will retire at the end of the current season, preferring to pursue other interests. That means Spurrier can be expected to carry most of the load now and Joe Reed, nominally No. 3, also will get an occasional call.

While the Falcons go into the game in relatively good physical condition, the 49ers have a few walking wounded. Wide receiver Danny Abramowicz has an ankle sprain as does wide receiver Gene Washington, and left cornerback Jimmy Johnson has a balky knee. All three, however, are expected to play.

With Larry Schreiber and Randy Jackson on the disabled list, the 49ers are down to three healthy running backs—Vic Washington, Ken Willard and Doug Cunningham.

Dominican Aids The Handicapped

DOMINICAN COLLEGE of San Rafael began a significant step last week toward providing more help for young people and adults with learning handicaps.

Thanks to a grant from the San Francisco Foundation the Center for Curricular Innovation was able to open at Dominican.

It brings together the latest "tools" with which parents, teachers and the handicapped themselves may overcome learning difficulties. The center's director, Dr. Mary Crosby, is both knowledgeable and experienced in the field.

Dominican students who are preparing for careers as teachers now have the opportunity for clinical experience in dealing with slow learners.

Parents of youngsters so afflicted can learn how to help their offspring overcome their learning handicaps.

Some children and young adults who don't fit satisfactorily into the established education systems can come to the new educational center for special help.

In the end, some parents who otherwise might abandon hope are going to find ways to help their handicapped children. Some teachers who might have given up on a problem youngster are going to know better how to deal with the problem constructively.

Finally, some children who might have wound up in long-term custodial care are going to develop learning skills which will enable them to become independently self-supporting adults.

THIS IS NOT a new field for Dominican.

The college long has offered special training for students and teachers working with the mentally retarded.

Marin County's special school for those with learning handicaps, Forest Meadows Developmental Center, has been located on the Dominican campus for several years.

Dominican students training to teach the handicapped benefit by the opportunity for first-hand observation of the latest techniques.

The county's special school benefits by having the expertise of the Dominican community close at hand. Finally, the handicapped Marin students at the county's special school benefit by having the college's best brains working to solve their learning problems.

Everybody wins.

Unfortunately, the winnings are not really very much. The state of the art just hasn't advanced yet sufficiently. We still have too many "incurables;" that is, we still have too many retarded youngsters beyond the help. But at least we are making progress.

We can take satisfaction in the observation that Dominican is in the vanguard.

A WISE MAN once observed that there really is no such thing as an incurable disease; but there are diseases for which science has not yet found a cure.

What the wise man said reminds us that we need to keep on with scientific research into the ailments of mankind. No mentally retarded child or young adult is really hopelessly incurable. It is just that science has not yet learned how to deal effectively with the problem. Research must continue.

Meanwhile, Dominican brings to practical use the latest that science provides.

DOMINICAN COLLEGE of San Rafael has a wide reputation as a fine liberal arts college, and so it is.

But when we tend to think of it as that and no more, we are not giving the college its due.

Its special ability in dealing with the problems of educating mentally retarded youngsters is but one of several areas where it has earned a national reputation.

Nature—The Great Druggist

As we noted recently, Marin is undergoing a revival of interest in herbalism. But this is not the entire story. Medicine has never been out of herbal remedies. Physicians prescribe almost half a billion dollars worth of natural plant drugs a year. Your average U.S. doctor writes at least eight prescriptions daily for drugs of plant origin. Although they are usually fancied-up with flavoring and coloring and appear to be factory-made, about half of all prescriptions contain a drug from natural plant sources. This is due to the complexity of these plant compounds which makes the cost of laboratory production prohibitive.

Our Marin doctors may not think of themselves as herbalists, but that is one of their professions, among others.

An Ancient Food

Acorns — one of the oldest foods known to man — are ripening now in Marin. The Miwok Indians, the first human inhabitants of the North Bay region, made acorns from the abundant California live oaks a dietary staple. Some acorns taste good just so. But most contain an excess of tannin — the substance that makes strong tea taste bitter. However, the tannis is easily leached out by boiling in much water. And many find the resulting acorn meats quite tasty.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUET to chairman Arnold M. Baptiste of the Marin County Board of Supervisors for standing up against heavy opposition to state the case for widening of Doyle Drive at a California Department of Transportation hearing. He should have had more support from his fellow Marinites.

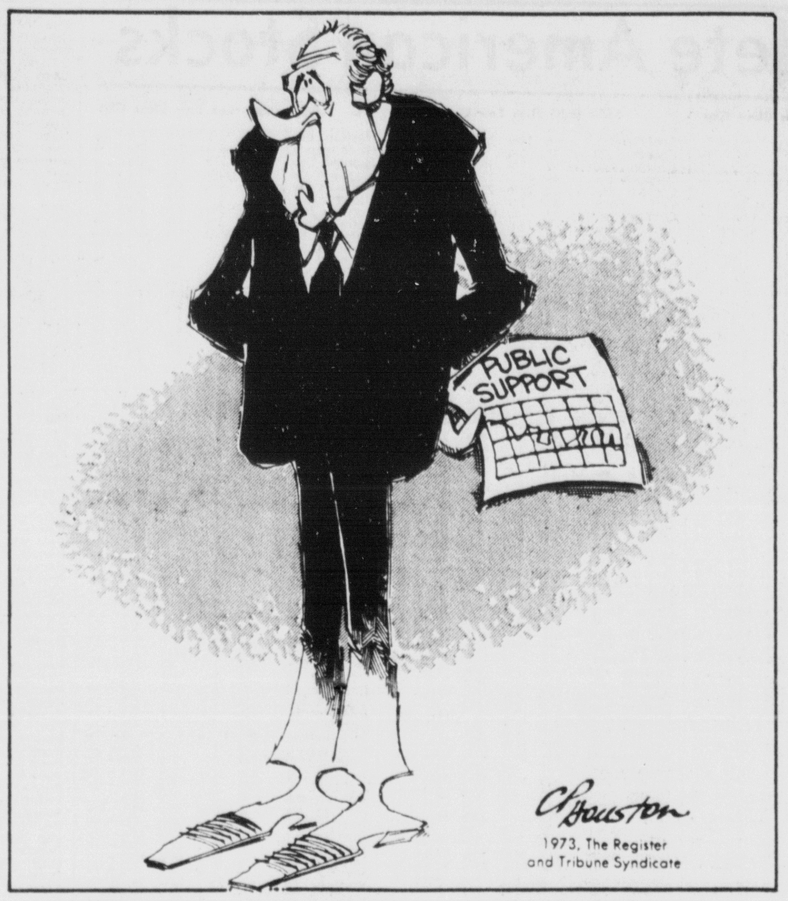

BRICKBATS to all those — on both sides — who cloud the measures on the November ballot with slogans and propaganda that do not bear on the issues and are in many cases falsehoods.

BOUQUET to the Oakland Athletics for bringing a second world baseball championship to the Bay Area.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

For Her Lilac Bush, It's Spring Again

"To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under heaven." — Ecclesiastes.

It may be fall to all the other plants and peoples in Marin, but in our garden out lilac bush is enjoying its own special spring . . .

'Tis interesting to view this unusual blooming. Maybe 'tis a sign that some plants want more than just one spring, one summer, one fall, and one winter.

'Birds Of A Feather' And Proposition One

Not long ago, a writer to the editor addressed the subject of no-fault insurance. His point, as best I recall, was that since the trial lawyers were opposed, it almost certainly had to be good. I think this line of reasoning is intriguing and points out a path well worth following, to wit: See what the bad guys want us to do, and then do the exact opposite! For want of a better term, perhaps this might be christened the "Birds of a Feather Syndrome" or, beware of birds out to feather their own nests.

At the moment, arguments concerning Proposition 1, the so-called tax limitation amendment, are generating a fair amount of heat in their attempts to attract the electorate to one view or the other come Nov. 6. The birds of a feather ganging-up in the "bad guys" bleachers to chant their opposition are indeed a sight to behold.

First we have the CTA, the California Teachers Association, that self-serving claque unswervingly devoted to ever-increasing largesse from the public coffers being showered upon the schools in general and upon the employees thereof in particular. . .

Digging a little further into the woodwork, who next do we find denouncing old Prop. One? None other than the head parasite out there at the puzzle palace. Our esteemed county administrator, that's who!

Hey, look who else is up there cheering on the antis. Their worships, the community college board! This is the bunch busily engaged in geometrically compounding their traditional wastage by pouring some 20 million of our bucks into a second campus, this in the face of reported declining enrollment!

For icing on the cake, in chimes the Honorable Dr. Hitch, he of that oligarchy known as the University of California, that bloated pinnacle of our state educational system feeding ever more greedily upon our lifeblood, year after year . . .

Standing down on the field and looking up at all those heavies wringing their hands in horror at the specter of Proposition 1 seems to offer a convincing testimonial in its favor . . .

Fears Jewish People Face Extermination

In your lead editorial Oct. 22, "Have We Learned Nothing From the Vietnam War?" you say that we are fighting communism.

I understand we are trying to prevent the extermination of a whole people.

Boycott Japanese Goods To Save Whales

It is most disheartening to learn Japan has refused to sign the international moratorium on killing whales, even though whales are an endangered species. As far as the Japanese government is concerned, the slaughter will go on.

One way to change Japan's mind is not to buy any Japanese made goods. A boycott of anything made in Japan is vitally important now.

Outmoded Seniority System Promotes Disarray In Congress

WASHINGTON — As the storm rages across the country over the conduct of the president, the disarray of the Congress as an instrument to restore stability and order is painfully apparent. For all the talk of reform it is like the old saw about no need to fix the roof because it isn't raining, and then comes the deluge.

The evil most often inveighed against is the seniority system that puts old, tired, prejudiced men into committee chairmanships with great power over legislation and the confirmation of presidential appointees. Yet, for all the fulmination, little or nothing has been done to mitigate the authority of these czars who rest on their ability to get re-elected time after time.

SPEAKER CARL ALBERT, serving his 13th term in the House of Representatives from Oklahoma, would inherit the presidency should anything happen to Mr. Nixon. To urge impeachment or resignation of the president, he would seem in his curiously ambiguous role to be promoting himself. Therefore, he urges the speedy confirmation of his friend and long-time associate, Rep. Gerald R. Ford, designated by the president to fill the No. 2 post as provided under the 25th Amendment to the Constitution.

A kindly, gentle man, Albert has managed to offend the smallest number of his Democratic colleagues in climbing the ladder to his present post. He is not in the best of health, and modesty — the appalling thought that he might be sitting in the president's chair since Mr. Nixon is not immortal and is under a strain few executives have ever endured — could be another motive in the desire to hurry Ford into the job.

On the other side of the capitol, Sen. John C. Stennis of Mississippi, now in his fifth six-year term, is a star example of the seniority system. He has risen to chairmanship of the Armed Services Committee, with its leverage on a defense budget that tops $80 billion. In that powerful post he has been courted not only by the Pentagon but by the president himself.

Stennis engaged in an acrimonious contest with former Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, then the ranking Republican on the committee, over Navy contracts for 30 destroyers and a supplementary contract for helicopter landing ships. Mrs. Smith was contending for the Bath Iron Works in her own state, a shipbuilding firm of long standing.

Mississippi got the contract for the destroyers with a top ceiling of $2.2 billion, with Litton Industries as the builders, although Litton had never built a ship. Already cost overruns on the helicopter landing craft threaten to spill over the destroyer contract. The joke on Capitol Hill is that Mississippi has so many defense contracts the state is in danger of sinking into the gulf. When Mrs. Smith was defeated for re-election last November, one reason was said to be her failure to get defense business for Maine.

SENATOR STENNIS is an honorable man who won wide sympathy when he was near death following a holdup outside his home here. But, at 72, after many months in the hospital, he was hardly qualified for the demanding task of reviewing the White House tapes to make sure the summaries accurately reflected the content.

This was under the so-called compromise that was blown out of the water when capitulation to the order of Judge John Sirica went against all the yammer of confidentiality and made the tapes available to the judge. Moreover, Stennis, by publicly counseling the president last spring to "tough it out," had compromised himself as an impartial juror.

The other senator from Mississippi, James O. Eastland, holds an even more enviable record in the seniority sweepstakes. Serving in the Senate since 1941, he has been chairman of the Judiciary Committee since March, 1956. In that role he has successfully blocked civil rights and other legislation anathema to the Deep South.

What is even more important, he is president pro tempore of the Senate. This means he is next in line after Albert, who is 65, to succeed, at the age of 69, to the presidency.

Alarmed by serious talk of impeachment reflected in a startling upsurge of public opinion, the president is showing that by outmaneuvering Congress he may come out unscathed by the impeachment threat. The institution at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue under the great dome is cumbersome and in many respects obsolete.

Year-Around 'Daylight Time' Proposed To Save Electricity

By ROBERT BUCKHORN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The energy crisis could resurrect all-year-around daylight saving time just when its opponents were convinced it was in the legislative dust bin to stay.

Twice before, in World War I and World War II, the nation resorted to 12-month daylight saving time. But once the fighting stopped, so did the "fast" clock.

Britain has been on permanent "summer time" for several years.

Now with the energy shortage plaguing the United States, proponents of permanent daylight saving time offer the fast clock as a way to save electrical energy.

THE LOGIC BEHIND the idea is simple: Longer hours of daylight would cut the use of electrical energy needed for lighting homes, offices and streets.

Turning the clock ahead could be more easily implemented than any of the other fuel-saving suggestions, its backers argue.

So far, the only real support for the idea has come from Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Calif., who has urged Congress for years to approve the idea, but has stirred little or no interest.

The Transportation Department, which enforces the Uniform Time Act, admits it has been investigating the proposal, but it shows no signs of producing legislation to put all-year-around daylight saving time into effect.

BACKERS OF THE IDEA claim that a saving in electrical energy would be only one of the benefits from their proposal.

Longer hours of daylight could cut crime in the streets since burglars and muggers use the cover of darkness.

The time change also might cut the number of highway deaths. According to this argument, most homeward-bound commuting is done in darkness. This increases the chances of accidents.

Another added factor is drunk driving. The Transportation Department's own studies claim alcohol is involved in one-half of the nation's 56,000 highway deaths.

Backers of year-round daylight saving time claim that most of this drinking and driving is done after dark. Extend daylight in the homeward bound hours, and the accident total will drop, they argue.

Opponents are quick to point out that the change would mean more hours of darkness for early morning commuters.

Supporters counter that drivers in the morning are less fatigued, a factor which lowers the accident rate.

CRITICS CONTEND that the lack of enthusiasm on the government's part stems from fear of another all-out fight over a time change.

Until 1966, when the Uniform Time Act was passed, the U.S. was a crazy quilt of time zones. Two-time-zone states were common. So were dual-zone counties.

Even after passage of the Uniform Time Act, some counties and states continued to ignore the federal legislation and faced the threat of U.S. marshals being dispatched to set clocks on government-ordered time.

Even today, seven years after passage of the Uniform Time Act, Arizona, Hawaii, and parts of Indiana, exercising an option provided by the law, do not observe daylight time.

One official put it this way: "The government has no taste for another time fight."

ART BUCHWALD

The Fable Of The King With The Dishonest Courtiers

WASHINGTON — Once upon a time there was a king who ruled over a vast land from one ocean to another. Such was his power and wealth that he had a palace in the west, a palace in the east, a palace in the south, and on week ends he had one in the mountains.

The king surrounded himself with a motley group of courtiers who were not above stealing, lying and cheating to keep him on the throne. Many of the king's rich subjects were forced to pay tribute to the palace in exchange for special favors and goodwill.

Although the king knew what his courtiers were doing, he shut his eyes to their behavior because being king was the most important thing in his life.

BUT, ALAS, one day the courtiers tried to take over a watergate, and this was too much, even for the docile people who inhabited the land.

The king, realizing his subjects were angry, issued a proclamation saying he was appalled by the corruption in his palace, and he would find the guilty people and banish them from his court forever.

He called in the king's prosecutor, an honest and devoted servant, and said, "I want to leave no stone unturned to find the people who have brought disgrace and shame on my kingdom."

The king's prosecutor asked, "Sire, does that mean I may investigate everyone in the palace?"

"Of course. What kind of king do you think I am that would prevent my own prosecutor from rooting out evil in the land?"

THE PROSECUTOR took the king at his word and started talking to the counselors in the palace. Each one had a different story to tell, and it was impossible for the prosecutor to know who was telling the truth.

He went back to the king and said, "Sire, we have heard many versions of the same story, but we have no proof as to which one is correct."

The king said angrily, "No proof? What kind of king's prosecutor are you if you cannot produce proof?"

"We know who has the proof."

"Then drag him here and pull his toenails out."

"This is difficult, sire," the prosecutor said, staring at the king's toenails. "If we could just have your scrolls recording your conversations with your counselors. . ."

"HAVE YOU GONE MAD?" the king shouted. "I am the king. No one sees my scrolls. They shall go with me to my grave."

"Then," the prosecutor said, "it is impossible for me to find the guilty parties, sire."

"You fool," the king said. "My subjects are angered. If we allow corruption in the palace to go unpunished, they will try to throw me off my throne."

"But what can I do if you refuse to let me see the scrolls?"

"Let me think a minute," the king said. "If I do not produce the scrolls the populace will believe I am trying to hide my guilt. But, on the other hand, if I produce the scrolls they will know I'm guilty. Did any king ever face such a painful dilemma?"

"What is your decision, sire?"

"ALAS, I HAVE no choice," the king said. "Guards, take this man to the dungeon and chop off his head."

"But, sire," the poor prosecutor cried, "why me?"

"We can always get another king's prosecutor," was the reply, "but where can the people get another king?"

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

All that daylight we saved since last April seems hardly worth the trouble. There was too much smog for it.

Besides, everybody had to bounce out of the sack an hour before they were awake.

Whenever any daylight gets saved at our house the boss uses it for watching her daytime television programs.

Trouble is, most of this year's daytime TV got pre-empted by a little ol' country lawyer.

Eskimos save their daylight by having a night that's six months long. This is great for husbands who are allowed just one night out every year.

King Faisal Holds Key Trump Card—Oil Reserves

SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1973 15

EDITOR'S NOTE — King Faisal of Saudi Arabia is sitting atop the world's largest-known oil reserves. With the U.S. expected to be drawing one-fifth of its oil needs from Saudi Arabia by 1985, American planners need to know what makes the Saudi government tick. Here is a look at why, in an area of political turmoil, that Arab kingdom maintains stability.)

By JOHN K. COOLEY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia — Mystery surrounds the Saudi Arabian monarchy and its ultraconservative Islamic society.

Westerners wonder how the nation operates without parliament, political parties, or other attributes of a modern state.

King Faisal governs territory about half the size of the United States. He rules four to seven million subjects, depending on which of several unofficial census figures you accept.

His monarchy is unique in the Arab world. It is a stable, family-type government. At present, most responsible Saudis believe, it is well-protected against coups or revolutions.

It is not just the expensive and elaborate United States and British-built capital security system that brings stability, though this helps.

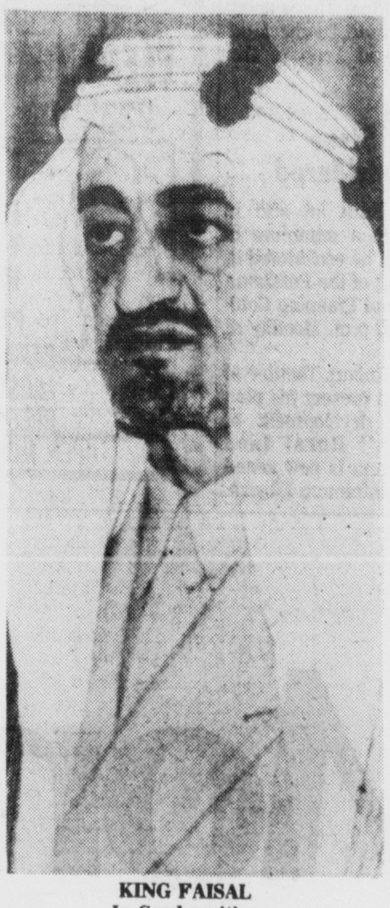

Rather it is the family-type government and the character of King Faisal, a sober, careful planner, completely unlike his spendthrift brother, the late King Saud.

Politically powerful people in Saudi Arabia include several hundred royal princes and thousands of their relatives. King Abdel Azziz, the father of both Saud and Faisal, had 41 sons. His son Saud had 21. King Faisal himself has eight sons.

These ties of blood are doubly important because the Saudi monarchy and society have not experienced any real revolutionary shocks — in contrast to virtually every other country in the Arab world.

Family rule means that information about the state of the nation and its people moves inexorably upward through family channels to the King. Governors and high civil servants of even the most remote provinces are the King's relatives.

Therefore King Faisal need not rely just on the kind of "professional" advisers who have led so many other Arab rulers — such as the late President Nasser of Egypt — to make wrong judgments.

KING FAISAL
In Good position

(During the 1967 Mideast War, Saudi Arabia and other Arab nations cut off the flow of oil to the West for three months, and a similar action is being taken in the present war.

A few days ago the 10 Arab nations making up the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries announced production cutbacks of 5 per cent a month until Israel pulls out of occupied Arab lands and the rights of Palestinian refugees are restored.

(Of the 10, Saudi Arabia is the biggest supplier of oil to the U.S., and also the country from which the U.S. is expected to import much more oil in future years. The latest oil curbs are not expected to cut U.S. fuel supplies substantially, since imports from Arab countries currently represent about 6 per cent of the total U.S. supply.)

At the top of the hierarchy are Faisal's brothers, Princes Khalid and Fahed. Prince Khalid has been designated officially Crown Prince, King Faisal's successor. He also is deputy prime minister. Since replacing his brother Saud as King in 1964, Faisal has been his own prime minister.

But Prince Fahed, the interior minister, is the favorite of some Saudis to succeed King Faisal, especially in case of family rivalry. A diplomat who knows Fahed well describes him as "a good-looking Arab gentleman, with generous manners, tall, courtly, and cheerful."

Two of Faisal's half-brothers also are key figures. They are Sultan, the minister of defense, and Abdallah, commander of the 30,000 Bedouins in the National Guard, or "White Army."

Like the 35,000-man regular Army, the 2,000-man Navy, and the 6,000-man Air Force, it is armed, equipped, and advised largely by the U.S. and Britain.

The White Army is a mobile security force, not unlike the royal Bedouin forces in the kingdom of King Faisal's main Arab ally, King Hussein of Jordan.

It keeps security in the main cities, while the regular forces watch the coasts, borders, and strategic places in the deserts and mountains.

Two other important figures are the brothers of Fahed and Sultan. One is Prince Turki, the deputy defense minister; the other Prince Nayef, the deputy interior minister. Prince Musaad, the deputy finance minister, is King Faisal's uncle.

King Faisal does not like to shift his ministers around. If he performs well in it, a minister or high civil servant may keep his job for life. There have been few high-level personnel changes since King Faisal took the throne in 1964.

In 1969 there were two anti-Faisal conspiracies. The King's security stopped both before they grew. Again, the information was passed up to him through family channels.

Suspected young Air Force and Army attaches serving abroad quietly were recalled and arrested, as were many Air Force pilots and oil-company employees.

As far as is known, none of the more than 200 Saudis implicated was executed. Most had their initial jail sentences reduced considerably as time passed.

One man pardoned by the King and released earlier this year was Salah Anbah, dean of the Saudi College of Petroleum and Minerals at Dhahran.

The college is training several hundred young Saudis in the skills of oil development, and the government is justly proud of its up-to-date equipment, instruction, and good results.

Dean Anbah was released from prison early this year. From being a "nonperson," never mentioned in the carefully edited Saudi newspapers or broadcasts, he returned to favor again after having an audience with Faisal and being photographed walking with him in the palace gardens in Riyad, the capital.

Many foreigners cannot understand how, in this age of change, the Saudi regime can court modernism and still retain all of the old strict Islamic usages — sequestering of women (who cannot drive cars or go unveiled outside their homes) and harsh punishments, including amputation of a hand or a foot for habitual thieves and stoning for adultery.

One of the answers is education. School curricula in Saudi Arabia — where illiteracy and ignorance are being defeated rapidly by a huge education budget from the oil funds — is a mixture of modern knowledge and Islamic principle.

Most young Saudis who study abroad go to the United States, where nearly 1,500 are attending colleges or universities now. One-third to one-half of these students are already in, or will enter, the growing Saudi military establishment.

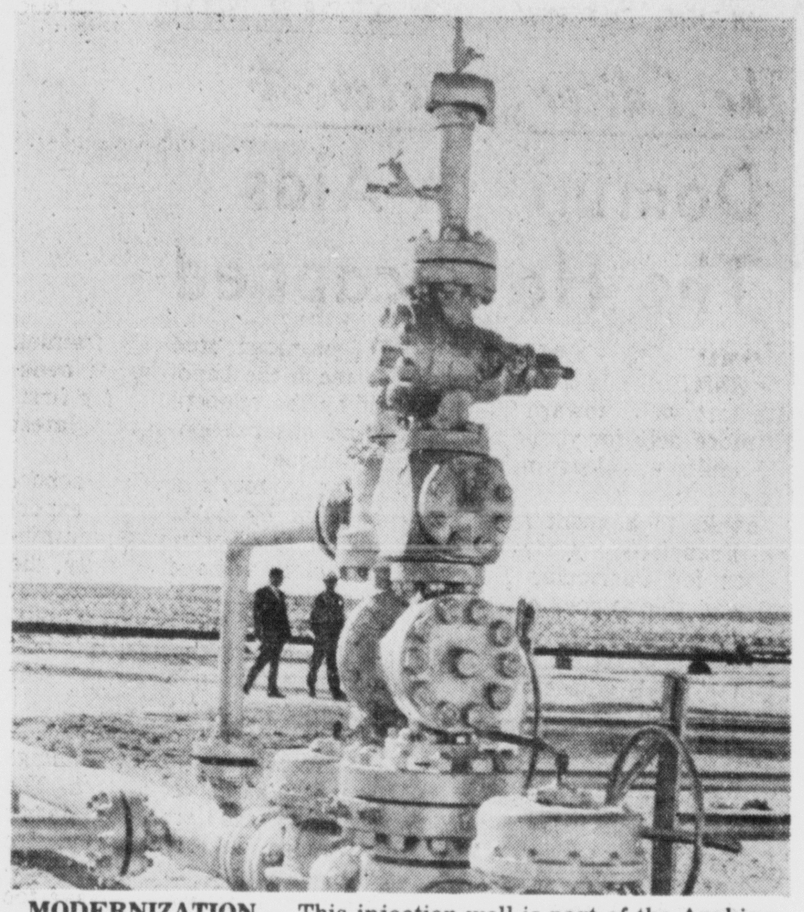

When most of the students return home from California, Texas, or Washington, D.C., to Jeddah, Damman, or Mecca, they completely integrate into their own conservative system again.

"We have no identity problems," a UCLA-educated young Saudi oil engineer told me. "We can live as we want in our own homes. The girls have hen parties and show off their latest Western fashions. The men have stag parties and discuss new cars, and international affairs — not Saudi politics, mind you; because there are none to discuss!"

Saudi television is a bland mixture of Islam, innocent entertainment, and carefully selected Western films excluding sex, violence, and references to other aspects of Western culture considered disagreeable here.

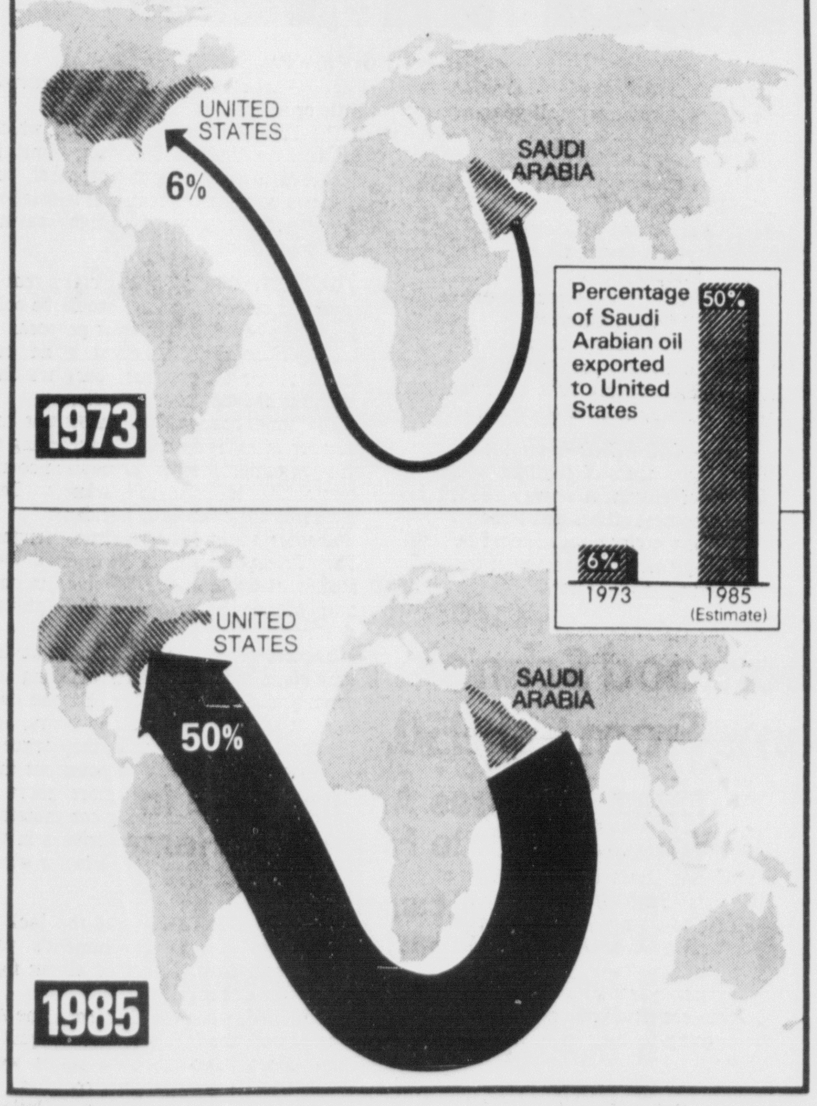

Said a young Saudi girl who had studied in the U.S.: "If you Americans in your suburbs live in a lawn-to-lawn culture, we live in a wall-to-wall one. Behind the house walls, the family is everything! We live and work for and in our family. We like this, and we plan to keep things this way."

ARCHIBALD COX
Ousted by Nixon

President Nixon came close this week to a domestic confrontation with Congress and a foreign one with the Soviet Union.

Nixon dramatically changed his mind about releasing tape recordings of conversations made in the White House.

Over the weekend he had fired Archibald Cox, the special prosecutor appointed to investigate Watergate, because Cox insisted in pressing for release of the tapes.

Then, after cries for the President's impeachment were raised on Capitol Hill, he said he woald release the tapes

Later in the week, Nixon placed U.S. troops worldwide on alert after Russia placed some of its units on an alert, apparently planning to send them to the Middle East.

Russia backed down and told the United Nations it would not insist that its troops be part of a U.N. team to police the Mideast cease-fire.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger explained that U.S. officials had become "aware of the alerting of certain Soviet units and . . . puzzled by the behavior of certain Soviet representatives."

Kissinger said the United States opposed stationing of a joint U.S.-Soviet peace mission in the Mideast, a move Egypt had propoyed. Even more, he said, U.S. officials did not want Russia to unilaterally position troops in the Mideast.

Around The World, Around The Clock

WASHINGTON — President Nixon vetoed a bill that would have imposed a 90-day limit on his power to send U.S. troops overseas.

KEARNY, N.J. — Nine persons were killed in a series of chain collisions on the fogcovered New Jersey Turnpike.

SAN JUAN, P.R. — Pablo Casals, the century's greatest cellist, died at the age of 96.

BUENOS AIRES — An executive of a U.S. oil company, David B. Wilkie Jr., was kidnaped. His kidnapers asked $1 million ransom, police sources said.

Tiburon Plans To Act On Open-Space Land

The Tiburon City Council has agreed to initiate condemnation proceedings against three parcels of land which the city hopes to preserve as open space.

City Mgr. Bert A. Balmer said that the council voted Thursday to act on 22.2 acres of property near the end of Hacienda Drive, owned by James Reisinger of Belvedere; 5.8 acres in the Hacienda Drive-Tiburon Road area, owned by Dr. Donald W. Agins of San Anselmo, and two acres near Tiburon Boulevard in Blackie's Pasture, owned by KMC Inc., San Carlos development firm.

Balmer said that these lands were ones which the city had decided previously were desirable for buying with money from its open space bond issue approved by voters a year ago. He said that the city and landowners had not agreed on prices for the properties in previous negotiations. But he did not know the estimated value of the properties.

The council also set Nov. 29 for a public hearing on the text of a redevelopment plan which it hopes to adopt for the city's downtown area. The plan must be filed with the county by Dec. 31 in order for the city to freeze assessed value of land and improvements inside the redevelopment area for the coming year.

Balmer said he told the council there might be legal problems in its decision to try to meet this deadline. The council asked him, he said, to check on whether it could keep to the schedule.

Rural Lot Sizes To Be Considered

A plan to limit lot size in rural areas, to a minimum of two acres, will be considered at a joint meeting of the Petaluma City Council and Planning Commission at 7:30 p.m. Monday at city hall.

Supervisor Robert Theiller of Sebastopol will present his plan to encourage development of "ranchettes." Rural land around Petaluma is now zoned for a 1.5-acre minimum lot size.

Shields Quits Bridge District Post, Reilich Named Engineer

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Robert E. Shields, engineer for the Golden Gate Bridge District for the past six years, resigned yesterday and was replaced by Bridge Mgr. Harry D. Reilich.

The staff changes were announced by district directors after a 17-minute closed-door meeting. No explanation was given for Shields' resignation and he could not be reached for comment.

Friction between Shields and other district officials, however, had existed several years. The disputes broke into the open only once before, when he threatened to resign about two years ago.

As district engineer, he directed a host of transit and planning projects. He had direct authority over the span as well but lost this jurisdiction when Reilich was hired 13 months ago.

Shields served as the district's number two engineer from 1961 to 1965, when he left two years to work in private industry. The board accepted his resignation from his $32,280-a-year position with regret.

Shields has been on sick leave for the past month because of surgery for a middle ear problem. His departure will be effective on Jan. 4 after his accumulated leave expires.

Glen Wallis, district senior project engineer, had been acting district engineer until yesterday's unanimous board action.

Several directors said privately Reilich was in line to be named district engineer after Shields is gone. No change was made in Reilich's $26,244 annual salary, but several directors said it will be increased within a few weeks.

Reilich, 53, formerly was maintenance engineer for the state Division of Bay Toll Crossings. He is a native of Detroit and a graduate of the University of Southern California with a degree in civil engineering.

His 20 years of state work included assignments as resident engineer in charge of construction for the San Mateo-Hayward and San Diego-Coronado bridges. He also was responsible for a new paint system to cut maintenance costs on the state's eight toll bridges and designed bridges for the state Division of Highways.

He served as an Air Force mechanic gunner in the Philippines in World War II and was on the Bataan Death March. He wrote a manuscript about the experience entitled "Our Days Were Years."

He resides in Santa Rosa with his wife, Hialeah, and their two children. He and his wife are pilots.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

FERRY — Postponed adding $40,060 to the $442,000 contract with Braccia-DeBrer-Heglund of San Francisco to design the Larkspur Ferry terminal. Several directors objected and it was referred to the finance-auditing committee for review.

ROADS — Approved spending $196,000 as the district's share of improving highway access to the Larkspur ferry terminal.

TERMINAL — Declared construction of the San Francisco ferry terminal would have no impact on the environment, thus no impact study is needed.

HIRE — Referred to committee a staff proposal to create a new position of property manager.

AGENTS — Approved a two-year contract with the Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific for the district's five ferry ticket agents.

SECRETARY — Postponed to Nov. 9 a committee's recommendation that District Secty. Peter D. Clainos get a 28 per cent salary hike to $24,000 a year.

Caledonia is a record store that is offering the same selection and prices that you've been driving to the city to find—right here in Marin County.
Why? Because we thought that you might not feel like driving all the way to San Francisco when you feel like buying records. We also thought that you might enjoy shopping in a pleasant, comfortable shop that offers that rare commodity, personal service.
Come by and browse. Chances are, we'll have the record that you want. If we don't, we'll get it for you.

"I sold our house myself. But I'd never try to do it again!"

"You know how it is. You hear you can save money if you sell your home yourself. Well, I tried it, and learned a painful lesson the hard way.

I ran an ad and before I knew it, my family's life was turned upside-down. Our phone rang at all hours and total strangers appeared at the door demanding to be shown through. Our flowers were trampled and one day, as we came home, people were sitting on our doorstep.

I thought I had the house sold, but problems of the escrow impounds, closing costs, title insurance, pre-payment penalty, termite work, eliminating deed encumbrances — delayed everything. (How can this stuff be so complicated!)

Then after all this, the buyer couldn't qualify for a loan. The house was finally sold, but while we were suffering by doing it ourselves, our neighbor's house across the street was sold for 15% more than ours. And it was essentially the same house! His sale was quick, smooth and professionally handled through a Realtor, who knew the true market value of the house. Sell your own home yourself? Take my advice and use a Realtor. You'll be glad you did."

OVER WELFARE

Impeachment Threat For Reagan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — State Controller Houston I. Flournoy is not legally authorized to give California taxpayer funds to the federal government under Gov. Ronald Reagan's welfare impelemntation plan, according to the Legislature's lawyer.

The legal opinion from Legislative Counsel George Murphy was announced yesterday by Assemblyman John Burton, D-San Francisco.

Burton also threatened to initiative impeachment proceedings against Reagan if 500,000 blind, elderly and disabled welfare recipients are "harmed" by the governor's plan.

"We have all had our bellies full od chief executives who place themselves above the laws of the land," said Burton, state Democratic chairman. "California is a society of laws and not men."

At a news conference, Burton cited the legislative counsel's opinion which declared the controller has "no authority" to pay state funds to the federal social Security Administration to administer the state's program of supplementary aid to the aged, blind and disabled.

Burton, who sought the opinion, had asked whether Flournoy possessed the authority to make the payments, "assuming the state of California has no specific authority" to provide for federal administration of the program.

Reagan plans to establish by administrative regulation a California procedure for administering supplemental aid to adult welfare recipients on Jan. 1, the day the federal government takes over administration of welfare for the blind, disabled and elderly.

The Reagan plan would increase average monthly grants from $212 to $221. A Burton-sponsored bill, opposed by Reagan and defeated by the Senate, would have increased the payments to an average $230 a month.

Unless California implements a supplemental aid program by Jan. 1, grants to adult recipients are in jeopardy of dropping automatically to only $130 a month.

Under both the Reagan plan and the Burton bill, Flournoy would send California's supplemental aid to the Social Security Administration, which in turn would write benefit checks to California welfare recipients.

Reagan, supported by a disputed attorney general's opinion, has said he can legally implement his plan without legislative action. Two lawsuits have been filed in state and federal courts challenging the legality of Reagan's plan.

In his opinion, Murphy cited a section of the State Constitution which declared that "no money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law and upon warrants duly drawn thereon by the controller."

Burton demanded that Reagan called the Legislature into special session before Jan. 1 to "provide the statutory authority he so obviously lacks at this time" and to enact a bill increasing grant levels above what Reagan has proposed.

SAN RAFAEL HOMECOMING QUEENS

Lisa Sockolov (right) and Debbie Williams were named last night as San Rafael High School homecoming queens when each received an identical number of votes in secret balloting by the senior class, according to a school spokesman. The pair, believed to be the first ever to share homecoming queen honors at the school, will be crowned in ceremonies at 8 p.m. today at a homecoming dance at San Rafael High School.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Poor Mental Image Can Often Result In Great Unhappiness

Each person carries within himself a mental image of the kind of person he thinks he is. He has certain ideas about his physical appearance, whether he is handsome or ugly, and about his talents and abilities. This self-image, as it is called, is not always accurate, because people have a tendency to have mistaken ideas about themselves.

A distorted self-image can cause great unhappiness. Some men and women with considerable talent and capability may be held back by unfounded fears that they have little or no ability.

THE SAME can be said of the person who sees himself as inadequate, inferior, unlovable, or unpopular. Assessments such as these may be all hogwash, especially when they are the result of a mistaken self-image. In essence, the individual is his own worst enemy.

One's conception of self develops during the formative years in childhood. The outcome depends upon the attitudes shown him by parents or other close relatives and friends. The child treated with reasonable love and respect tends to feel worthy of love and respect. Conversely, the child who is reared by parents in a cold and hostile atmosphere is likely to grow up believing he is unworthy of consideration and deserving of hostility and coldness. Youngsters constantly belittled by their parents grow up convinced that they are inferior.

ACTS OF OMISSION and commission play an important role in the development of personality. Few mistakes are made when the child grows up knowing that he is loved and lovable. He can give love and expect it in return. Being reared in an environment of criticism and depreciation has the opposite effect.

The self-image acquired in childhood is so deeply ingrained that it may be difficult to change in later life. It may be responsible for making a brilliant person feel stupid, despite outstanding professional achievements.

LUNG INFECTION

C. E. T. writes: What is the cause of pneumonitis?

REPLY

Pneumonitis is infection of the tissues between the air sacs of the lungs. It resembles pneumonia, and a variety of germs and viruses can cause the disorder. Treatment depends upon the causative microorganisms.

NAMES ESCAPE HIM

S. P. writes: I'm 74 and though I have no trouble with spelling or numbers, I can't remember names. Do I need a brain X-ray, a psychologist, or what?

REPLY

You need a good wife or secretary who remembers names. At 74, be happy your arithmetic and spelling are good.

RADIOACTIVE PEOPLE

B. C. writes: Is it possible to become radioactive, and if so, how would it affect a person?

REPLY

All of us have traces of radioactivity in the body from the natural background, but not enough to glow in the dark. Large amounts of radioactive chemicals could be ingested or injected, assuming that you wanted to commit suicide.

Federal Probe Over Stocks For Rebozo

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Florida banker C.G. "Bebe" Rebozo, described by his close friend President Nixon as "a totally honest man," faces a federal investigation into allegations he may have traded in stolen stock in 1968.

Frank Wille, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC), said yesterday the agency's board of directors would take up the Rebozo case at its next scheduled meeting on Tuesday at the request of Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

Proxmire, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, asked Thursday that Rebozo be suspended as an officer and director of the Key Biscayne (Fla.) Bank and Trust Co. until the FDIC can investigate the alleged improper stock transaction.

The Washington Post reported earlier this week that Rebozo accepted 900 shares of International Business Machine Corp. IBM) stock in 1968 as collateral for a loan. The stock turned out to have been stolen by the Mafia from the vaults of a Wall Street brokerage firm, the Post said.

The newspaper said Rebozo made the $195,000 loan without checking whether the borrower, Charles L. Lewis, was the actual owner. Further, the Post said it had learned, Rebozo sold 300 of the IBM shares for $91,500 after an insurance investigator had told him the stock was stolen. Rebozo's lawyer denied to the Post that Rebozo knew the origin of the stock.

Meanwhile, lawyers for the Key Biscayne Bank and Trust Co. said the stock transaction had been "distorted" by the Post.

In a 5-page letter addressed to Proxmire, the Miami law firm of Frates, Floyd, Parson, Stewart, Proenza, Richman said that a court had already "found that the bank and Mr. Rebozo had done absolutely nothing wrong."

The firm wrote Proxmire, "It would appear from your statements, as reported in the national press, that you have not checked into the facts of this matter beyond reading the Post article. That article is distorted, inaccurate and a gross slanting of the facts in the case."

Wille, whose agency insures bank deposits, said the FDIC staff "has been directed to make a thorough investigation relating to the particular loan and its repayment."

He also said the FDIC is investigating Rebozo's hiring of Franklin S. Debour to head Key Biscayne Bank's trust department less than a year after the Securities and Exchange Commission barred him for allegedly selling unregistered securities.

Just an hour after Wille's announcement, Nixon was asked at a news conference about Rebozo's role in accepting a $100,000 campaign contribution from billionaire recluse Howard Hughes in 1969 and 1970, then returning it intact earlier this year.

Nixon said Rebozo, his Florida neighbor and close friend, had shown "very good judgment" in not telling him about the money and in deciding to return it to Hughes to avoid embarrassing the White House.

"I would say that any individual, and particularly a banker, who would have a contribution of $100,000 and not touch it...I think that's a pretty good indication that he is a totally honest man, which he is," Nixon said.

Innocent Pleas Are Made By Quentin 6

More than two years ater the August 1971 escape attempt at San Quentin which they are accused of engineering, the San Quentin Six finally had innocent pleas entered for them yesterday.

The six inmates, charged with murder, conspiracy and assault in connection with the incident in which six persons died, stood mute before Judge Henry J. Broderick of Marin Superior Court.

So Broderick, presiding in the heavily-guarded court split in two by bullet-proof plastic, entered innocent pleas and announced a speeded-up schedule of hearings.

Proceedings were recessed until Monday, when attorneys for the inmates will argue another batch of pretrial motions.

Among these are moves to dismiss the charges on the grounds the six have been denied a speedy trial and a request to move the trial from Marin, due to widespread publicity.

For the most part, the hearing went quietly, although Hugo Pinell was ejected late in the day when he protested the presence of a former prison psychiatrist.

Otherwise, the proceedings were calm, with no outbursts which in the past sometimes had led Broderick to eject the inmates.

Also charged are John Larry Spain, Fleeta Drumgo, Willie Tate, David Johnson and Louis Talamantez.

Broderick set hearings Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday to dispose of defense motions. No trial date has yet been set.

Defender Is Victor In Court Fuss

A dispute between a Marin judge and the county public defender's office over what constitutes a court appearance has been decided in favor of the public defender.

Superior Court Judge David Menary Jr. Wednesday ruled Municipal Court Judge Gary W. Thomas has no right to demand court attendance by misdemeanor defendants in most instances.

The public defender took Thomas to court over his practice of releasing some persons on their own recognizance only if they agreed to return to court each time their cases came up.

Menary said California law requires personal appearances only when a defendant pleads guilty and is sentenced. In other cases, his lawyer may appear for him, Menary said.

Menary ruled in the case of 20-year-old Keith Griffin of San Rafael, whom Thomas sentenced to a day in jail for contempt of court when Griffin failed to show up for a hearing and sent his public defender in his stead.

Judge Gives 20 Days In Hash Case

Thirty days in jail is a proper sentence for a man who had a friend mail him five ounces of hashish from India, Marin Superior Court Judge Joseph G. Wilson ruled yesterday.

Wilson said he didn't think 26-year-old Stephen Richard Flynn was involved in narcotics sales and rejected a 60-day sentence asked by the district attorney.

But he said he thought Flynn, of Camp Meeker, Sonoma County, should be taught that "if you get involved in this sort of thing, you pay the price."

Flynn told the judge he didn't solicit the hashish and will appeal his case.

A jury last month convicted Flynn of possessing the hashish when authorities raided his house in February. He lived in Tiburon at the time.

Today is Saturday, Oct. 27, the 300th day of 1973 with 65 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter. The morning star is Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Jupiter and Mars.

Theodore Roosevelt, 26th president of the United States, was born Oct. 27, 1858.

On this day in history:

In 1871, the political chief of New York's Tammany Hall, Boss Tweed, was arrested on charges of defrauding the city.

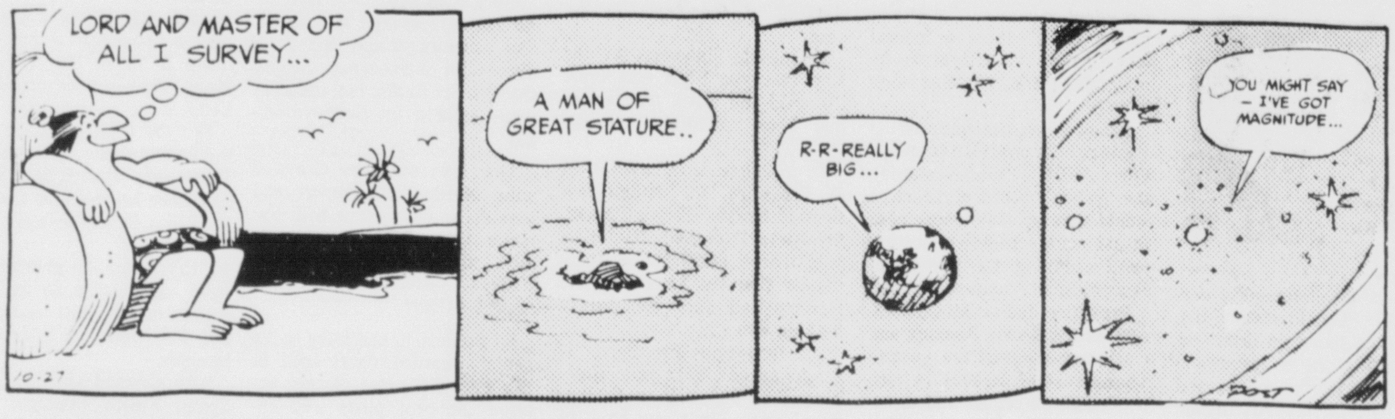

In 1904, the first practical subway began operating in New York City — from the Brooklyn Bridge to 145 St. in Manhattan.

In 1917, concert violinist Jascha Heifetz made his debut at Carnegie Hall at the age of 16.

In 1961, the United Nations adopted a resolution protesting Russian explosion of a 50-megaton atomic bomb.

A thought for the day: President Theodore "Teddy" Roosevelt said, "We demand that big business give the people a square deal; in return we must insist that when any one engaged in big business honestly endeavors to do right he shall himself be given a square deal."

KEY TO VICTORY

Declarer won the first trick in dummy with the king of hearts and saw that his slam contract depended on a successful trump finesse. This was quite correct. Declarer therefore led the queen of spades from dummy. This was quite wrong.

East naturally covered with the king, and South won with the ace of trumps. The jack of trumps drew West's nine, but then West had a natural trump trick with his ten of spades.

Declarer should lead a low trump, instead of the queen, from the dummy at the second trick.

South captures the singleton king with the ace of trumps, and can then pick up West's trumps with the jack and queen.

South is equally successful if East happens to have K-x of trumps. In this case South wins the first trump trick by finessing with the jack. He then leads out the ace of trumps, capturing the king.

NO PLAY

No play will work if East has three or more trumps headed by the king. East is sure to get a trump trick by covering if the queen is led but by playing low otherwise.

Here is a good rule to help you decide whether or not to lead a high trump for your first finesse in such situations: Imagine that the king is singleton, and see if you can still afford to lead that high card.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner deals and bids one spade.

The next player passes.

You hold:

♥ - A K 4
♦ - 8 7 3 2
♣ - Q 10.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two diamonds or three spades.

You would surely bid three spades if you had passed originally, for then this jump may be made a trifle light. You hate to make the jump bid with a light hand when you have not passed originally, but you don't really have a good alternative bid. Bid three spades with a conservative partner, but bid two diamonds with an aggressive partner.

The Meachams Once Again Are Winners

By MARTIN FRICK

A concert by the Meachams is usually an adventure into the realm of rarely performed music, and his wife, pianist Robaline, delighted the full house with sonatas by four Bohemian composers.

Meacham took advantage of the intimate classroom setting to relate pertinent facts about the music but happily got beyond the academic by infusing his remarks with the same humanity that pervades his performances.

Seventeenth Century Heinrich Biber was Central Europe's first violinist, although his severe style is clearly pre-Bach German. Interest is maintained chiefly by the brief, well-defined forms of each of the four movements and by the sheer artistic demands on the performer.

Biber's bowing styles, which Meacham demonstrated with dexterity, were eventually abandoned, not to reappear until 200 years later when Paganini restored jete bowing in his Caprices.

Last night's performance manuscript was prepared by Charles Heiden of Oregon's Willamette University. Dr. Heiden restored the true continuo part to the existing 19th Century edition, and Robaline Meacham supplied that proper Baroque sound on the harpsichord. Cellist Susan Karp's too heavy bowing, particularly in the first movement, however, made one wonder whether Biber had meant for a gamba rather than a cello to support the violin.

The next three sonatas were clearly Czech. Leos Janacek's Sonata for violin and piano, composed in 1922, is characterized by the same brevity and formal precision found in Biber, but here the tempos are inconsistent, the rhythms often abrupt, and melodies (except for the Romantic ballada) fragmented and repetitious. Yet the Meachams attacked them boldly and achieved moments of perfect ensemble playing, as well as individual virtuosic displays in the allegretto third movement. Mrs. Meacham very comfortable at the piano.

Dvorak, the most famous Czech composer and probably the most prolific, wrote only one violin sonata (F Major, Opus 57). Mr. and Mrs. Meacham's sympathetic blend in the Brahms-like second movement gave way to a straightforward Slavonic dance performed with such relish that it cried out for a screen image of Charlie Chaplin in one of his exuberant waiter tray-balancing scenes.

The concert closed with Bohuslav Martinu's 1950 Sonata No. 3. Once again, the classical forms are there, but diffused with material unmistakably Czech and 20th century. The performers obviously enjoyed spreading out for their audience the full range of expression from the stormy sonata-allegro to the broad theme which Meacham guided through its variations with the full breadth of a 19th Century romantic. The Scherzo bounced along true to its name, followed by a bombastic final movement.

This event will be repeated tonight with the promise of a similar program devoted to Russian nationalistic music of the spring.

New Patrol Zone Is Created

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California Highway Patrol Commissioner Walter Pudinski has announced the creation of a new patrol zone.

Pudinski described the move as the first major realignment of the patrol's field administrative structure in 14 years.

The new zone, including Monterey, San Benito, San Luis Obispo, Santa Cruz, Santa Barbara and Ventura counties, will be effective Jan. 1.

Supervising Inspector E. B. Taylor will command the new district, which will have temporary headquarters in San Luis Obispo.

Bolinas PUD Money Pinch Tied To Grants

The Bolinas Community Public Utility District's financial deficit was caused by emergency measures last summer and a waiting period for state and federal grants, according to district board members.

The financial statements, submitted to the board Wednesday by clerk Lyman Robinson, show the district has overspent its budget in the past three months by $7,662 and would run $53,519 in the red for the three months ending Dec. 31.

Most of the past deficit, both the board and Robinson agreed, was caused by extra charges, amounting to $5,896 more than the budgeted $1,250, for emergency pumping of water supplies during the summer. Fuel and power used in the pumping added $836 to a budgeted $380.

Robinson said the district's low cash balance of $2,902, as of September 30, has required getting a $27,950 advance on property taxes from the county. The money can be spent only on operations. He estimated operating expenses for the following three months at $17,662, leaving a surplus of $10,288 in that account.

He projected a $63,807 deficit by December 30 in the capital expense category. The district has bills totaling $85,709 and only $21,902 to pay them, he said. Available money includes a $2,902 cash balance and $19,000 in revenue from water bills.

Directors said that some $75,700 of the capital costs expenses would be repaid by state or federal grants. Some smaller bills have already been paid. They said contractors billing on the refundable projects will have to wait for their money until the district received its grants.

Painting Display

Paintings by 36 students of Troy Ruddick of San Anselmo will be displayed at the Ross Valley Medical Clinic from Nov. 3 to Dec. 7.

Mill Valley Performers Lack Vitality In 'Streetcar' Opener

By GERALD GENESE

New York Times critic Brooks Atkinson defined "A Streetcar Named Desire", by Tennessee Williams, as "a play about an unequal contest between the decadence of a self-conscious civilization and the vitality of animal aimlessness."

The Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts production of Williams' play has the self-consciousness and the aimlessness, but not the vitality. It is the group's first show of the new season.

Williams' play centers around the relationship between Blanche Dubois, played by Mary Ellen McCurdy and Stanley Kowalski, played by Will Marchetti. Miss McCurdy portrays Blanche's self-consciousness in an affected manner which makes it difficult for the audience to get involved with Blanche and feel sympathetic for her plight.

Miss McCurdy does have one very effective moment in the play. In a well staged scene by director Paul Shepherd, Blanche confesses to her suitor, Mitch, effectively played by Mel Berman, about her young husband's tragic suicide years ago. As she speaks Blanche gets lost in her thoughts and becomes mesmerized by the flickering candle that lights the shabby apartment.

"A STREETCAR NAMED DESIRE" — A three-act play by Tennessee Williams. Presented by the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts. Produced by Sali Leiberman. Directed by Paul Shepard. Set design, John Gerrity; lighting, Robin Jackson; sound, John Engram; costumes, Jay Harvey and Kathleen Frederick. The cast: Mexican woman, Bibi Small; Stella Kowalski, Carol Kravetz; Eunice Hubbell, Marion Eaton; Young boy, Jay Morris; Stanley Kowalski, Will Marchetti; Mitch, Mel Berman; Blanche Dubois, Mary Ellen McCurdy; Steve Hubbel, Dale R. Kleine; A young collector, Steve Maek; Nurse, Carol Sigurdson, and doctor, Pat Vaughn.

The scene becomes more surrealistic as you hear the music box quality of "Put Your Little Foot Right There". Blanche is finally brought back to reality when she connects with the image of her husband placing the revolver in his mouth and blowing the back of his head off — "because on the dance floor, I'd said 'you disgust me'."

For "Streetcar" to be at all effective, Stanley Kowalski must think with his crotch and not his head. Stanley, although crude by circumstance, is by instinct an animal, and most animals are graceful. Shepherd does not elicit the sexuality and gracefulness from actor Will Marchetti. What remains is a cold, calculating man. So when Stanley rapes Blanche in the final scene, one feels that all he has violated is her intellect and not her whole being.

The most interesting performance of the evening is turned in by Carol Kravetz as Stanley's wife Stella. A deadringer for songstress Bett Midler, Miss Kravetz, gives a nicely textured performance. She is always patient with Blanche's difficult ways and understands her relationship with Stanley. She loves him because he is great in bed. In this maelstrom of emotion, Stella remains constant. Miss Kravetz must be careful, though, of upstaging herself. In her first scene with Blanche, she delivers most of her lines upstage. With more experience, Miss Kravetz will be a very good actress.

"A Streetcar Named Desire" will run Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. through Nov. 24. The theater is located at 267 Buena Vista Avenue, Mill Valley.

Any Future Executions To Be In San Quentin's Gas Chamber

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —After studying many alternative methods of executing criminals, state corrections officials have decided to continue using the gas chamber at San Quentin for any future executions.

The study was ordered by Gov. Ronald Reagan to determine if there is a more humane way of executing criminals than through use of the gas chaober. He had raised the possibility of fatal injections similar to those used by veterinarians on animals.

State Corrections Director Ray Procunier yesterday said Corrections Department officials conducted an "informal review" of alternative methods and concluded they "offer no advantage" and would provide "no less personal anxiety."

A department spokesman said possible alternatives to the gas chamber ranged from hanging, electrocution and the firing squad to lethal injections and vacuum chambers from which oxygen would be withdrawn, to offering a convict suicide or death without warning was also considered.

All were rejected, he said, on legal, religious, practical or family grounds.

"Nobody enjoyed the review," he said.

Procunier, who said the study started several months ago while the legislature was debating a bill which restored capital punishment in California, reported the gas chamber will be used for future executions.

It last was used in 1967 when Aaron Mitchell was executed for the slaying of a Sacramento police officer. The chamber has been regularly maintained and inspected since then. The new death penalty law takes effect Jan. 1.

Procunier said department officials, in arriving at their conclusion, noted contentions that "death in the gas chamber is physically painless."

Higher Court Due Theft Case

A Corte Madera teenager must go to trial in Marin Superior Court for allegedly burglarizing a Larkspur home in March, a municipal court judge has ruled.

Enough evidence exists to try Travis Dean Hayes, 18, Judge Gary W. Thomas decided Thursday after a preliminary hearing. Hayes was ordered to appear Nov. 5.

He is accused of taking jewelry, tape recorders and cash from the Paul Carroll home on Wilson Way.

'Drug Diversion' Program Is Hailed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unique "drug diversion" program, under which a drug violator is given the choice of education and treatment instead of arrest, was termed a success yesterday by the state Department of Justice.

In a report from the Attorney General's office, it was estimated that a total of 43,000 cases will have been diverted from the courts when the program ends in 1975.

The program, now being utilized in 49 of California's 58 counties, was made possible by the state's 1972 Drug Abuse Law.

Under the measure those violators who qualify are referred to community resources for education, treatment or rehabilitation for from six to 24 months.

Those who successfully complete the program have the original charges against them dismissed.

Defendants arrested and convicted for any offense while under the program are referred to the court for arraignment as if they had not been diverted. "If utilization of a program is a criteria for the measurement of success, this program certainly qualifies," the report said.

It also added, "In general, probation departments are laudatory about the concept of the program."

Since the program was initiated Dec. 15, 1972, about 2,000 cases a month have been undertaken. The report estimated that the annual cost of the program to county probation departments, watchdogs of the cases, at $4.5 million.

A sampling of the individual cases also showed that nearly 60 per cent of those diverted were from 20 to 24 years old, 83 per cent were white, and 75 per cent were accused of possession of marijuana.

Trial Date Set For Ehrlichman, Others

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The trial of John D. Ehrlichman and three other former White House aides on conspiracy and burglary charges was set yesterday for Dec. 19.

The actual start of the trial, however, could be delayed well beyond that date by arguments over pretrial motions, including one expected from the defense seeking access to the presidential tapes.

Ehrlichman and Egil (Bud) Krogh, David Young and G. Gordon Liddy were indicted in connection with the 1971 break-in at the offices of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist by government agents seeking psychiatric data.

Word of the burglary became public during the Pentagon Papers trial earlier this year and was one of the instances of government misconduct which led to dismissal of the charges against Ellsberg and Anthony J. Russo Jr.

Superior Court Judge Gordon Ringer yesterday set the Dec. 19 starting date, but postponed until Nov. 12 a hearing on evidence discovery motions to be made by lawyers for Ehrlichman and the others.

Ehrlichman's attorney, Joseph Ball, has said he wants to listen to the tapes which he believes could "establish a direct line of presidential authorities and our defense of our national interest."

The defense contends the four were acting within the scope of their authority as government officers in defending the national interest. A motion to dismiss the charges, based on that reasoning, has been denied but may be appealed.

Prosecutor Stephen Trott told newsmen that the defense must have a reasonable basis for believing that the tapes contain information pretaining to the case before it can seek a court order.

"It's a well known fact of law that you can't go on a fishing expedition. They have to prove something exists," he said.

The only defendant present in court during Friday's brief session was Liddy, who is being held at the federal prison on Terminal Island in Los Angeles Harbor. The others are free on their own recognizance and have signed waivers of appearing during routine pretrial hearings.

Mountain Climber Takes Challenge Of Highest Peaks

By DON KEOWN

Anthony Sottile was born 45 years ago in the village of Novara on Sicily in the shadow of a forbidding rock mass called Salvatesta.

As a small lad he vowed to scale Salvatesta's sheer face, and at age 12 he accomplished that feat.

Looking back today, many climbs later, he says he knows not from where this compulsion to conquer Salvatesta came. His family was not a family of mountain and rock climbers, and, indeed, "they thought it crazy for a 12-year-old to try such a thing."

And in Novara there were no climbers — "hikers and hunters, but climbing peaks was regarded as useless and even foolhardy."

"SO," says Tony Sottile, "it must have been something deep within me that caused me to want to climb. All I know is that it was just there."

From Salvatesta's rocky top, ascended without mountaineering equipment of any kind, the young Sottile could see the much more massive Mount Etna, the highest volcanic mountain in Europe, still capable of terrible eruptions.

Etna, too, he promised himself, he would conquer some day.

Last year, visiting the country where he grew up, Sottile accomplished finally the ascent of Etna.

And with his wife Renata he stood again atop Salvatesta and recaptured the thrill he had known as a youngster who had just completed successfully his first climb.

IN BETWEEN that first climb of Salvatesta and his return with Renata in 1973 — "this time we took the easy, not the sheer, side, and used the trail" — Tony Sottile has known the challenge and the satisfaction of many climbs . . . the Matterhorn, Mont Blanc, Mount Rainier, Shasta, Grosse Glockner.

As Salvatesta once challenged and tempted the boy, so today other grander masses of rock and earth challenge the man.

The Sottiles live today in Mill Valley, and Tony works as a salesman in this area for the pharmaceutical house of Whiteworth Inc., headquartered in Gardena.

Vacations and weekends are spent at his hobby of mountaineering. His climbing takes him from Mount Tamalpais, virtually at his doorstep, to the great peaks of America and Europe.

"You don't have to be the big-muscled type in order to climb mountains," says Tony Sottile. "Most of the great alpinists I have known have not been huge men."

"Of the 52 weeks, I would estimate that I might spend 20 weekends climbing, and at backpacking and skiing to get to a climb," he says. Vacations afford him the opportunity to return to Europe where he began his mountaineering, and where he also studied medicine to the brink of a degree as a physician.

FINANCES forced him to abandon his medical studies in Europe and at age 23 he came to North America and to Canada, hoping he could complete his work over here.

But he found it virtually impossible for a student from foreign climes to win admission into an American medical school. Successive applications to Toronto, Northwestern and the University of California all failed.

So Sottile went to work in the Bay Area as a pharmaceutical salesman, a field in which he could put his medical studies in Europe to good use.

In San Francisco he met and married Renata, also Italian born. They have two children, Marco, now 12, and Laura, 11.

RENATA is not a climbing enthusiast, and the usually serious Tony smiles as he tells how he had to coax her along the trail to the top of his old friend Salvatesta.

Marco, however, has shown early signs of following in his father's footholds. At age 7 he joined his father in climbing the tough east face of Cathedral Peak in the Tuolumne Meadows area — "a vertical wall, and a tough climb for a small boy," Tony says proudly, remembering, no doubt, the tyke in Sicily who dreamed of mounting Salvatesta's sheer wall, but who had no one to assist or even to encourage him in accomplishing that goal.

As a youth, Tony Sottile's heroes were the great climbers — men like Riccardo Cassin, the Italian master of the mountains.

In the mid-1930s Tony followed avidly the news of Cassin's conquest of the Walker Spur on Mont Blanc in the Grande Jorasses between France and Italy.

He promised himself that he, too, would some day stand atop Mont Blanc. And he did that, too, on a visit to Europe this year.

"On Mont Blanc I met three other California climbers, and in our descent, on the French side, one of them fell. But we got him back onto the ridge and took him safely down," Tony relates.

SOTTILE is a man of action, not words. But once he gets to talking of climbing and mountaineering, the talk begins to come easier to him.

He speaks with special enthusiasm of winter mountaineering in which the climber must ski before he scales, and in which snow camping also plays a part.

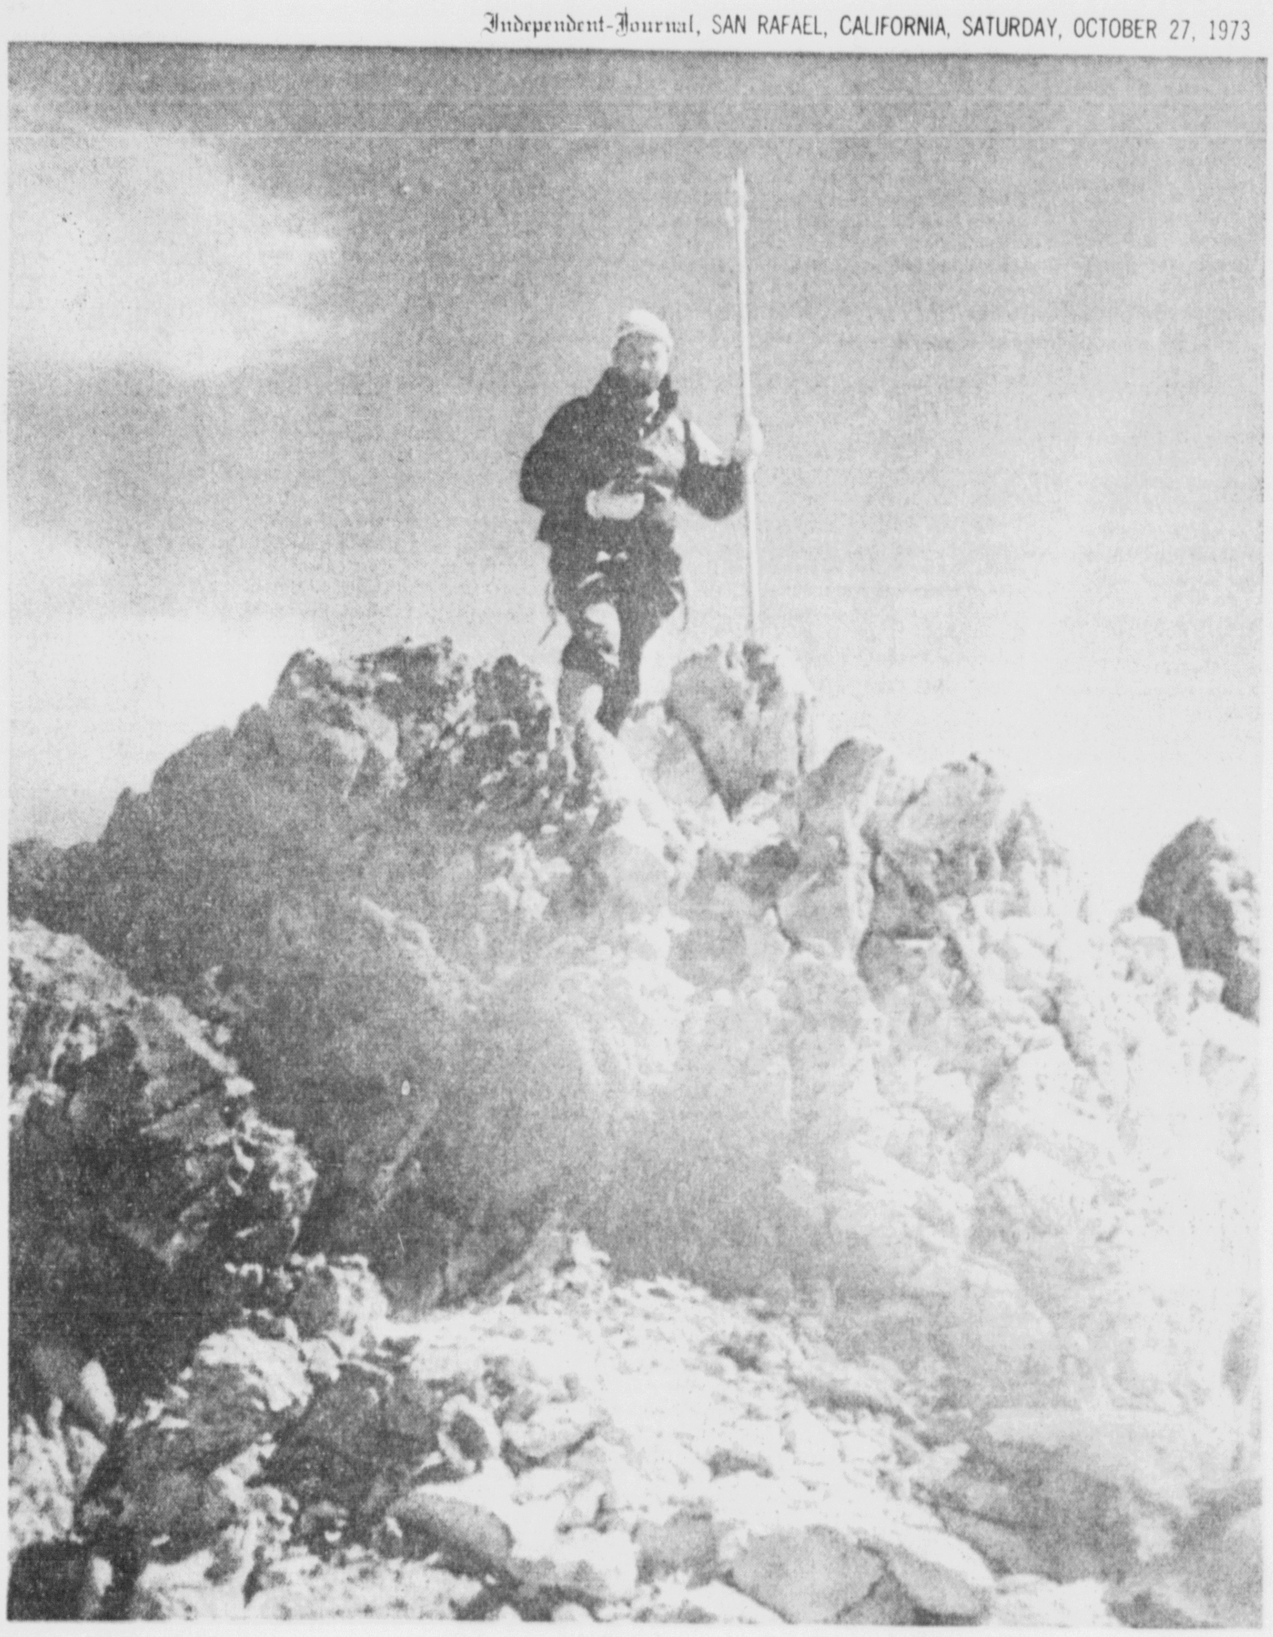

"It is much more difficult than a summer climb," he says, relishing his recollections of cold weather assaults upon such formidable points as Hotlam Glacier on Mount Shasta's north base, California's Matterhorn Peak in the Sawtooth range near Bridgeport, and Mount Williamson near Whitney, in temperatures as low as 20 degrees below zero and in winds that howled at up to 100 miles an hour, ripping tents apart.

"So, it must have been something deep within me that caused me to want to climb," Tony Sottile said. "All I know is that it was just there."

"A winter climb on ice is always tough," he says. "Usually it's a three-day affair."

Along with the usual ropes, ice axe, ice hammer, pitons ("from none to 20, depending upon the climb and climber"), slings, crampons, rapelling gear, the

Sled Dog Racing For Novatans

Marin isn't exactly the sled dog racing capital of the West, but that hasn't fazed Robert and Bella Levorsen of Indian Valley, avid racers.

"We got into this when we were in Alaska," Mrs. Levorsen said. "We saw the dog races and that was it."

When the Levorsens moved to Marin in the spring of 1968, they brought some dogs with them, raised some and bought some and now have a dozen racing dogs.

With Marin virtually free of snow, the Levorsens practice with carts instead of sleds. "We practice around here all the time . . . the practice flats around Penney's (Corte Madera) . . . around Bel Marin Keys, Mrs. Levorsen said.

FOR THOSE who want to watch dog sled racing racing teams in action, the Sierra Nevada Dog Drivers will give a demonstration, using carts, at Expo K-9 and K-9 Kapers, being presented by Blue Ribbon Dog Breeders Inc. at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building, San Rafael, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. tomorrow.

During the racing season, which starts within the next few weeks, the family travels long distances with the dogs in a special trailer to compete.

This season's schedule starts with cart races in Santa Rosa Nov. 10, and then sled races at Hobart Mills, Jan. 26-27; Susanville, Feb. 2-3, Hobart Mills, March 2-3, and Tahoe City, March 9-10.

"SOMETIMES we go to Southern California or Oregon, and a lot of us go to Idaho and Wyoming," she said.

"We have to do it on a weekend usually leaving Friday night to get there and leaving Sunday to get back," and along with the traveling, "we still have to take care of the dogs . . . they all have to be walked, fed and watered," Mrs. Levorsen said.

Levorsen, a Standard Oil Co. executive, along with racing, serves as president of the International Sled Dog Racing Association, and was busy last week at the annual association meeting at Anchorage, Alaska.

But, Mrs. Levorsen said, her daughter, Daphne, a student at the College of Marin "is really the best dog musher."

MRS. LEVORSEN, no slouch herself on the race trails, is editor of a book by George Attla, 1972 world champion entitled, "Everything I Know About Training and Racing Sled Dogs."

"We knew him in Alaska," Mrs. Levorsen said. "He put it on tape and I took it off and put it in the book," she said.

Mrs. Levorsen said sled dog racing, a growing sport, has attracted up to 800 persons at a single race and prize money last year in the Sierra-Nevada region reached $16,025.

While the nonracers think races involve "big teams," most people are running three dogs, she said. "We are not in freight racing or weight pulling."

PEOPLE ordinarily think of a Siberian Husky, Malamute or Samoyed when thinking of sled dogs, but Mrs. Levorsen said racers are using Dalmatians, Dobermans and other breeds. "Dalmatians are good racers," she said.

A trained racing dog costs $100 or more, and a skilled leader can cost more than $1,000, and sleds cost from $100 to $250.

Sled dog racing is held in three classes, the A or open class, where there isn't any limit on the number of dogs, the B class where teams are limited to three to five dogs and the C class for three-dog teams.

The teams start one at a time, at regular intervals, and each team is timed

PROFILE OF A MARINITE

Carl Riznik, Retired Manufacturer, Bustles Through Varied List Of Local Activities

Carl Riznik of Ross is the picture of a happy man when he says, "my activities interfered with my business," and so, four years ago, he gave up the business.

Today, the retired uniform manufacturer contentedly bustles from one activity to another. His time is divided among the Ross Valley Players, his Masonic lodge, the Marin Art and Garden Center, the Cotillion and even, a gentleman's auxiliary to the Needlework Guild.

Riznik's life was not always such a leisurely pursuit of his interests, however.

He was born in Austria in 1905 but does not remember his childhood there since he came to San Francisco with his family in 1907.

"MY FATHER had read about the San Francisco earthquake and fire and thought it would be a good place to go into business," he reminisced.

"We're so busy — the phone's always ringing," says Carl Riznik who is retired, but far from inactive.

The elder Riznik, who had been in the beer business in Austria, got his start in San Francisco by going about with a basketful of articles, most of which he sold for five cents.

He soon found that San Francisco firemen were among his best customers, and he began to stock armbands and other articles which they wanted. The basket grew larger ("when I was a child it was so big I could play in it," Riznik said), then a horse and wagon was used by the father in his rounds and finally, he bought a store.

"We lived in the back," Riznik remembered.

DURING the years young Riznik was growing up, his father continued to sell various clothing and equipment articles, especially to the firemen.

Young Riznik graduated from Lowell High School (he was a classmate of former Gov. Edmund G. Brown there and Riznik's only political venture was to support Brown in his candidacy), and then he went on to earn a degree in economics at Berkeley.

When he graduated from the university in 1927, he intended to go into foreign trade, but, for two reasons, he changed his mind.

First, there was a worldwide depression underway and foreign trading jobs were not only scarce but paid $50 a month to new job holders. Further, young Riznik, through his father, had parlayed $250 worth of police and fire uniforms into several thousand dollars, while he was still in school.

HE BOUGHT the uniforms from a clothing company at a bargain price and then sold them to police and firemen in the East Bay at a tidy profit.

"So I decided to go into the business," he said.

Under the name of L. Riznik (his father's name), Riznik continued in the uniform business for more than 40 years.

He learned tailoring "but not to sew," so that he could manage the business but not do the work himself. Sales was Riznik's long suit — he never did manufacture many articles but maninly contracted for them.

During his first years in business, friends used to say, "I thought you were going into foreign trade."

RIZNIK used to reply jokingly with a favorite theory of an ROTC colonel he had known at the University of California. The colonel had maintained that this country "gets into a war about every 20 to 25 years" and predicted a big one sometime between 1938 and 1943.

"My father had read about the San Francisco earthquake and fire and thought it would be a good place to go into business," Carl Riznik reminisced.

Riznik would tell his friends that the uniform business was going to be very good about that time.

"The day Germany invaded Poland in 1939, I got goose pimples" remembering all the times he flippantly had predicted a war, Riznik said.

During World War II Riznik was extremely busy, processing and selling military unfirms, with his beloved wife, Matilde (Til) whom he married in 1935, working along with him.

Through the years, Riznik balanced his "activities" in Marin along with his business but during the war years, he had to give up all but his work.

Since they were first married, the Rizniks had lived in Marin, first in a summer home of his parents where they stayed for a time. Then they bought 60 acres atop a hill in Ross from the Kent family for an astonishingly low price.

"PEOPLE said we were crazy," Riznik said, because the property only had a crude dirt road access and no water or sewers.

He and his wife persisted with their dream to build a house, but when the first design they had drawn was bid at $80,000 , they settled on a less ambitious plan.

Today, the Rizniks only own three of the original acres but they still have one of the most magnificent views in the county from atop Upper Road West with the bay, Mount Tamalpais and the wooded slopes spread out before them.

Their home is a busy one with gatherings of the various groups to which they both belong along with a constantly ringing phone.

The Rizniks have been members of the Ross Valley Players since 1936, and Riznik's job this year is selling evening performances of the shows to various sponsoring groups who then sell the tickets.

He is proud of the fact he has shows in February already sold despite the fact that the play has not yet been chosen.

He also long has worked with the Marin Art and Garden Center, where his most recent project has been working toward getting groups and individuals to pay off a mortgage.

For the Masons, he often plans a "mystery trip," where members board a bus for an evening at a surprise restaurant or hotel Riznik has chosen.

He also helps his wife with her Marin Music Chest activities and even goes along with her to Needlework Guild conventions. He belongs to the "gentleman's auxiliary" of this group and said he meets "nice, little old ladies" at the Needlework gatherings in other parts of the country.

"We're so busy — the phone's always ringing," Riznik, obviously a man happy in retirement, concluded.

Mount Tamalpais Good For Beginning Mountain Climbers

MARIN LIVING

ASCENDING MOUNT BLANC in the Grande Jorasses between France and Italy, Anthony Sottile of Mill Valley, works carefully at his task, one of the high points of his career. Even in the summer climb visibility was zero when he and a Frenchh alpinist reached the summit.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBER Anthony Sottile of Mill Valley, is never far in thought from mountaineering, as he spends time at home checking over his ropes, which have saved his life, and his backpacking equipment.

winter mountaineer must also take a lightweight tent as waterproof and wind-resistant as possible, and a good down sleeping bag with insulating pad underneath.

"THAT insulation is vital," Sottile says. "Otherwise the cold will work its way right through the bag, and the sleeper will suffer hypothermia — the lowering of the blood temperature —and freeze."

Winter clothing different from the garb for a summer climb must be worn.

And the skis upon which the mountaineer will rely to reach the steeper ascent point must be fitted with steel knives (in French, "cuteau") and sealskins or artificial fibers, for traction on the wind-glazed ice that usually replaces snow.

Tony Sottile has summertime high-points in his climbing career upon which to look back, too.

He has climbed in Europe's Alps, and in 1950 scaled the Matterhorn, of such symbolic importance in any mountain man's career.

His ascent of Mont Blanc was a summer climb, accomplished with a French alpinist, but even in that season, visibility was zero when they reached the summit. "But up until the last 1,000 meters, we had good visibility and marvelous views."

IN THE Dolomites on the Austrian-Italian border he has enjoyed some of his best climbing.

Grosse Glockner in the Tyrol near Salzburg is another memorable and difficult climb.

While the layman usually regards a scaling of the Matterhorn as the mountaineers' biggest test, outside the Himalayas, Sottile says: "The ridge I took on the Matterhorn wasn't all that tough. I was only 23, and not ready for the hard ones."

Still, a conquest of the Swiss mountain is a prerequisite for any mountaineer before he is admitted to the elite ranks of the expert climbers.

In this country, Sottile has made such climbs as Mount Rainier, Mount Baker, Shuksan, Lover's Leap on Highway 50 with its class six vertical walls, and in Yosemite National Park the Royal Arches, High Spire, Washington Column and El Capitan's east buttress.

CLIMBS ARE rated from Class two (hiking) to class six (straight up, ascended only with "artificial" devices —pitons and slings — and with the body and feet out of all contact with the rock surface.)

Tony Sottile has done them all, and without injury.

"Oh, I have fallen into crevasses," he says. "That is part of climbing. But the ropes have always saved me."

In a two-man or team climb, he notes, the lead or top man carries by far the heavier responsibility and strain. Thus when he and his 7-year-old son climbed Cathedral Peak, the father led the way.

Tony feels that he and other Marinites interested in mountaineering are extremely fortunate to have Mount Tamalpais in their own backyard.

"It's an excellent place to start your rock climbing," he says. "The basics — the right posture, the correct balance, the proper use of the equipment — can be learned there. And it's great back-packing. I know every inch of Tam's trails. I've jogged over them all many times."

Jogging is only one of the exercises Tony resorts to in order to keep his compact five-foot nine-inch, 170-pound frame always hard and fit between climbs.

HE BICYCLES, skindives and plays tennis, among other activities.

"But," he admits, "I find most of it pretty boring, in comparison to climbing."

In his eating, he avoids "fancy diets" and takes no vitamin tablets. "You can get enough of the nutrients from your fruits, vegetables and meats," he says. "The main thing is not to overeat. You can control your appetite — in fact, all your urges — with your mind, if you have the self-discipline to do it."

Being Italian, he admits: "I enjoy wine with my meals."

Like most devotees of a sport, Tony

Anthony Sottile Plans Class To Introduce Mountaineering

Sottile has his own personal heroes among the greats of climbing.

His main idol is Paul Preuss, the Austrian who accomplished some 2,000 first ascents before he died in 1913 at age 27 "in a fall in a sudden storm on a peak that had nothing to do with any technical mistake on his part."

"HE WAS the greatest," asserts Sottile. "He climbed solo — "allein" in German — and without much of today's fancier equipment."

A highpoint in Tony Sottile's life was a visit to the Preuss tomb in the Tyrol in the great climber's hometown of Altaussee, "surrounded by rocks that almost dwarf Yosemite Valley's walls, and near a crystal-clear lake."

Walter Bonatti is another name Scottile mentions with the greatest of respect.

Tony Sottile has introduced "a lot of people" to mountaineering, including fellow Marinites. Now he would like to organize classes on a more formal basis.

His plan would be to devote his own spare time to such instruction for a select class chosen for its mental and psychological aptitude for mountaineering, as well as for physical prowess and interest.

"YOU DON'T have to be the big-muscled type in order to climb mountains," Sottile says. "Most of the great alpinists I have known have not been huge men.

"But you do have to have the right mental attitude toward climbing. Otherwise, muscles will never get you up that mountain."

Sottile invites those who feel they might qualify for such a class to contact him through the Mountain House in Kentfield.

His class will differ from other existing mountaineering schools, he says, in its selectivity of its students — only those whom Sottile regards as good prospects for climbing will be accepted. And it will differ, too, in the scope of its curriculum.

For instance, his camping and wilderness survival expertise will be shared with his pupils. "It is amazing how many people get out into the wilderness without knowing the least thing about it," he says."They don't know how to build a fire, or when a fire should not be built. They don't know whether to bury their garbage or to pack it out. Backpacking is an integral part of mountain climbing because you often have to make long hikes with loads of up to 70 pounds of equipment and supplies in order to reach the starting point of your climb.

"AND, of course, the longer climbs involve overnight camping, with a minimum of gear."

For students desiring such advanced instruction, there could also be lessons in cross country skiing and snow camping to open up for them, too, the enjoyment and thrills of winter climbing.

What would his pupils derive from such rigorous instruction?

"A school of mountaineering is, and should be, a school of courage and a school of self-control," Sottile says. "It teaches a measure of self-discipline that could come from few other sports."

Then, too, there is the pleasure of the vista enjoyed from a mountain crest, and the satisfaction of having conquered a peak to stand where few other men have trod.

Ecology would be important in his course, Sottile says.

"Have you ever seen in the summer how many cans and how much garbage are strewn along the trails?" he asks angrily. "And how much wood is burnt unnecessarily?

"THIS IS especially tragic at high altitudes. A little plant that is carelessly ripped up or tromped upon may have taken 10 years to grow. What requires a year of growth at normal altitudes may well take a decade or more at the high altitudes.

"To destroy this kind of life is a crime."

Sottile stresses that the proposed mountaineering class will be only a spare-time pursuit for him. He plans to remain in the pharmaceutical sales field, which has also given him satisfactions of a different kind, and financial security.

Meanwhile, on vacations and weekends, he'll continue to seek out towering rock walls and lofty peaks that will challenge his skill and experience and spark his sense of adventure.

For instance, the Himalayas, most majestic of mountains, beckon enticingly.

Not particularly Mount Everest, despite its publicity as the ultimate in mountain climbing.

"To me, these assaults upon Everest by large parties with elaborate equipment and oxygen masks are a kind of insult to the mountains," Sottile says. "I think it should be man against the mountain. Not sheer numbers or technology against the mountain."

EVEREST, he says, is, via its South Col, not a particularly difficult climb technically. "The big problem is the altitude. And, of course, the severe storms and winds."

Sottile says he has talked to the incredibly tough little Sherpa guides and porters who talk of ascending up to 25,000 feet without masks, and while carrying tremendous loads.

But Everest is another four thousand feet above that mark.

However, Sottile points out, there are many, many peaks in the Himalayas from 25,000 to 27,000 feet that have never been ascended by man, and which offer technically more difficult climbing than Everest. Those are the kinds of mountains that Tony Sottile would like to pit himself against some day.

In the meantime, much closer to home, there is the Sierra with its thousands of peaks, every one of them a challenge of the kind that the rock mass called Salvatesta once posed for a small boy in Sicily.

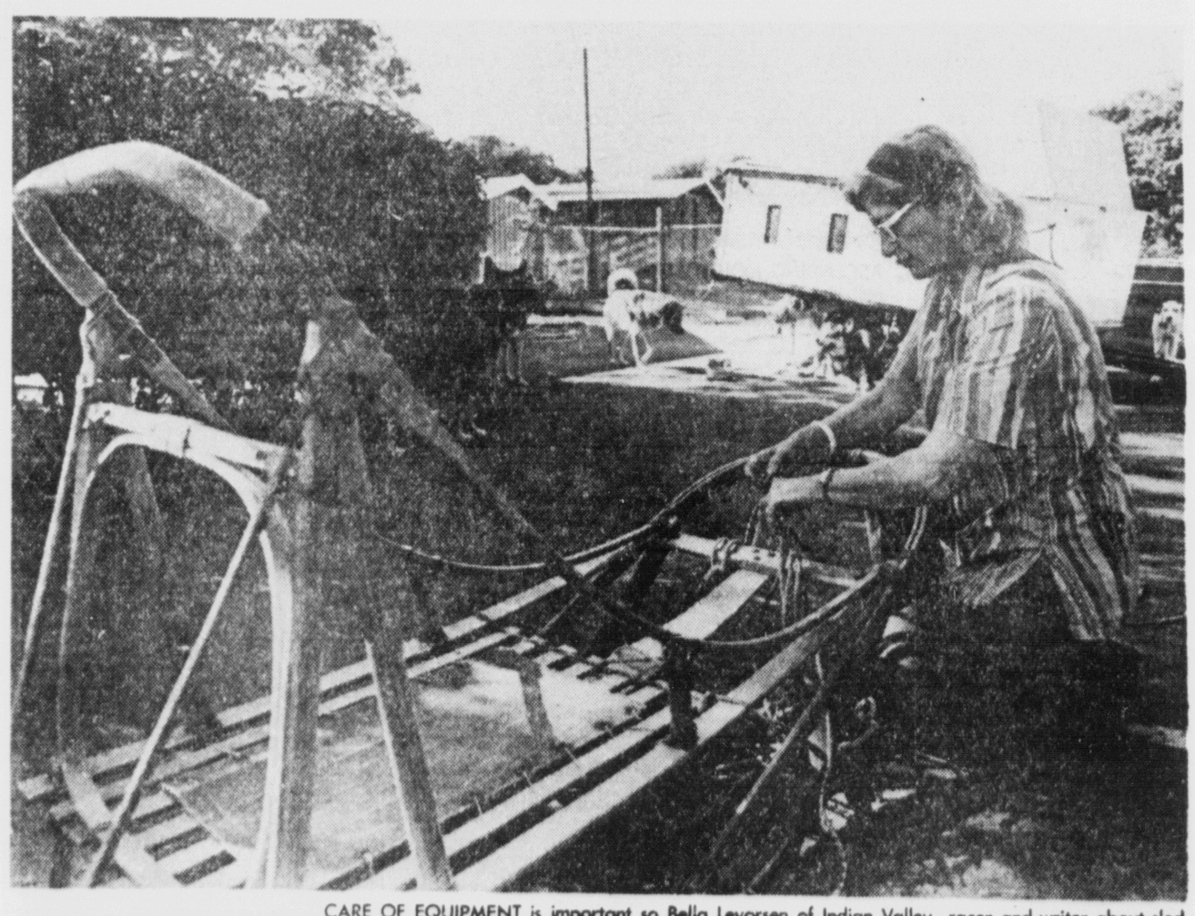

"To me, these assaults upon Everest by large parties with elaborate equipment and oxygen masks are a kind of insult to the mountains. I think it should be man against the mountain. Not sheer numbers or technology against the mountain."

"It's an excellent place to start your rock climbing, XX" experienced mountain climber Anthony Sotille of Mill Valley said of Mount Tamalpais. "The basics — the right posture, the correct balance, the proper use of the equipment — can be learned there. And it's great back-packing. I know every inch of Tam's trails. I've jogged over them all many times."

UP THE SIDE of Cathedral Peak in the Tuolumne Meadows area of Yosemite Park, a vertical wall, goes Anthony Sottile of Mill Valley, and accompanying him on the climb, was his son, Marco, then seven, who was just out of the photo range.

separately, to avoid traffic jams along the trail.

Class A teams travel from 10 to 20 miles each day, B teams from five to 10 miles and C teams from three to five miles. Junior teams usually race about a mile-and-a-half and Peewees, a hundred yards or so.

ACCORDING to the Sierra-Nevada Dog Drivers there has been a sled dog race in California every year since the 1920s except during World War II when most sports were cancelled.

The International Sled Dog Racing Association reported this summer that the sport is growing with the number of racing weekends increasing from 93 in 1967 to 181 this year.

Mrs. Levorsen said several racers live in Marin with Bruce Schoenfeld of Ross, serving as a photograph of racers, and Randy Johnson of San Rafael as a statistician for the international association.

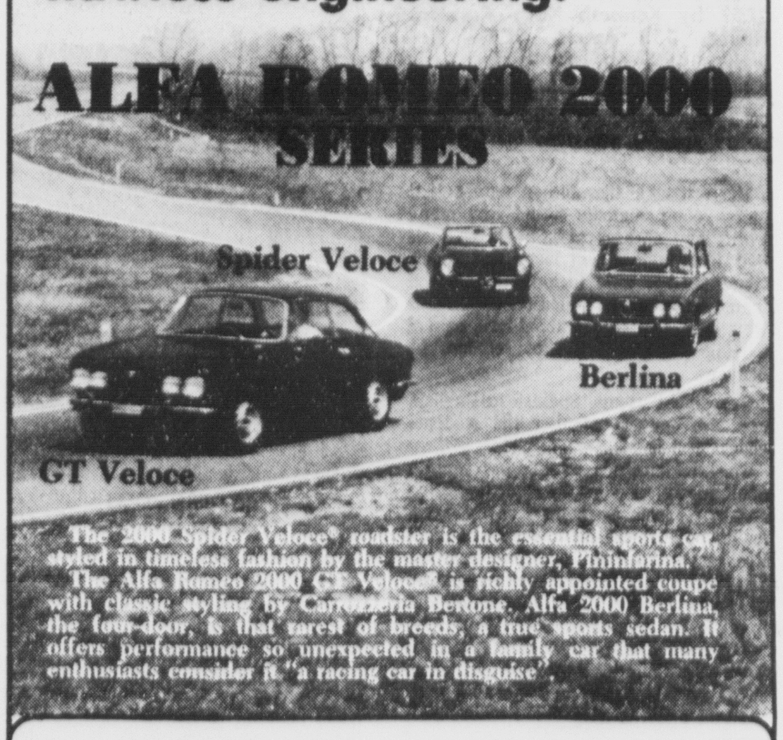

For those "who want to get started with a few dogs," Mrs. Levorsen has edited "Mush," a beginner's manual of sled dog training, which covers all aspects of the sport.

"The only qualities a dog really needs to be a racing sled dog are medium size, racing build, strength and a desire to GO."

Sugary Tale Of Longtime Love

GARSON KANIN
Tells of love

A THOUSAND SUMMERS by Garson Kanin: Doubleday, 246 pages, $6.95 Reviewed by Dianne E. Green.

"A Thousand Summers" is like a thousand songs written in the best country and western tradition. One can almost hear Tammy Wynette yodelling the tale of the star-crossed lovers who couldn't make it to the alter because" . . . each was mah-reed to ano-oth-err."

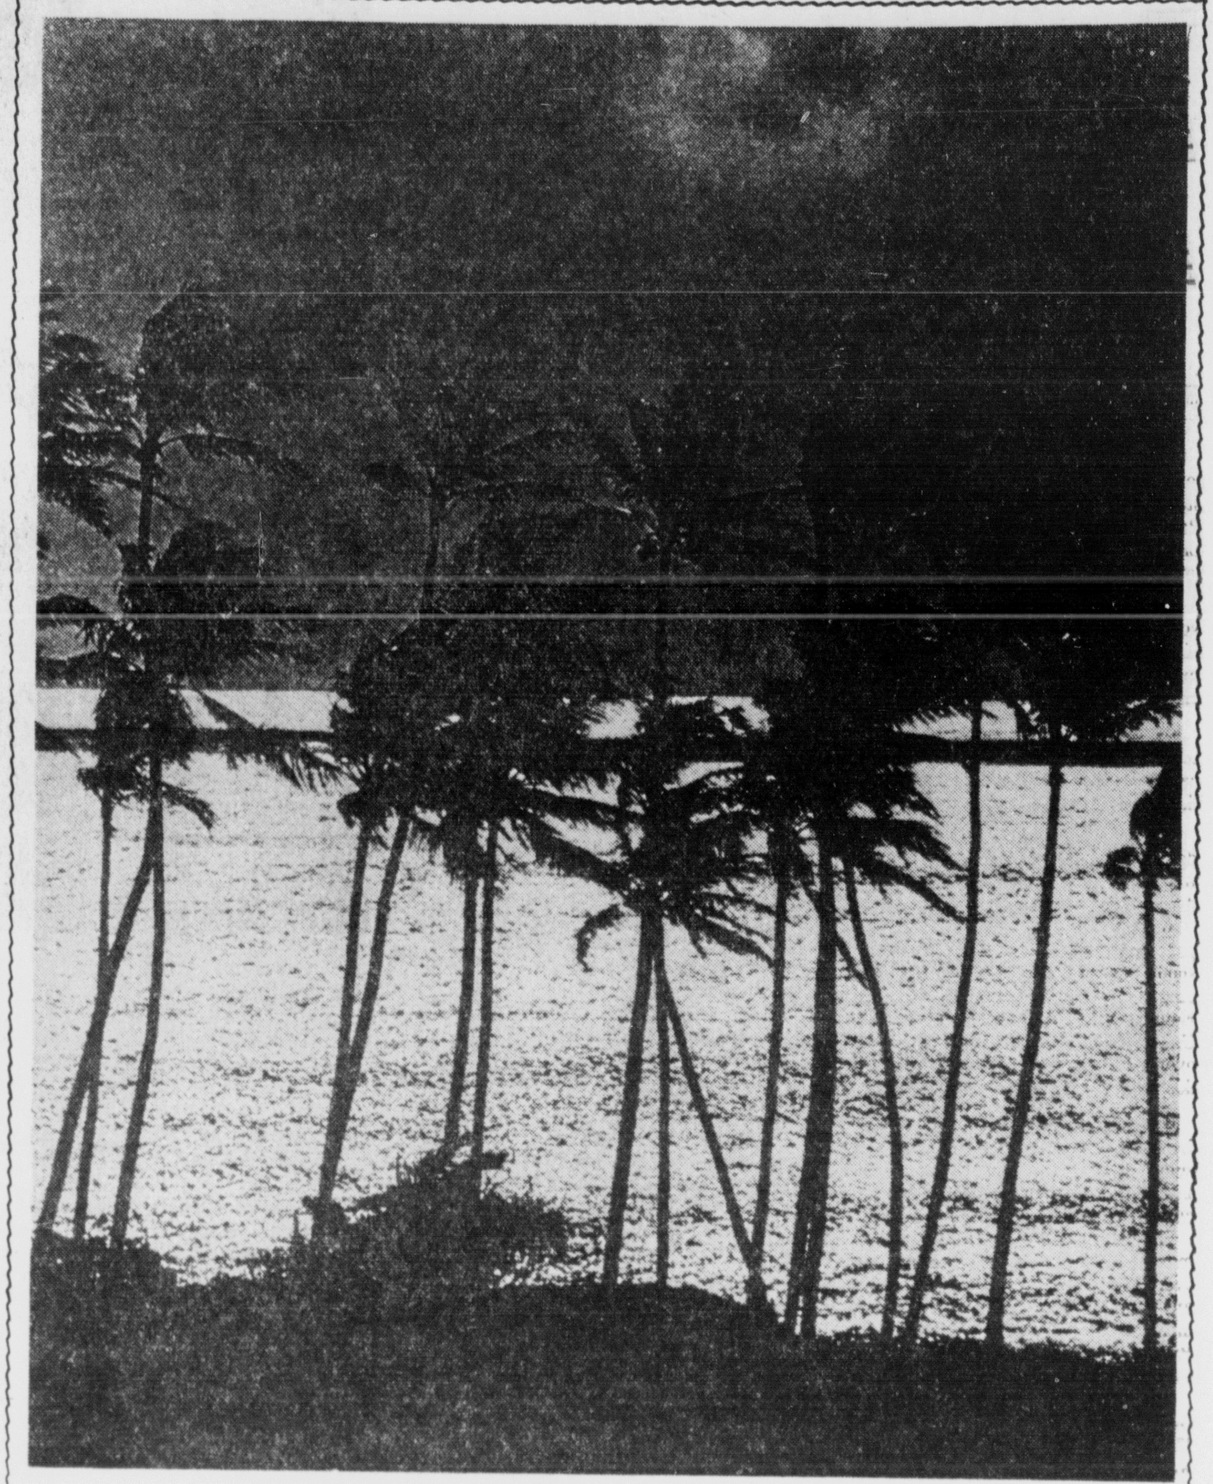

Sheila is a beautiful diplomat's wife who is inthe habit of having cinders removed from her eye by small-town druggists. Freeman, the druggist in question, is happy to oblige and this little episode is the occasion of their falling immediately and irrevocably in love . . . a love that will endure for a thousand summers.

The fact that their relationship is never tested by the day-to-day drudgery of married life no doubt contributes to its longevity. In case the reader is skeptical as to why the couple would let obstacles stand in the way of timeless love, the author supplies the equally timeless answer that each is so unselfish that he does not wish to hurt his legal spouse.

Years pass between the lovers' encounters but the affair continues as they meet each other in the most thrilling times and places: Paris, war-time London and a half-dozen American cities. To defray the expense of such a global affair, the druggist has most prudently and in the greatest spirit of altruism, invented an insect repellent. The royalties have made him wealthy.

Unfortunately, Sheila dies halfway through the story as a result, we are told, of obesity brought about by her erratic love-life. Even more unfortunate, though, the story continues giving the reader a lengthy account of Freeman's slide into senility.

Aside from the flimsy plot, the book seems to be a catch-all for the author's interests in chemistry, medicine and, in particular, the customs of Japan. He tosses in words like cholesterol as though he invented them. His characters seem like puppets which he uses to act out his puerile fantasies instead of permitting them a life of their own. In all, it is a sticky sweet tale, made palatable only when taken with equal doses of sake.

Wilder, Alive, Well, Entertaining Writer

THEOPHILUS NORTH, by Thornton Wilder, 374 pages, $7.95. Harper and Row. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Thornton Wilder, author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey", "The Skin of Our Teeth", etc., still is very much alive and writing excellent, decent, remarkably entertaining prose.

His latest creation is Theophilus North, age 30, a teacher and tennis coach who Does Good — believe it or not! — for his friends and students.

Each chapter is a short story — though the characters reappear throughout the novel — about Theophilus' charitable, studied meddling in the lives of others. He cures them of headaches, finds them mates, saves them from loneliness, relieves them from the worries and pangs of old age, and encourages them To Live.

Theophilus is, in short, an angel. And he certainly should be played, on the late-late show, by Cary Grant. But he also is learned, witty, and surprisingly unself-righteous. Little of Wilder's "Our Town" sentimentality surfaces here.

This novel also is imbued with nostalgia and a delightful sense of place — enough so to send most readers hurrying off to buy a plane ticket to Newport, R.I. The year, unfortunately, is 1926 — before The Fall.

Theophilus North is a highly recommended companion — for all ages.

The Good Humor Of Victor Buono

IT COULD BE VERSE by Victor Buono; Nash, 45 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Albert F. Nussbaum.

Victor Buono is a tall, portly, balding, and bearded actor, best known for his villainous roles in movies and on television. However, he also travels a lecture circuit and has recorded at least one excellent album of comic and serious readings.

Now he has produced a slim volume of humorous verse, most of which extolls the virtue of being not big boned, heavy set, chubby, plump or stout, but FAT. As he puts it:

"When everyone's a seedless grape
It's great to be a plum."

The most refreshing thing about this book is that it doesn't claim to be more than it is. It is entertainment, not art, and Buono isn't pretentious. The reader is simply treated to examples of Buono's good humor and of his ability to see the world clearly. The verses — poems, if you want to stretch a point — are full of life and energy. One gets the feeling they were as much fun to write as they are to read.

Today, when thick diet books are constant best-sellers, there should be a place for this slender volume. Next to a cookbook, perhaps.

Frontier Doctor Colorful, All-Around Man of West

HIPPOCRATES IN A RED VEST by Barron B. Beshoar; American West, 337 pages, $9.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Dr. Michael Beshoar of Pocahontas, Ark., and Trinidad, Colo., was not your ordinary country doctor. And "Hippocrates in a Red Vest" is not your ordinary biography.

Dr. Beshoar was the kind of doctor the frontier demanded, able to "make do" with the drugs and facilities at hand, willing to make "house calls" 40 or 50 miles away by horseback, living up to the Hippocratic oath in a way to put to shame many of today's physicians. But he was also prospector, land speculator, promoter, politician, lodge officer, newspaper editor, financier and all-around booster.

Clues to the remarkable personality of this physician-surgeon who played a major role in the growth of the frontier town of Trinidad may be found in the facts that he served both in the Confederate army and (after capture by the federals) in the Union forces; and that he remained an active Mason after embracing the Catholic faith. To such a man, what could be impossible?

It takes an extraordinary biographer to do justice to a character like Michael Beshoar. And such an extraordinary biographer is his grandson, Barron B. Beshoar, who writes with humor and understanding — and without the slightest attempt to gloss over or ignore the human failings of his grandsire and subject.

There is a good deal of Colorado history in "Hippocrates in a Red Vest," too — mixed in with a whole lot of delightfully entertaining reading.

Strong Story In Sahara Gives Feel Of Outpost

KICKED TO DEATH BY A CAMEL by Clarence J. L. Jackson; Harper and Row, 161 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

To Tamanrasset, a remote and grimy hamlet on Algeria's southern border, in the very heart of the vast Sahara, comes the young American writer Roger Allenby, intent upon research for a book he is doing on the history of camels.

In Tamanrasset, Roger finds himself involved in a surprisingly cosmopolitan and mobile society. Those passing through represent many nationalities, and it soon becomes apparent that the purpose they give for their travels are not always their real reasons.

One of his fellow guests at the less-than-luxurious hotel dies, "kicked," according to the Algerian in charge of the investigation, himself something of a mystery man, "to death by a camel." Roger finds himself a prime suspect. And largely in self defense, he begins to take an active part in the investigation.

There's a large and interesting cast of characters, an ingenious plot, and a nice undercurrent of humor. But what is truly exceptional is the picture it gives of life, both settled and transient, in a Sahara outpost. One can almost taste the sand between one's teeth.

Why the author of this excellent first novel has chosen to use a pseudonym is something of a mystery in itself. Its authorship should have been a cause of considerable pride.

Agents Fight Flow Of Drugs

CONTRABANDISTA by Evert Clark and Nicholas Horrock; Praeger, 231 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Albert F. Nussbaum.

The word contrabandista is Spanish for smuggler, and this book traces the true-life efforts of U.S. Government agencies to cut off the flow of narcotics into this country.

The book opens with the arrest of Auguste Ricord in Paraguay. He was the reputed mastermind and leader of five separate heroin smuggling operations. Then the authors go on to give a step-by-step account of the police work that led to Ricord's discovery and capture. Numerous little-known facts about the mechanics and economics of smuggling are presented, and the reader learns many interesting details of police methods.

For all its authenticity the book seems to be poorly balanced, and the writing lacks polish. The amount of space given the various sections of the book doesn't appear to have any relation to its importance to the investigation or to reader interest, and many of the characters never take shape in the reader's mind. Hwever, the material is real and fascinating, and the subject has built-in drama and excitement which is so strong that even poor presentation couldn't suppress it. Fans of true crime stories will find a lot to hold their attention here.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

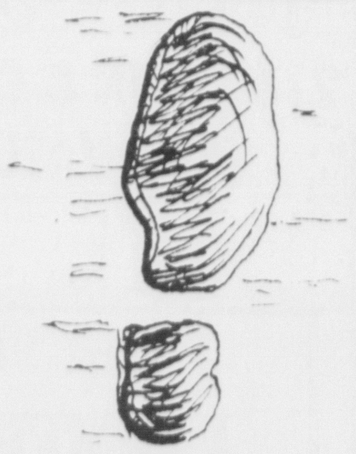

HIS BURIAL TOO by Catherine Aird; Doubleday, 182 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

A Catherine Aird detective novel doesn't move as fast as some, and the action is generally well below the frantic level. But it does sparkle with wit and humor. And, in the best tradition of the British mystery, it does contain a genuine puzzle.

In "His Burial Too" the puzzle is: How did the huge piece of statuary come to crash down onto and crush the body of Richard Tindall inside a church whose only two doors were sealed tightly by the marble wreckage? Surely the Fitton Bequest would not have toppled by itself. And yet no one was trapped inside the church by the wreckage.

It's Inspector C.D. Sloan's job to solve the puzzle, and you can bet he'll get no help from his obtuse superior Police Superintendent Leeyes, and very little from his equally obtuse inferior, Detective Constable Crosby, as well.

Still Sloan presses doggedly on, and eventually finds out how the statue was caused to topple, and who the culprit was who caused it all.

HIDE AND SEEK By Jacqueline Wilson; Doubleday, 184 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Mary Craig.

Alice, a scrawny myopic eight-year old, lives with her divorced mother in a stuffy middle-class English neighborhood. Her friend Mary is cherubic, four years old and painfully overprotected by her adoptive parents.

These unlikely friends, spirited from a nearby park, are missing several hours before alarm is sounded. Since no demand for ransom is received, the kidnapping provokes the ugliest of fears.

The author abjures mystery for sheer suspense. The reader is privy to the children's predicament, the motive of the abductor, as well as the problems of the police and the agonies of the frantic parents.

A sprightly writing style studded with contemporary English slang keeps the story moving briskly. The reader might find Alice's insight into the thought processes of her captor precocious if not uncanny. He will not, however, be startled by the ending, which he and Alice must both see coming.

Poetry Teaching Method Without Rhyme Or Form

ROSE WHERE DID YOU GET THAT RED? by Kenneth Koch; Random House, 355 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Sarah Mizel.

Kenneth Koch has written his second book about teaching children to write poetry and to understand the works of great poets.

Even though the author agrees that most young students would find many words and phrases unfamiliar, he feels that the children will learn and understand poetry. This includes the sexual theme in Donne's "Valediction." In this way the students learn about love, pain of parting and the home of reunion, he believes.

Translated poems, Spanish to English, are also taught, whether the students understand or not.

The children are told not to imitate adult poetry. "I want my students to find and to recreate in themselves the main feelings of the feelings of adult poems," Koch says. They would be free from the demands of rhyme and metre, because this would restrict their imagination and freedom, he contended.

The book contains ten chapters about Koch's method of teaching children, based on his experience working with children and teaching at Columbia University.

This reviewer wonders how anyone can teach appreciation of good poetry to children if the words and phrases are not understood, and how children can write their own poetry if there isn't any form or metre involved.

If the words written by the students do not have any rhyme or form, then they are writing prose, which is written language, without metrical structure, as distinguished from poetry or verse.

The author cannot make his own rules in teaching young children. There are basic methods in the structure of learning either poetry or prose. It is indeed one thing or the other.

As for some of the examples of poetry written by Koch's students, there is little danger of any new geniuses coming to the fore.

Walt Whitman, Emily Dickinson and William Shakespeare, rest in peace.

English Touch In Barbados

By MURRAY J. BROWN

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados — It doesn't take too long for the visitor to find out why they call this island in the Caribbean "Little England."

Like London, its capital city of Bridgetown has a Trafalgar Square with a statue of Lord Nelson, and House of Parliament. There's a Tudor Street and a Liverpool Lane and traffic keeps to the left.

It has an Oxford and Cambridge and you can go horseback riding in the highlands of Scotland district, hear a band concert in Hastings or watch a cricket match at Kensington Oval.

AN ENGLISH is the mother tongue even though Bajans, as islanders are called, speak a delightful musical dialect that often confuses visitors.

"I ain't no sex with you," for instance, does NOT mean what you think it does. It's just the Bejan way of saying he doesn't agree with you.

Actually, it's not surprising that this pear-shape island in the tropical sun should be one of the most "English" outposts in the Commonwealth. The first English settlers arrived in 1627 and the Union Jack flew without interruption over the centuries until 1966 when Barbados became an independent nation.

WHILE Barbados is — and has been for centuries — famed for its rum and sugar, it has also long been a favorite wintering resort for refugees from colder climes.

The island plays host each year to more than 200,000 visitors from the world over, but mostly from the United States and Canada. This year's guests are to include honeymooners Princess Anne of Britain, and her bridegroom, Capt. Mark Phillips.

One of the first American tourists was George Washington. He came here in 1751 with his half brother, Lawrence, who was recuperating from a lung ailment and stayed about six weeks. It was the only time the soldier — statesman who became the father of the United States was ever outside the North American continent.

THE HOUSE in which he is said to have resided still stands on Bay Street and Chelsea Road in Bridgetown. Several pages from the diary kept by Washington during his visit, praising the hospitality of the people and the beauty of the island, are on display at the Barbados Museum.

The Bajans, most of them descendants of African slaves imported to work the plantations, are still friendly toward strangers. And despite the changes over the years it is a beautiful island.

Barbados boasts some of the finest beaches in the world along its Caribbean and Atlantic coasts. Inland there are gently rolling hills, the highest is about 1,100-feet, lush with exotic tropical flowers, trees and birds.

We stopped here with other American travel writers as guests on the maiden Caribbean cruise of the Norwegian America Lines new 25,000-ton liner M-S Vistafjord. Other ports of call included Puerto Rico, Martinique, St. Maarten and St. Croix.

BARBADOS is only 14 miles wide and 21 miles long and with a fair network of roads is eady to tour by taxi, bus or car. We went by taxis, courtesy of the Tourist Board.

Highlights included Bathsheba on the northeast coast where the Atlantic surf breaks against giant boulders standing in the sea; St. John's Anglican church, which dates back to the 1650s, in whose cemetery is buried a descendant of the Byzantine dynasty of Constantinople; and the Andromea Gardens with hundreds of varieties of orchids, hibiscus, cati and other flowers and trees, owned by Mrs. Iris Bannochie. There's an admission fee.

We lunch at the nearby Sam Lord's Castle, built in the 1920s by a nortorious plantation owner and now part of a modern deluxe resort with about 75 rooms. The castle still houses a valuable collection of paintings, furnishing, crystal chandeliers and other antiques.

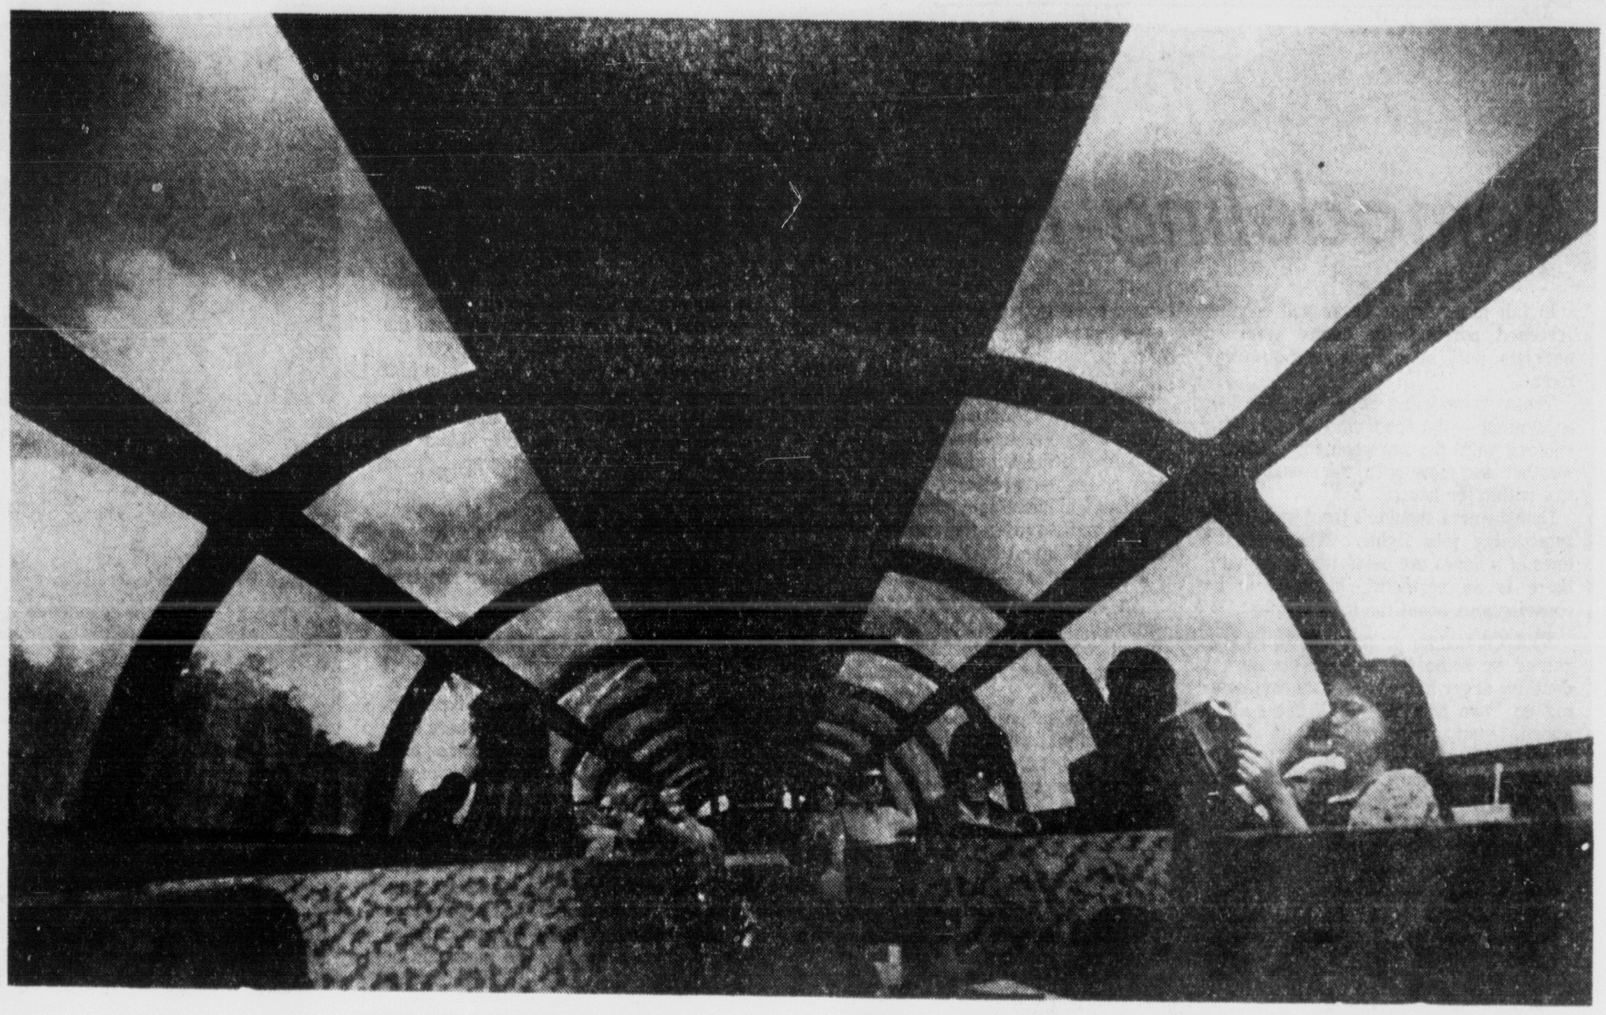

ACCORDING to legend, most were plundered from storm-driven ships Sam lured aground by hanging lanterns in trees. There's a magnificent mile-long beach, a pool, tennis courts and other sports and recreational facilities.

There are more than 100 hotels, guest houses and apartments in the 166-square-mile island. They range from comfortable six-room inns to multi-unit deluxe establishments like the 115-room Sandy Lane, 138-room Holiday Inn, 150-room Paradise Beach and 158-room Barbados Hilton. Prices vary according to the season, dropping up to 40 per cent from mid-April to mid-December.

Water sports are one of th main attractions but landlubbers can golf, play tennis, ride, hike or just sit in the sun. There are no casinos but most of the hotels offer entertainment and dancing during the winter season. There are discotheques and native night clubs which also have floor shows.

Shoppers will find duty-free bargains in British woolens, Irish linens, English bone china, Swiss watches, French perfumes, Japanese cameras, Danish porcelains and liquors, among others. Native handiworks also are available at the newly-built Pelican Village shopping center.

Five international airlines fly direct daily flights into Barbados from cities in the United States and Canada. It is also linked by air services with other islands in the Caribbean. Cruise ships call regularly at Bridgetown.

TWO OF AMTRAK'S most scenic trains, the San Francisco Zephyr between Denver and San Francisco and the Coast Starlight linking Seattle and San Francisco, will operate daily this winter, with dome cars as shown above, a feature of the San Francisco Zephyr. South of San Francisco, the Coast Starlight continues as the Coast Daylight to and from Los Angeles. (Amtrak photo)

Amtrak View: 'You're Never Lonely On A Train'

(This special assessment of Amtrak's services, as seen by a college student, resulted from an eight-week trip on dozens of Amtrak trains. The writer is a student at Baldwin-Wallace College, Berea, Ohio, and an editor of its newspaper, "The Exponent.")

By ART THOMAS

You will find that train passengers are one of the friendliest groups in the world. I don't know why this is. I just know that it is so.

One of Amtrak's slogans should be, "You're never lonely on a train."

Maybe it's because it's so relaxing. You're seeing so much and experiencing so much, and you want to share your reactions with others.

I've found my opinion is not unique among students. Hundreds of other collegians expressed similar thoughts. They were as diverse as students can . . . backpackers, surfers, bicyclists, campers . . . yet their common bond of train travel provided a means of communication and sharing.

ALMOST without exception, the train and station staff will try to make your trip enjoyable, too. You might find a few set-in-their-ways old men who are waiting out retirement, but even they can be interesting as representatives of an outgoing era.

Every major train has a red-coated P.S.R. (Passenger Service Representative) on board. Their job is to answer your questions and to help you. On many trains they can provide map-brochures so you'll know what you are seeing and where you're going. They can often also point out things — such as a nudist beach near an Amtrak route in California — that aren't on the map. The P.S.R.s generally are young people, too, and they speak your language.

Here are some tips for students thinking about taking an extensive trip via Amtrak:

1. Stop in at the nearest Amtrak ticket office well in advance of your trip to get a timetable and information about fares. If you plan to travel at peak times — over holidays or any time at all during the summer — be sure to make your reservations and get tickets well in advance.

2. Amtrak's baggage allowance is generous — besides carry-aboard hand luggage you may check three pieces totaling 150 pounds in the baggage car, but it's still wise not to take more than you can handle. Insurance is available for checked luggage, but it's advisable to carry very valuable items, such as cameras and tape recorders, right with you.

3. If you are economy-minded (as most students are) your coach seat will be your bed. You can really stretch out. I'm six-foot-two and had no difficulty. First-class sleeping accommodations called roomettes (for 1) and bedrooms (for 2) are available but cost quite a bit more. Lights are dimmed in coaches at 10, but the lounge or recreation cars are available for those who want to be up and about until later.

4. To meet students or other interesting people, head for the lounge or recreation cars. You can get a snack or a drink. You may play cards, listen to music, read or just chat with new friends. Some recreation cars have closed circuit television, showing recent feature films. Passenger Service Reps organize games.

5. LOOKING at the scenery is the most popular pastime. The Western trains in particular feature high-level or dome cars for better viewing. Riding through Glacier National Park, for example, is a trip you'll never forget.

6. A final word of warning: always wear shoes and shirts on the train. Passing through cars is sometimes tricky, and the floor moves in strange ways where the cars join. Shoes are good protection. And the food cars are after all restaurants and sanitary laws require shirts.

Sandia Peak Hiking Offers Valley View

With sturdy "waffle stompers," good company, and a knapsack filled with sandwiches and a robust red wine, you're all set for a seven-mile journey down Sandia Peak in Albuquerque.

Don't worry about going up. That's the easiest part. This unique outing starts off with either a tram or chair lift ride to the top of the 10,378 foot high Sandia Mountain.

The 2.7 mile-long Sandia Peak Aerial Tramway stretches from the edge of Albuquerque to the top of the mountain. This man-made phenomenon literally flies over rugged canyons and lush green forests en route to the top.

IN FACT, according to the American Automobile Association, it's the longest "clear span" (unsupported) tramway in the world. Cables, with a vertical rise of approximately 3,819 feet, carry two cars up the west face of the mountain in 10 minutes.

If you want to see the other side, a one-and-a-half mile chair lift ascends the northeast face of Sandia. The trip, in one of the 172 two-passenger chairs, takes about 20 minutes.

Allow yourself plenty of time at the top to enjoy a panoramic view of the Rio Grande Valley. If you let your imagination wander, you can see Francisco Coronado and his Conquistadores working their way through this section of New Mexico's unspoiled beauty.

THE JOURNEY down the mountain by foot will take four to five hours, depending on how long you stop for lunch and rest breaks. Watch the side of the trail closely for forest animals, wild flowers and other natural beauties. The halfway point is a good place to stop for lunch since the natural rock formations form perfect table tops.

Relax and enjoy your lunch but save some water for you'll find you'll need it when you reach the final desert section of the hike. It's desert.

This part of the hike is always the most difficult. Keep a sharp look out for natural streams and pace yourself. The association also advises you to stay on the trail, even if a shortcut looks possible and inviting.

Tired as you may be at the foot of Sandia, you'll never regret your adventure in this land of the bold and beautiful.

OAK ISLAND IS NEW TOURIST GOLD MINE IN NOVA SCOTIA

Oak Island, just 45 miles south west of Halifax, Nova Scotia is Canada's Treasure Island.

Believed to be the site of a fabulous pirate hoard going back to the days of Captain Kidd, the picturesque 145-acre island was flooded with sightseers this summer, watching modern explorers attempt to locate the buried treasure.

Over the years, some $2-million have been spent on the search, and six lives lost.

In 1971, a television camera as lowered deep into an excavation and revealed what was believed to be a human hand, a wooden chest, bits of decayed wood and iron.

There are no concessions on the island and automobiles are banned. But dining and accommodation facilities are plentiful on the mainland.

Tours are conducted by guides in pirate uniform, at $1 for adults, 50 cents for children, and $2.50 for family groups.

You can reach Oak Island by a five-minute boat ride on an ancient tug, or a short walk over the causeway.

The island has a pretty beach, wooded trails, and delightful scenery

Freighter Cruises Differ, Raising Many Questions

NEW YORK, N. Y. — Although freighters have been carrying passengers to all parts of the world for years, and although many freighter guides now are available, cruising aboard cargo-carrying ships continues to raise many questions.

There is some dispute among shipping officials as to whether travel aboard a freighter can be considered cruising at all.

For most cruises begin and end at the same port, where freighters usually carry passengers to a single destination. However, in recent years longer cruises have been broken up into fly-cruise segments for shorter vacations without completing the circuit.

THE QUESTION most often asked about freighters is how far ahead you have to book in order to be assured of a reservation. Steamship lines have different procedures on handling reservations. However, the usual procedure is not to accept a definite reservation until the sailing dates are announced. This might be from three months to six months before departure.

Meantime, the lines will often put you on a waiting list or else they will guarantee space. By all means get on the waiting list as soon as possible.

Most freighters carry up to 12 passengers although a few carry as many as 85 to 100 passengers. Rooms are amidship and outside. Generally most cabins are air-conditioned and have private baths.

FOOD on passenger-carrying freighters is plentiful, and many passengers claim even better than on cruise ships. They say food prepared in small quantities for consumption within few minutes is always tastier than food prepared in large quantities for consumption perhaps an hour later.

The growth of the idea of traveling by freighter is illustrated by the listings in "Travel Routes Around the World" (by Harlan Publications, Greenlawn, N. Y. $1.50). In 1935 it took only 24 pages to list all the passenger-carrying services then available. This year the book runs to 128 pages, but there is other information for passengers besides the listings. For instance, it advises on differences between a "berth liner" and a "tramp streamer."

Freighter Travel News, published once a month by the Freighter Travel Club of America (P.O. Box 504, Newport, Oregon 97365) is filled with reports by members praising or criticizing individual voyages. In addition to regular coverage of freighter trips the paper is expanding to report on any type of journey by water.

IN SAN FRANCISCO, American President Lines has formed a Freighter Cruise Center to spotlight the company's 20 cargo liners sailing on trans-pacific, Southeast Asia-Pacific, round-the-world, and intercoastal routes. The line claims, "Our cargoliners now offer weekly departures from the West Coast with accommodations equal to those of many of the best luxury lines, yet at a cost of only $25 to $30 a day."

Another expanding list has to do with sailing ships. Increasing popularity of the windjammers has encouraged operators to sail the New England coast, the Out Islands of the Bahamas, the Virgin Islands, across the Atlantic, through the Panama Canal, and in and around Europe. Voyages can run from one week to one year with passengers taking part in the work of the crew.

AUTO TRAVEL TIPS

The beginning of fatigue is a familiar feeling to many drivers. Attention starts to wander, alertness begins to fade, and in all too many cases, drivers find themselves dropping off to sleep.

Fatigue is one of the greatest hazards to travelers says the American Automobile Association, and the only real way to avoid it is to get the sleep the body demands. Fatigue can be delayed or compensated for, but nothing is as good as the proper amount of rest for avoiding it altogether.

If you do find yourself becoming fatigued during a long auto trip, here are some hints from AAA to help maintain alertness:

KEEP plenty of fresh air in the car.

Wear good quality sunglasses in bright sunlight.

Avoid heavy foods and alcoholic beverages.

Stop periodically for rest and light exercise.

This last tip is particularly important since frequent stops on a long trip can do much to offset fatigue. AAA recommends a 10-minute stop at least every two hours in addition to your regular fuel and food stops. And although sleeping in a car is not recommended, there are times when stopping for a nap is better than continuing to drive.

WHEN you do stop along the highway, be sure to follow these precautions:

Make sure you are off the highway as far as possible.

Find a lighted area.

Leave the car window open enough to give yourself a little air, but not far enough to permit entry from outside.

Make sure all doors are locked.

Never leave the engine running.

At night, leave the parking lights on but turn all other electrical equipment off.

Get out of the car and make sure you are completely awake before resuming driving.

Remember, no destination of any kind is worth a gamble with your health and safety. Don't overextend yourself: determine a reasonable distance to be covered in one day and then stop for the day.

Remodeling Needs Thought

By VIVIAN BROWN

In fall many house decks will become screened porches and many screened porches will become winter-summer rooms.

These remodeling jobs provide dual enjoyment — the opportunity to maintain contact with the environment in cooler weather and more room to expand activities within the house.

Homeowners shouldn't treat such small remodeling jobs lightly. Whenever the lines of a house are being tampered with, there is an aesthetic obligation to be conscientious about the improvement.

EVEN A builder professes to be embarrassed by some house additions he has done for eager homeowners. In commenting on "two horrible jobs," one builder added, "but don't tell anyone I did them."

The first, he said, was the full enclosure of a screened porch that had been tacked to "a beautiful old salt box," ruining the lines, in his opinion. The second was an open deck that was screened and now "resembles a rabbit hutch."

Neither was right for these houses, he observed. In each case the only question put to him was: "How much will it cost?" He thinks he could have offered some constructive suggestions, if he had been asked.

IF AN architect's services are beyond the means of a homeonwer, the project should be considered carefully. If the house is in a luxury bracket, all the more reason to protect its value. And if it is an old house with history, remodeling it without guidance could lessen its value, unless some dyed-in-the-wool house restorer should invest in it later and remove the eyesore that had been added.

An architect can make constructive suggestions about the proper pitch of the porch roof, the scale of the enclosure in relation to the house, the materials. If he is courageous, he might even suggest ripping off the porch. Some porches were mistakes that were added by enthusiastic former owners.

Few owners are equipped to make such evaluations, unless they research the project. Architectural and building books in libraries can help. But the idea must be given time.

SOME do-it-yourselfers are too egotistical to consult with anyone about a plan. They know what they can do, and they work within their limitations. But, often, that isn't enough. In enclosing a porch for winter use, an addition is really being put on a house. It may not seem so, until the room is fully enclosed.

One architect suggests this helpful hint for do-it-yourselfers: use photograph enlargements of the house to make a plan before beginning the project. Sketch the addition on several photographs, pass them around in the family.

Even then, he suggests, you might consult an architect, who might be willing to give you an opinion for a small fee. An experienced do-it-yourselfer can take it from there.

AN IMPORTANT caution for those who proceed on their own: materials should be in character with the present house. This architect has seen awning-type windows used on very old houses where they are not suitable. The foundation requires careful planning also. The elevation must be proper for the house.

If the old roof is to be saved, it will need shoring while the foundation is poured or erected. This part of the job requires expertise. The architect suggests that, in any event, it is a good idea to hire an experienced carpenter to do the framing. After that the labor can be home free.

MAKING LAZY SPACE work is a new objective of many homeowners seeking additional storage space for books, records, stereo equipment and the like. Storage room dividers like the one shown above can be constructed with wood, and an eight-page folder containing ideas for creating storage areas is available at no cost by writing Wood Products Industry Fund, P.O. Removing Finish Is Messy Project But The Rewards Can Be Satisfying

By ANDY LANG

Don't start removing the finish from an old piece of furniture unless you have made up your mind that it's likely to be a messy chore.

Once in a great while, when a wooden object has a single coat of varnish or paint on it, the finish can be taken off quickly and easily with one of the wipe on-wipe off types of removers.

Most of the time, however, the old finish is made up of many coats, applied at different times over the years, or a series of three coats applied on a single occasion.

Either way, the removal job is almost certain to be arduous, involving applying the remover, scraping it off and, in some cases, using a bleach to restore the wood to its natural color.

TROUBLESOME as it is, the removal of an old finish can be very satisfying, revealing the beauty of the wood and the chance to refinish it as you wish. When the new, usually clear finish is put on, the result more often than not is good enough to inspire you to tackle a similar job on another piece of furniture.

But when you are in the middle of the project, you're likely to have some qualms about having started it in the first place.

Varnish remover (or paint remover; it's the same thing) is put on with a brush, applied generously with full-flowing strokes. Use more of the flat of the brush than the tips of the bristles. The container will tell you how long to wait for the particular brand you are using. It's usually between 15 minutes and half an hour.

AFTER the waiting period, take a putty knife and scrape a small portion of the surface. If the old finish, which will have become bubbly and wrinkled, can be scraped off fairly easily, go ahead with the rest of the surface.

If there is too much resistance and you are able to remove only a little of the finish, it means that the remover has not penetrated deeply enough or that more remover is required.

Wait another 10 minutes, then test again. If it is still evident that the finish is not coming off, apply another coat of the remover right over the first one. Wait the required time period, then begin scraping again.

ALWAYS hold the putty knife so that the blade is almost horizontal. If held vertically, there is a chance that the blade will take off part of the wood as well as the finish.

Despite your work and your patience, you may find at the conclusion of the scraping that some color still remains in the wood. Steel wool or sand the surface and see if that does any good. If not, it is necessary to use a commercial bleach unless you plan to finish the surface with paint rather than a clear finish. If the wood is to be painted, the traces of remaining color will not affect the result.

Since both the remover and the bleach are chemicals, wear gloves when using them.

Guide To Roofing Choice

The best time to learn about roofs is before you need a new one.

Once an old roof starts leaking, your choice of a replacement will probably be rushed and cursory.

Yet, the roof you select will substantially affect the safety, appearance, value and upkeep of your home for many years go come.

FOR THIS reason, the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association recommends that homeowners learn about roofing "before the fact." It offers the following answers to some basic questions:

1. What does a shingle's "design life" mean?

It's the length of time for which the roofing can be expected to give good, maintenance-free service. The better the shingle, the longer the design life. Top-of-the-line shingles, for example, have a design life of up to 25 years — at least 10 years longer than most standard shingles.

2. WHAT does a U.L. fire-resistance label on roofing signify?

That the roofing has been tested and rated for fire resistance by Underwriters' Laboratories, an independent safety-testing organization. For example, shingles with a Class C label will not ignite easily, spread flame readily, or emit burning brands. Shingles with a Class A label will protect against "severe" fire exposure.

3. What is a fungus-resistant shingle?

One in which white mineral granules have been chemically treated to retard the growth of fungi and algae. In hot, humid areas like the South, such bacterial growth is a common cause of staining and streaking on white roofs. Fungus- and alga-resistant asphalt shingle roofs stay white longer.

4. WHAT'S the current trend in roof color?

Rustic shades are "in." These include a wide range of browns — especially popular for new "textured" shingles — olive greens and slate grays. They reflect an interest in nature, and allow color coordination of house and site. White is a perennial favorite.

5. Does roof color have anything to do with insultation?

White roofs, like white clothing, reflect heat. This helps keep a house cool.

6. Can a second roof be applied over the first one?

Depends on the materials and condition of the roof deck, so check with your roofer. Asphalt shingles can be applied over most previous roofing, saving time and tear-off costs.

7. How important is attic ventilation to a roof?

ESSENTIAL. Without proper ventilation, overheated attics can burn out shingle oils, causing the roof to wear out. They can also lead to condensation and shingle-buckling problems.

The rule of thumb for proper ventilation is a minimum of one square foot of opening for each 150 square feet of attic floor space. Half the openings should be near the floor, the rest should be high in the end walls or near the roof ridge.

8. What is a roofing square?

The amount of roofing material needed to cover 100 square feet of roof area.

More detailed information on roofing is available in a newly-revised booklet, "A Homeowner's Guide to the Selection of Quality Roofing." The 20-page brochure, which includes a color guide, can be obtained by sending 25 cents to SR&A, Box 3202, New York, N.Y. 10017.

About Carpets

by Doug Emerson

CARPET TERMS are second nature to us, so it's natural for us to talk about Olefin fibers, about cut pile and backing and broadloom, shags and plushes, without giving a second's thought to the meaning of what we're saying, since these terms are as familiar to us as a carpenter's tools are to him.

But they may be a mystery to many of you, so let's look at a few of them. You've all heard the term broadloom, for instance, but how many know that this doesn't mean a type of yarn or fabric, but any carpet woven or tufted on a broad or wide loom, at least six feet wide, and often twelve or fifteen feet wide?

Fibers are the basic "thread" of the carpet yarn, many fibers being combined to make a single yarn. These fibers may be natural, like wool, or man-made, such as the popular nylons, polyesters and acrylics.

Pile simply refers to the exposed or top surface of the fibers. When these are cut, the result is a cut pile, or plush. When looped, they create a loop pile. These can be combined in sculptured effects. Shags are loosely tufted long pile carpets, the pile being an inch or inch-and-a-half long, or longer.

But words tell only part of the carpet story. Seeing for yourself is convincing when you look over our great collection. If words fail you, the carpets won't. And you can buy on convenient "terms." Come in . . . to your carpet headquarters!

Mobile Home Boom Sign Of Inflation

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

It has three bedrooms, two baths, a family room with wood-burning fireplace, a kitchen complete with radar range and trash compactor. It's a mobile home.

No, you don't hitch it behind the family car, but it is transported to the homesite over the road, and it comes completely furnished — at a cost of around $8.75 per square foot, about half the average cost of unfurnished, conventional housing.

The price of the average mobile home ranges from around 5,000 to $12,000, depending on size, equipment and furnishings, says J.P. Hayden, Jr., president of The Midland Co., Cincinnati, Ohio. Midland makes, sells, finances and insures mobile homes.

THIS IS one reason mobile home living is being looked on as a solution to the housing needs of an increasing number of Americans — particularly young marrieds and retired couples.

According to the Mobile Homes Manufacturing Association in 1972, 97 per cent of all single family housing units selling for under $15,000 were mobile homes; 80 per cent of those selling for under $20,000 were mobile homes; and 67 per cent of those selling for under $25,000 were mobile homes.

Hayden lists among the factors in the growing popularity of this type of housing:

—Young couples looking for a home find the down payment on a mobile home much easier to manage than the larger amount generally required on conventional housing.

—The average financing on a mobile home is eight and one-half years, compared with a 20-25 year mortgage on conventional housing.

—The mobile home comes completely furnished, if the buyer so chooses.

—MORE community-style mobile home parks are being built, offering attractive settings for mobile home dwellers.

—The minimum maintenance required for a mobile home appeals to many people.

—The mobility possible is a factor for some mobile home dwellers whose jobs require frequent moves.

With costs of conventional housing, including labor, materials and land, increasing rapidly, Hayden said, mobile homes or other forms of factory-built housing such as modular homes, turned out on a mass-produced basis, will provide a practical answer to the housing needs of an increasing number of families.

This is particularly true, he said, for young families where the price of so-called "low-cost" housing has risen above their ability to pay, as well as for retired couples trying to live on a fixed income.

HERE IS YOUR ANSWER

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I intend to make a chopping board for the kitchen in our house. What kind of wood should I use?

A. — Maple.

Q. — I will be in the market soon for a radial arm saw. Can you tell me what they cost?

A. — The range is very wide — from about $100 to $400, depending on several factors, including the size of the blade. The simplest way to find out is to go shopping in several different stores.

Q. — There is a white film on about a dozen bricks on one side of our house. What is it and how can it be removed?

A. — It's called efflorescence. It's a salt deposit which is brought to the surface by water. Scrub the stains with a wire brush. Sometimes this will do the trick. If it doesn't, scrub with a solution of muriatic acid. This is a strong chemical and must be used with great care and while wearing rubber gloves. After the stain has been removed, coat the area with a clear silicone sealer.

Since the salt is washed out with water, find out how the water is getting into the masonry. Check for loose mortar especially. It might also be that excessive moisture inside the house is getting behind the exterior walls and causing the trouble. This is very likely if the wall which is stained is in the area of the kitchen or bathroom.

Q. — Can I install resilient floor tiles over old ones? Do I use the same adhesive as I did when I put down the original tiles seven years ago?

A. — Yes to both questions. It is important that the old tiles be securely attached, since if any of them become loose, the new tiles will be dislodged. Also, remember that the new insallation will raise the level of the floor. You may have to plane or sand off the bottom of one or more doors so they can be closed easily.

Q. — I am putting a new veneer top on a dining room table. After I took off the old split top, I found the surface covered with dried-up old glue. I have scrubbed and scraped it without getting off more than half of it. Any ideas?

A. — Old glue can often be softened with diluted household vinegar. Scrape as soon as the glue begins to soften. If you wait too long, it will harden again.

Let The Tots And Plants Share A Box

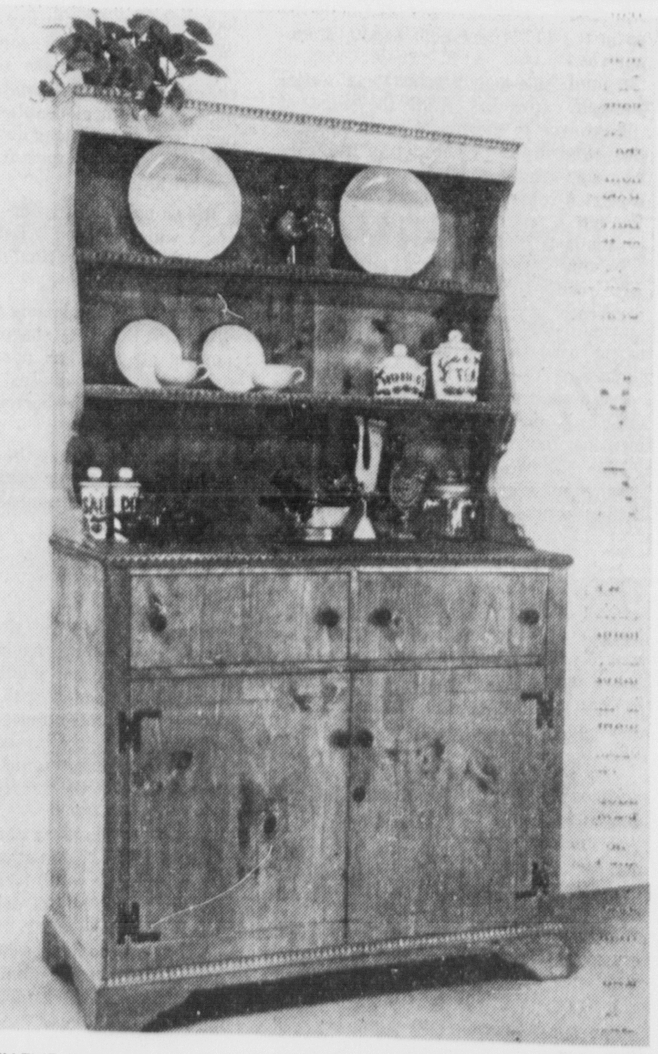

A combination planter bed and sandobx built of two-by-four-inch western cedar or fir can be adapted to fit almost any yard situation or size.

The planter and play areas are separated by a screen of spaced one-by-twos set on two-by-four stringers and four-by-four-inch posts, to keep toys and children out of the plants.

Sides of the boxes are two-by-fours, four high for the planter and three high for the sandox. They're nailed to two-by-four cedar stakes driven into the ground three feet apart.

A cap of two-by-fours laid flat runs around planter and sand box, providing a place for tots to sit. The wood should be preservative treated to prolong life.

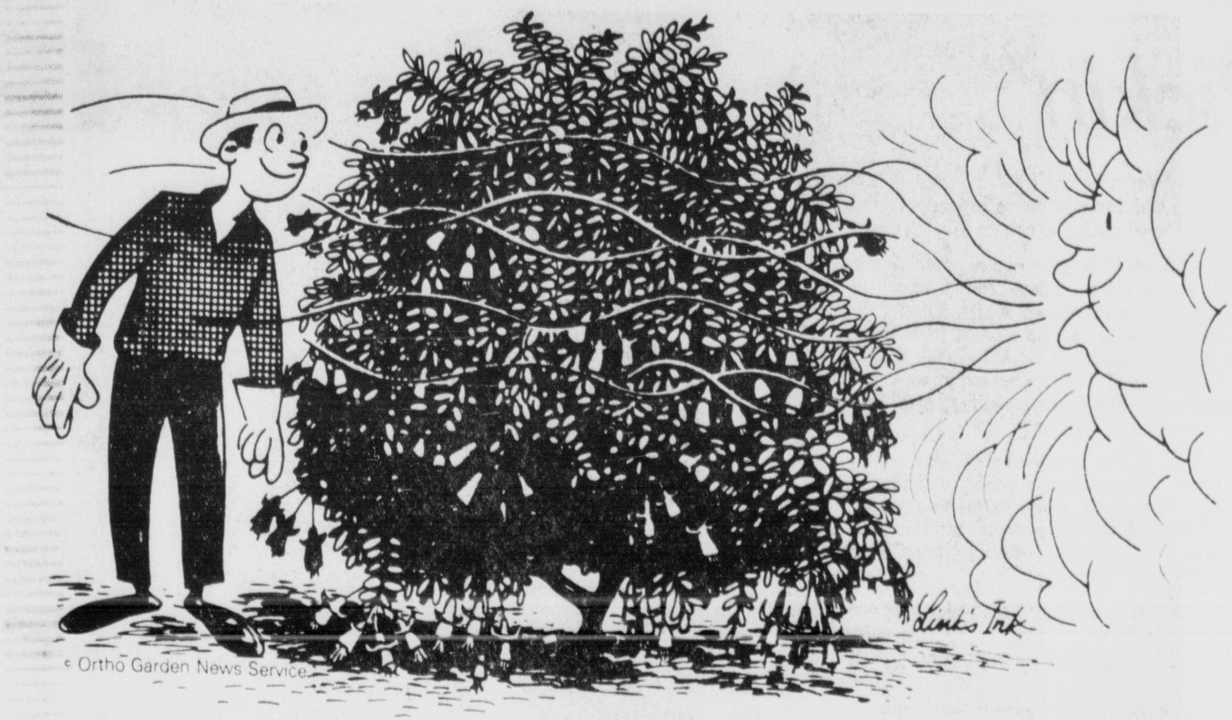

When children have outgrown the sandbox, it converts to another planter box and the wood screen can be used for climbing plants.

AN EXCELLENT EXAMPLE of construction that characterized furniture made almost 300 years ago, is the early hutch, which is utilitarian, durable and attractive. You can build a replica, 42 inches wide and 72 inches tall, with the pattern available by sending $1 to Hutch Cabinet, Pattern 270, Independent Journal, P.O. Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, New York, 10510. All the materials specified including the knotty pine plywood are stock items at local lumber yards.

Gardens Have Differing Climates So Why Not Be Own Weatherman

By FRANK J. TAYLOR

Some years ago an unusual phenomenon in our garden attracted my curiosity.

The fuchsias on one side of our lawn out-grew and out-blossomed the same kind of fuchsias on the other side. They were all growing under identical conditions, in the filtered sunlight under the same big oak. But summer after summer the north side fuchsias out-performed the south side fuchsias. Why? A visiting professor of agriculture came up with the answer.

"Your winning fuchsias are in a special micro-climate they like," he observed. "Probably a breezeway where they get extra cooling on hot days."

He was right. The thriving fuchsias were in a gentle draft directed on their leaves and blossoms by a corner of the house.

"JUST LIKE a big fan," the professor explained. "Nearly every garden has spots of mini-climate, sometimes cooler, sometimes warmer. Better check your place and see how many you can find."

I did, and found a dozen or more. Particularly in winter. A spot by the fireplace backwall where geraniums bloomed even when cold snaps nipped back those out in the open. Other spots sheltered by pines where the frosts never touched the citrus trees. One spot, atop a sunny wall, which held the daytime warmth, and where lettuce grew all through the winter months. That sparked an inspiration.

"If Nature can make micro-climates, why not me?"

At a second-hand building materials yard, I bought a lot of used windows in good condition. Over a week-end the lads and I shaped them into a make-do greenhouse. With a used heater I picked up, we whipped up a micro-climate that could have been a bit of Guatemala. In it, tender plants flourished through the winter. When Old Sol didn't show, I switched on lights and we made our own sunshine.

The only trouble with this dream climate in my funny looking greenhouse was the time required to keep the temperature and light just right and to water the thirsty plants. "There must be an easier way," I kept telling myself.

There was. About this time, inexpensive sheets of plastic came on the market. With them I could have built the greenhouse in half the time for half as much. To replace the old glass greenhouse, I put together a plastic hotbed with a heating cable buried in the sawdust on the ground. A time clock turned lights on and off, to trick the seed flats into thinking it was Spring. The light plastic top of the hotbed was hinged, so I could get at this warm mini-climate easily.

LATER, I added an auxiliary micro-climate in the form of a plastic covered cold frame, with no heat, for hardening little plants sprouted in the hotbed, before transplanting them in the open soil.

It's any gardener's guess which is more exciting, finding ready-made mini-climates or custom-building them. I've used both, for different purposes; Nature's to help plants prosper, home-made climates to start seeds and cuttings early. One word of warning on hotbeds. Aphids and other sucking bugs love them, too. I keep on Ortho aerosol plant spray handy and let the first bug to appear have it before she becomes a lot of bugs. A short burst of the spray is all that is needed.

Trees, Most Precious Treasure Should Be Given Care In Autumn

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

Most precious treasures among our garden plants should be our trees.

They provide shade, shelter from winds and storms, reduce pollution, accent our landscape plans, add constant interest with their seasonal changes, and are a miracle of beauty in form and design, winter and summer, spring and fall. Yet how often we tend to take them for granted.

As winter in the northern hemisphere approaches, we can show our gratitude for all they do for our home place by giving them autumn care. Pruning, bracing, cabling and feeding are recommended.

PRUNING should begin with removing dead limbs and branches. Branches crossing under or rubbing against each other should also be eliminated.

Those hanging over buildings and gutters should be checked, perhaps trimmed. V-crotches can be cabled to prevent splitting. An experienced tree man had best do all this on larger trees. On smaller ones you probably can do it yourself.

Next, don't neglect fall feeding. It is the single most constructive thing a homeowner can do for his trees, says Robert A. Bartlett, president of the F. H. Bartlett Tree Expert Company. The sooner this is done, he adds, the better.

Feeding promotes development of vital new roots. It restores vigor to a tree weakened by any cause. It helps harden this year's wood, strengthening the plant for the rigors of winter winds and storms. It aids in the completion of bud development, and stores up inside the tree vigor for spring. It also makes for better root anchorage.

YOU CAN do it yourself. It isn't difficult. Make crowbar holes 15 to 18 inches deep three feet apart beginning about three to four feet from the trunk of a mature tree and continuing three to five feet beyond the branch spread. It is in the outer area where the airlike feeding roots are abundant.

After filling the holes to within two inches of the top with a balanced plant food, tamp back the sod that has been removed or fill the holes with good loam, then water well. Don't skimp on tree food. A good measure is four pounds of tree food for every inch of trunk diameter measured at chest height.

Another way of feeding is on the market now. It is a product called Jobe's Tree Food Spikes — single spikes of fertilizer that look like railroad spikes. Five of these driven into the ground around a 20-foot tree are enough for a season's feeding. Ask your local garden center if they have them.

CARE OF evergreen trees includes watering them well before the ground freezes. They need to go into winter with wet feet. Plantings should be mulched over the first winter — after the ground freezes. An acid mulch of peat, oak leaves, or piney straw is recommended.

"People are planting more trees and care more about trees than ever before," says Sir George Taylor, director of the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew. He states this in his preface to a magnificent new book on trees.

It is "The International Book of Trees," by Hugh Johnson. Printed and bound in the Netherlands it is published in the United States by Simon and Schuster, Rockefeller Center, New York, at $29.95.

Familiar objects, easily overlooked or valued only for their practical uses, making all the difference when lining a road or city street, trees are sometimes majestic, sometimes delicate, and as this book shows, always complex, alive, essential — and more than slightly marvelous.

HUGH JOHNSON remarks, "You can walk past 70 feet of the greatest beauty every day for years without noticing it. I did. Or you can open your eyes, and begin to follow the patterns of branches, and discover the uses and origins, and find an infinity of sensuous detail to enjoy in every tree in every street."

Lavishly illustrated with charts, maps, photographs, and drawings — most of them in color — this huge volume, is a veritable encyclopedia, yet has the aroma of a labor of love.

Writer's Table Still Has Spuds From Thriving Backyard Patch

By PETER TONGE

WEYMOUTH, Mass. — We've been eating garden-grown potatoes in our home ever since the middle of July. And now, as early fall winds begin to scatter leaves across our front lawn, I realize it is time to prepare for next year — if we want an equally satisfying crop of tasty tubers.

This season, for the first time ever, we adopted what I'm told is an old, old New England trick: we raised potatoes by the "no muss, no fuss' leaf method. It was our best crop in four years.

Possibly because leaves are a good deal more plentiful in the six-state region than good farm soil, early New Englanders soon found that the tasty spud thrives well when grown in pure leaves.

A MIXTURE OF leaves and rotting straw some experts contend is the best. But there was no convenient supply of spoiled hay around for me to pick up, so I stuck to leaves. I shredded these and added some coarser shredded material (small tree branches, hedge trimmings and the like) which I mixed in to prevent the leaves from matting down.

Last fall this mixture was piled to a depth of about two feet over the area that was to be this year's potato patch. Come early spring, the first week in April to be exact, I hollowed out trenches in this leaf mixture and planted the potatoes, covering them with about an inch of leaves. As the potatoes grew — and they did so pretty vigorously — I kept mounding them up the conventional way, but always with leaves, never with soil.

The leaves, being a natural insulating material, stay relatively warm on cool nights and pleasantly cool for the growing tubers on hot summer days. They also supply nutrients to the plant as they break down with the aid of thousands of earth worms which quickly move in.

FINALLY, the mixture never gets waterlogged, even after the most torrential downpour, yet it stays moist for long periods during dry weather.

I raised the red-skinned Norland variety this season. It matures early, and by mid-July we were beginning to harvest. That's when the leaf or straw method comes into its own: Just pull the now-very-fine leaf mold to one side with the fingers and there are the potatoes, ready for the picking, all beautifully clean because they have not grown in soil.

So now I must gather in leaves by the bagful to get ready for next year. This time I plan some variations. I will prepare the leaf-twig growing medium as before, but leave it piled to one side.

Experiments at the Rodale Organic Experimental Farm show that plants make vigorous early growth if the soil is allowed to warm up in the sun before mulch is added.

FOR THIS reason I plan to leave the soil exposed to the sun for a while before placing the seed potatoes on top of the ground. These will be covered with the shredded leaves, which will be continually added as they grow until the harvest of '74.

Incidentally, the leaf mixture in which this year's potatoes grew is now of a very fine black crumbly consistency, obviously still very rich in nutrients. I say this because immediately after the potato harvest, a butternut squash (which sprang up by itself on the edge of a nearby path) moved into this leaf mold.

Within days, it seemed, the struggling plant was transformed as it easily sent new roots down into the soft moist mixture.

Grasses Compete On Lawn

By EARL ARONSON

You have a fine opportunity to witness ecology right outside your doorway, on your front lawn.

Ecology, according to lawn expert Robert W. Schery of the Lawn Institute, Marysville, Ohio, signifies harmonious adjustment to the environment.

"A simple case," he says, "might be the battle between improved grass varieties competing with volunteer grass.

IF absolutely nothing is done — the lawn left unmowed and unfertilized — volunteer stuff usually wins out.

But even modest attention (regular mowing and occasional feeding) gives the elite grasses the upper hand.

These varieties are chosen for modern law conditions, and are more persistent than their older counterparts because of resistance to disease."

SCHERY points out that subtle interactions occur. When Kentucky bluegrasses are mixed with fine fescues (this is a typical lawn seed blend) the bluegrass generally will dominate the turf if the lawn is irrigated and fertilized. But the fescue may dominate if the lawn is starved and dry.

He explained, "One reason for including fescues in a bluegrass blend is that fescue generally hangs on in dry and poor soil, and in the shade, typical grass environment under trees.

"Where several varieties of the same species are planted together — insurance against loss of a 'pure stand' — one or another variety may become top dog (and there may be switches depending on weather or seasonal changes)."

FOR INSTANCE, Schery related, when Merion and Fylking bluegrasses were planted together at Rutgers University, Merion was the more aggressive initially, but yielded to Fylking after several years when stripe smut showed up.

Most of the new varieties are low-growing, denser at a low mowing height than older good grasses. Bluegrass varieties such as Baron, Fylking and Pennstar may be able to hold up when interseeded with normally low-clipped grass such as Highland bent, Schery said.

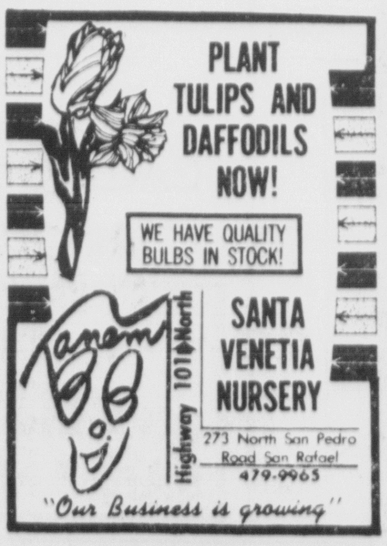

Schery said that research in Colorado gave dramatic evidence of how lawn population can be manipulated through management of its ecology.

"Over a period of years weedy turf plantings have been changed to relatively pure stands of Kentucky bluegrass. Generous fertilization, especially in autumn, is a key measure. Relatively high mowing helps, too. Of course, herbicides greatly quicken the succession away from broadleaf weeds."

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here's the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week.

- Don't overlook Shasta Daisies on your list of perennials that should be planted now, in Fall. Easy to grow and profuse blooming, each plant will yield several divisions in a year's time.
- Shopping at your nearby nursery at this time may yield a particular plant of Heavenly Bamboo (Nandina) that colors-up more brilliantly than others on display. It will do the same in your garden, next year.
- For a portable display of color, plant Daffodil, Tulip and Hyacinth bulbs in individual pots.
- Plant Calendulas in a sunny bed now for bright winter color. Nurseries have Calendulas available in a selection of colors in nursery flats or larger, individual containers.
- Natives — and most all evergreen shrubs, for that matter — should be planted now. They establish themselves during the winter months, assuring a good start in spring.

THE EARLY BLOOMING sasanqua camellias, which attracted a young girl with her flower basket, make a color contribution to fall gardens, and are a logical choice to vary landscaping.

Camellias Earlybirds

You might think it's early for camellias. But, you couldn't convince a Sasanqua Camellia of the fact. Someone forgot to tell them that they are rushing the blooming season.

These earlybirds of the camellia are unorthodox in more ways than their profuse and "un-seasonal" bloom. Their habit of growth is such that you can grow them as upright landscape shrubs, espalier them against a wall or fence, use them in hanging basket, or plant them as a handsome ground cover.

As the public's awareness of the virtues and versatility of sasanqua camellias increased, so did their popularity. Development of new varieties, with bountiful single and double blooms, has been a pleasing side effect of this ever-increasing popularity.

ITS WILLOWY pattern of growth makes the Sasanqua more adaptable than other Camellia forms. Japonica types are time-honored favorites in California gardens — featuring wide variety in growth habits, flower forms and color.

Yet, Sasanquas are better choices for certain landscape situations, suggests the California Association of Nurserymen. Espaliered, glossy leaves add dimension to flat surfaces. In a raised bed, the foliage tumbles over the edge, in interesting fashion. At ground level, certain Sasanqua varieties form a unique, if not dense, cover in semi-shaded areas.

Important to the dedicated gardener, however, is the fact that the early-blooming sasanquas extend the camellia season over so many months.

Many begin to bloom in September, others are in full flower when the earliest japonicas start in fall. By careful selection, it's possible to enjoy color from camellias for half the year.

CHECK-IN at your nearby nursery this week and investigate the sasanqua camellia situation. The distinctive beauty will fill the fall garden with color and charm — just when it's needed the most.

Evergreen Shrubs Require A Thinning

Inside branches of evergreens, especially taxus, often die because of competition for light. Thin the shrub so that sunlight reaches inner portions of branches. Taxus also are subject to dieback if the site is very wet. Do not permit drains to empty where taxus are planted.

Band Breakups Part Of Music

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Critics of rock groups say that usually the bands fall apart because the musicians become disillusioned or yearn for better things and desert the ranks.

It is quite true that gifted rock musicians have a tendency to peel off from a group and either join a new combination or form their own.

But this is nothing new. Back in the 1930s, when the big bands began to break out, musicians jumped from one ensemble to another. It's human nature.

THE BEATLES stayed together because they were the sensation of their generation. Only personal differences broke them apart. The Rolling Stones also have a great track record.

The Spencer Davis group is a good example of a unit which is able to put broken pieces together. Davis formed his group back in 1960 when the rock music that is so popular today was only germinating.

His British group built up a large following with such musicians as Pete York and Steve and Muff Winwood.

In 1967, when the group was turning out hit after hit, Steve Winwood pulled out to join Traffic. York and Eddie Hardin also left Davis.

IN 1969, Davis broke away from amplified sound and established a duo with Alun Davis and later with Peter Jameson. Although their music won rave reviews, it failed to sell.

Now Davis has gone back to amplified sound with a group consisting of York on drums, Hardin on keyboards, Roy Fenwick on lead guitar, Charlie McCracken on bass and Spencer on rhythm and slide guitar and harmonica.

Their new album, "Gluggo" (Vertigo VEL-1015) is a mixture of soft and hard rock. Among the numbers are "Feeling Rude," "Trouble in Mind" and "Catch You on the Rebop."

"Today Gluggo, Tomorrow the World" from a musician's standpoint is the most interesting slice because the group achieves an unusual bagpipe-like effect.

IT IS almost certain that "A Passion Play" by Jethro Tull (Chrysalis CHR 1040) will be another winner for this great rock group.

Designed for theatrical presentation, the musical follows a story line. And those who want to listen to music alone may be somewhat annoyed by a four-minute verbal piece called "The Story of the Hare Who Lost His Spectacles."

"A Passion Play" is a better effort than "Living in the Past" but in some respects fails to equal the high standards set in "Thick as a Brick," "Aqualung" and "Benefit."

A single was made from a section of "A Passion Play" and it is doing quite well on the trade papers' popularity charts.

TAPE DECK — John Mayall's "Moving On" was recorded live at the Whisky-A-Go-Go in Los Angeles slightly more than a year ago and released on an LP recently. Mayall fans who own tape recorders should listen to the open-reel playback of "Moving On" (Polydor M 5036), an Ampex tape release. Ampex tracked the tape at 7½ inches per second, the best speed available on commercial reels, and the fidelity of sound reproduction is very high, almost like being there.

OH! COWARD, Original Cast Album — Bell/Ampex J 5900z: This double-play cassette boasts an 85-minute survey of the recent musical evening devoted to some of the finest creations of the great Noel Coward. Classics ("Zeigeuner," "Someday I'll Find You," "I'll See You Again") as well as delightful but almost unknown items ("Island of Bolamazoo," "The Passenger's Always Right") are balanced by some great spoken things such as "Sex Talk" and the poem about a fat actress.

THE MUSIC IS LOVELY

Country Pickin'

By BRUCE MEYER

Before heading West to fame and fortune as a rock 'n' roll star, Leon Russell spent most of his life in Tulsa, Okla., where he naturally absorbed a lot of country pickin'.

"Hank Wilson's Back" Shelter SW-8923 is Leon-Hank's "Back to the Roots" album, and a truer one hasn't been recorded. Backed by the usual Shelter people plus an assortment of fine country session men, Leon as Hank does a 10-gallon hatful of country western classics — from Hank Williams' "So Lonesome I Could Cry" to the "Battle of New Orleans" and two versions of Lester Flatt's "Rollin' in My Sweet Baby's Arms."

It's a must for Russell fans and a treat for anyone who gets off on country music.

WHITE British groups have been imitating black American music for so long now it almost seems natural. And it must be admitted that some of them are pretty good at it. Take, for example, a new one called the Average White Band.

The AWB is six Scots playing Memphis soul, and they have the licks down real well on their debut album, "The Average White Band" MCA-345. They've been getting rave reviews in the English music press.

The only thing is, while I can see that such fine mellow rhythm and blues would be in great demand in England, there just doesn't appear to be an opening for anything but the real thing on this side of the pond. Which is why the Average White Band maybe doesn't sound quite so good here; rather average, I'd say.

NOW, IF it's soul you're after — the kind you might expect from a bunch of dudes from downtown Watts, Ellay California — pick up on the latest from War: "Deliver the Word" UA 1a-128-f. It's as laidback and warm a record as we'll see this year, and funky enough to give Tina Turner goose bumps.

War makes sophisticated and sometimes pretty strange music, and this is the first thing from them I've really gotten off on since their brilliant but flawed initial effort with ex-Animal Eric Burdon.

Their last single, "Cisco Kid," was obnoxious and worse, dull.

The single from "Deliver" is, of course, "Gypsy man," and it has that amazing repetitive power that reduces lyrics to the role of another level of percussion, mesmerizing. But the best cut on the album for my money is "Southern Part of Texas," which gets multiple rhythms going on about six levels. It would make another fine single.

I GAVE up on Helen Reddy long before she went on the tube. After a moderately promising first album she rapidly went downhill. But her most recent single, "Delta Dawn," is a fluke, a stone masterpiece in the middle of a ho-hum album called "Long Hard Climb" Capitol SMAS-112 13. Just one other track, "The West Wind Circus," is interesting for the story about twice. The rest of "Climb" and Helen Reddy is instantly forgettable.

Netherlands Wind Ensemble Fine On Strauss Suite

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

One of the most delightful groups recording is the Netherlands Wind Ensemble.

Last year, they happily recorded Richard Strauss' first and last composition for woodwinds. This year there is another fine recording of Strauss for woodwinds, early and late.

Under the direction of Edo de Waart, the group plays Strauss' Suite in B Flat for 13 Wind Instruments 1884 and Sonatina No. 1 in F for Wind Instruments 1943 in a new (Philips import 6500 297).

THE SUITE, on side two, shows signs of Brahms but is already Strauss. The Sonatina, with the notation of an older Strauss "From an Invalid's Workshop", looks back on "Capriccio", "The Presentation of the Rose" and "Till Eulenspiegel".

Impeccable in performance.

Felix Mendelssohn's two violin concertos also are early and late. That in D minor, composed when Mendelssohn was 13, has not been so often recorded.

That in E minor, composed in 1844 three years before his death, is one of the great virtuoso pieces for the violin and has been recorded a corresponding number of times.

ARTHUR Grumiaux, the fine Belgian violinist, records both beautifully with the New Philharmonica Orchestra under the direction of Jan Krenz in another (Philips import 6500 465).

FALL

Sliding into fall,
Brown leaves
And evergreens.

The river low
Before the winter rains,
The carps glaring
Through their shallow world,
The air coalesced
Into non-stir peace.

Mountain path
Opening into a steep meadow,
Warm above hills and vineyards
And the soft knee
Of the Russian river.

Harmony of our goals,
One mind-body
Letting go
Letting go!

AUTUMN CAME EARLY

Autumn came early like a bang,
Pyracanthas and toyanberries
In heavy clusters hang;
Squirrels and swallows frolic
In tireless play,
While the warm, sunny
Afternoon fades away.

Small white clouds like huge
Mushrooms mingle with the blue,
Lazily I inhail the sweet scents that abound,
As the sky dons its garments in every hue -
Sensing the great mysterious force of life
Entering my being without a sound.

Across the river bed,
Its back to face the sun.

Each knot on a rock
Green vines for a smock,

Big Movies Top Regulars In Ratings

By RICK DU BROW

Big motion pictures broadcast by network television continue to trample opposition programming in the ratings in the new video season.

Some of the most successful shows on television — the Mary Tyler Moore, Bob Newhart and Carol Burnett series — were whipped solidly by top movies in the program rankings for the week ending Sept. 23.

So long as video's networks can keep putting on major movies, the ratings will remain in a state of relative confusion, some new series will get less than a fair shot at the audience, and many borderline shows may be pushed toward obscurity and cancellation.

IT IS difficult for a network to get a real line on a new series, in terms of audience appeal, if it is buried for a number of weeks early in the season by hit movies.

On the other hand, networks can protect themselves in the rarings race by getting the broadcast rights to a reasonable number of top motion pictures each season.

For, with television's first-run season getting shorter and shorter, it doesn't take that many major movies to carry a network.

In addition, the rernning of a few blockbuster films here and there gives a broadcast organization even more protection.

CONSIDERING today's shorter season, high sponsor stakes and brief proving period for new shows, a network that fails to land a good supply of big motion pictures can find itself in a ratings predicament.

At any rate, television keeps pouring on the hit movies: On Nov. 8, CBS-TV offers "The Graduate," on Nov. 1, the same network presents "Bullitt." And on Oct. 21, ABC-TV reruns "Love Story."

As for those ratings for the week ending Sept. 23, four of the 10 top broadcasts in the national popularity statistics and Clyde" ranked No. 1 against all comers, "Tora! Tora! Tora!" came in fourth, "Cool Hand Luke" was ninth and "Play Misty for Me" finished 10th. Furthermore, "Funny Girl" came in 14th, and "Rosemary's Baby" ranked 25th.

WHAT happened to the series of Newhart, Miss Burnett and Miss Moore is that NBC-TV's "Cool Hand Luke" and ABC-TV's "Rosemary's Baby" were both against them on the same night — and flattened them.

Miss Moore's show finished 34th in the ratings, Newhart's was 39th and Miss Burnett's 47th. All three of these series are usually right up there.

The movies made an even greater impact in the same week's 70-city rankings, in which four of the top seven broadcasts were motion pictures. "Bonnie and Clyde" was No. 1 here also, "Tora! Tora! Tora!" came in third, "Funny Girl" finished sixth and "Play Misty for Me" placed seventh. In addition, "Cool Hand Luke" tied for 10th, and "Rosemary's Baby" was 18th.

The trade press also says that the British Broadcasting Corp. has bought rights to "Cleopatra", the hugely expensive version with Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton and Rex Harrison and is figuring on it as a Christmas season special.

BARBARA WALTERS RECALLS

Barbara Walters, who has been part of NBC Television Network's "Today" on-air personalities since 1963, has interviewed many of the world's best known personalities and her observations about some of them are worth repeating.

Among her interviews, Barbara recalls:

— President Nixon: "More amusing than people would think. He is kind and courteous. Yet, the more you know him, the less you feel you know him.

— Lyndon B. Johnson: "He was larger than life. Gutsy. Uninhibited. And very open when he trusted you."

— Dean Rusk: "The truest gentleman I know."

— Mamie Eisenhower: "I am prepared to say that she has become my favorite. Honest, touching, very much a woman, warm, with unexpected humor, and no self-pity whatsoever."

— Jacqueline Kennedy: "No matter what you may feel about her, she is the most fascinating woman, probably because of the contrasts in her personality. I think she behaves superbly, given the fantastic spotlight on her."

— George McGovern: "I wish that people had gotten to know him as many of the reporters had. There was much more than the external image presented in the campaign. Above all, a very nice man."

Public Service Ads For Children

A series of 30-second, child-oriented public service announcements developed in cooperation with the Council of Better Business Bureaus and featuring the Ritts Puppets, will be scheduled within NBC-TV's children's programs beginning this weekend.

Announcement of the project was made jointly today by Robert D. Kasmire, Vice President, Public Relations, NBC, and William H. Tankersley, Executive Vice President of the Council of Better Business Bureaus.

Kasmire explained that the spots will deal with a variety of topics. Among the first to be produced are announcements concerning money (saving as an alternative to spending and choosing what to spending money for); nutrition; care of personal possessions; the importance of counting change in a store; and proper treatment of merchandise which hasn't yet been paid for.

"IT IS self-evident that today's children are tomorrow's consumers," Mr. Tankersley commented. "We think it is vitally important that our children be armed with the best possible tools and background to enable them to make sound judgments in their future role as America's buying public.

Those Big British Breakfasts

Lee Remick quickly got a false impression of England when she moved there in 1964.

The actress returned to the United States this summer to co-star with William Holden in NBC Television Network's "mini-series," "The Blue Knight."

"When I arrived in England, I was amazed at the amount of food they eat," she recalls. "I hired a girl as a housekeeper, and the first morning I was to work I asked her to make breafast. Well, she walked in with a tray full of eggs, bacon, sausage, toast, jam and tea, and I thought it was amazing! I never expected such a large breakfast, but she worked so hard I ate it all.

"I arrived at the set and they served pastry. Then we had a morning tea break. I was already stuffed from breakfast, but it was there so I kept eating.

"Then we broke for lunch, and I mean, we didn't just have hamburgers and french fries. We went to a restaurant and ate like civilized people.

"At 3:30, there was another tea break, with a sausage-filled pastry. Then I went home, and a large dinner was waiting for me.

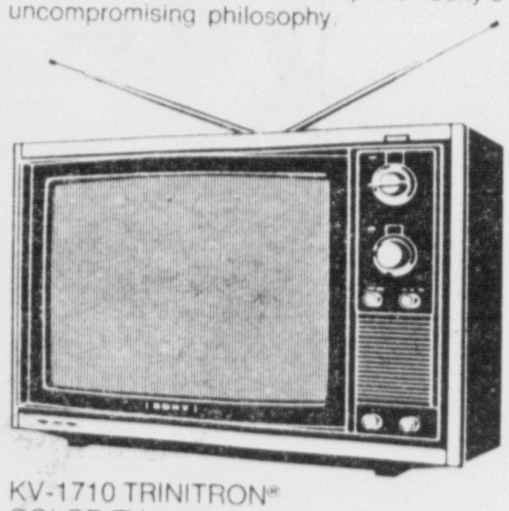

"I could see myself doubling my weight in a week if I kept it up. It was later that I realized that was not a typical day in England, and all the people there didn't eat like that. I started having sensible breakfasts, and refusing food during the day."

Real TV Pioneer

Dan Dailey, star of NBC-TV's new fall series "Faraday and Company," first appeared on TV in 1939. He performed with Ann Miller on a closed circuit show for NBC at the New York World's Fair.

Filming In Russia

Filming a TV special on location can be quite an undertaking.

It certainly was in the case of "Peggy Fleming Visits the Soviet Union," starring Peggy and top Russian performers, to be colorcast on the NBC Television Network at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow.

The "Bell System Family Theatre" special was filmed entirely in the USSR. "We flew 3000 pounds of photographic and sound equipment to the USSR to augment available gear," said executive producer Bob Banner.

A staggering amount of film was used.

"We shot 60,000 feet of film — that's about 12 miles of film," said Banner. "This film was shipped directly to the U.S. for processing. No film was developed or viewed in Russia."

That means there was no Russian censorship connected with this special. It also means that the Banner people didn't know, until they got back, whether they had good footage or not.

BARBRA STREISAND will star in her first special in five years, "Singer Presents . . Barbra Streisand . . and Other Musical Instruments" to be shown at 9 p.m. Friday on Channels 5 and 10.

Television's Radar Birdman Off-Screen

"The Birdman of Malibu."

That provocative-sounding title, with no criminal overtones, has become a local beach pseudonym for diminutive Gary Burghoff, the all-knowing, all-seeing Radar of the "MASH" comedy series on the CBS Television Network.

Burghoff, an amateur naturalist from early childhood, became interested in rehabilitating ailing sea birds near his beach home after discovering a sick California brown pelican.

THERE SEEMED to be little concern shown by nearby veterinarians over the fate of such unfortunate feathered specimens, prompting Burghoff to take the initiative.

He learned from the Long Beach Fish and Game Department that the Los Angeles Zoo and its curator of birds, Frank Todd, would be interested in setting up a treatment center for birds, if he could bring them in.

So, for many weeks, the deeply concerned actor, using an old milk truck as an ambulance, drove the 40 miles from Malibu to the zoo as many as three times a week to supply his feathered patients with vital care.

AS BURGHOFF'S humanitarian reputation grew locally, he began to receive phone calls from lifeguards, veterinarians and beachgoers who discovered birds encumbered with broken wings and a variety of crippling injuries.

It soon became apparent that a nearby treatment center was required to expedite the birds' recuperation. Burghoff responded to the need by building an aviary in his own backyard.

Enlisting the assistance of Malibu veterinarian Dr. Eric Hughes, who set wings, patched up legs and provided other medical aid, the "Birdman" launched his rehabilitation program for pelicans, seagulls, terns, cormorants, Artic loons and other flying inhabitants of the local environment.

BURGHOFF DOESN'T represent himself as an ornithologist or a James Audubon, but he admits to having acquired considerable knowledge of bird behavior patterns.

"Seagulls have a pecking order," he notes. "When a new bird is added to the aviary, there is a readjustment of the positioning order at feeding time.

"I have discovered that the best medicine for ailing birds is other birds. They are very competitive about feeding, and it's a healthy thing to have new ones introduced to the pen. This tends to perk up the ailing ones."

Most of the week Gary Burghoff is immersed in the satirical comedy world of "MASH," but on weekends he emerges again in his beach guise as "The Birdman of Malibu."

Guest Stars Look At Typecasting

"I hope this doesn't typecast me forever," said Oscar nominee Leonard Frey of his guest star role on "Shaft." "Hollywood producers are notorious for putting you in the kind of role you've done last."

He got a heartfelt nod of agreement from fellow guest star Ja'net Du Bois, who plays a prostitute to Frey's role of procurer in "The Killing" on "Shaft" to be broadcast Tuesday, Oct. 30 (9:30-11:00 PM, PT) on the CBS Television Network.

The 90-minute drama concerns the attempt of Miss Du Bois to break away from a prostitution ring controlled by Frey's brother. When the brother is slain, Miss Du Bois' former boy friend, private eye John Shaft, played by series star Richard Roundtree, is charged with the murder.

FREY won an Oscar nomination as the tailor in "Fiddler on the Roof," a role he created in the original Broadway production in 1965. He played a homosexual in both the stage and film versions of "Boys in the Band." Of that role, he commented:

"It was a mixed blessing. Everyone said I did a great job but it was as though that were the only kind of role producers thought I could play."

His credits range from such musicals as "The Boy Friend," "By Jupiter" and "Wonderful Town" to Shakespeare at both the Stratford, Ont., and New York Shakespeare Festivals. His television includes "NYPD," "Mission Impossible" and a recently completed 90-minute movie, "Shirts/Skins."

"I JUMP at anything that's offered me," Frey said. "When I open my refrigerator door and the light goes on, I start to sing, just to be performing."

Of her "Shaft" character, Miss Du Bois remarked, "I like to think it's just coincidence that this is my second prostitute in a row."

She won critical acclaim for her performance as hooker-with-a-heart-of-gold in a stage production of "The Hot L Baltimore" at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles. She appeared on Broadway in "Golden Boy" and "A Raisin in the Sun" and was a regular for two years on the daytime television series, "Love of Life."

She did her work on "Shaft" each day, then rushed off to make her curtain for the play. How did she survive? "Without much sleep."

Trevor Howard Roughs It

"This sort of thing used to be done in studio tanks years ago, and the waves would be whipped up by special-effects men," shouted Trevor Howard above the wail of natural wind as he looked down from a craggy bluff to a beach scene being filmed on a cave-fringed stretch of misty shore at the southwest tip of County Cork, Ireland.

Below him, similarly clad in a coarse brown monastic robe and black oilskin raincoat and matching sou'wester hat, fellow actor and famed Abbey Theatre player Cyril Cusack was beaching a curragh in his role of Father Manus, an aging monk of great conviction, in "Catholics," the "CBS Playhouse 90" production of Brian Moore's acclaimed new novel of the same title, to be broadcast Thursday, Nov. 29 (9:00-10:30 PM, PT) on the CBS Television Network.

AS THE film rolled in the fog, kelp was caught on camera, and the keel-less curragh, a boat of tarred canvas stretched over a wood frame, was carried up a steep path cleft in the rock, presenting a picture reminiscent of the earliest scenes of Ireland's off-islanders. The only difference between the craft in hand and the ancient curragh was the square hole cut in the bottom in case a non-traditionalist cared to insert a motor.

Howard felt "invigorated" by the rugged filming location, even on such a "soft day," as wind-battered, rain-drenched and penetratingly damp 24-hour periods are called in this wild, beautiful and individualistic emerald slice of Western Europe.

"This steady rain is unusual, actually," noted the square-jawed, white-haired star, who portrays an aging, doubt-tormented abbot in the play, described by its author as "a fable" about an imagined future Catholicism. "Most of the time we've been shooting, we've had a good bit of sun mixed in. But we needed rain today for authenticity, and indeed we got it."

"OUR PRAYERS were answered surely," added John Kelly, a veteran Dublin actor who plays Brother Paul, one of the monks.

Lunch and tea breaks (the Irish and English version of the coffee break) were also a bit different on the cliffs of County Cork and not at all like Howard's memories of strictly studio days.

After being served some "mixed soup" and a heaping, steaming paper-plateful of curried beef by a mobile English catering van hired by executive producer Sidney Glazier to roll through the rutted roads on cue, the distinguished British actor, with a skill for speaking the Irish language with authenticity, sloshed up the narrow gorse-fringed path for shelter in a small whitewashed cottage overlooking the aqua-green sea that, independent of even such leaden skies, never loses its unique color.

"Look at them out there," he said, waving the back of his free hand out beyond a low stone wall toward a group of actors clustered on a jumble of sea-lashed rocks, their coarse, cinctured habits billowing in the early May storm that blew the "soft day" against their hardy Irish "selves."

SOME OF them were round and jolly a la Brother Juniper, one was short, wizened and Barry Fitzgeraldish, another was tall and slim, his black hair flecked with gray, his eyes a reflection of the green sea as they looked inscrutably from a tanned, firmly boned Heathcliffian face.

"There's something real about that what you'll not get in any studio," noted Howard, stamping the wet mud from his heavy black boots before entering the cottage rented for the day's filming from a woman who turned out to be the still photographer's aunt, whom her British nephew had never met. "How could you re-create the likes of all this in a tank?"

The door opened to the warmth of a linoleum-covered, small-windowed kitchen, then closed out the moaning wind, droning sea and the haunting sound of "monks" — all leading Dublin actors — chanting "Faith of Our Fathers" in the mist beyond.

Jones In "Hawkins"

Character actor Henry Jones landed a role with Julie Harris and Diana Douglas in an episode of Jimmy Stewart's new television series, "Hawkins."

Mary Dances, Diets

There are three "d's" in Mary Tyler Moore's life that make the job of keeping herself in shape a cinch. If the first two, "diet" and "discipline" sound dull, the third, "dancing," makes the other two easy.

Miss Moore explains it this way:

"I've been dancing since I was ten years old so it's become a way of life for me and I love it. When we're filming, I take a ballet class twice a week during the lunch break, right on the stage where we do the show. And I go to class every day when we're not shooting.

"DANCING is a discipline in itself, and a lot more fun than just exercising. That makes the dieting easy. Actually, you can eat rather heartily if you get enough exercise and, for me, dancing is it.

"Of course, the discipline comes into the diet area, too, because the trick is to train yourself to like foods which are good for you. I'll admit I was lucky because I learned this at an early age So I've never had a problem. I always wanted to be a dancer and dancers have to keep trim figures, so I learned quickly which foods to avoid. It's a lot easier not to put extra pounds on than to take them off.

"Doing a show every week is discipline in itself and I like it. As a matter of fact, I'm one of those people who really needs a schedule. And I need to know what I'm going to be doing every day at a given time. It makes life a lot simpler."

"War And Peace" A Vast Production

"WAR AND PEACE", Leo Tolstoy's masterpiece centered around the invasion of Russia by Napoleon's army in 1812, and involving every social level from the French and Russian Emperors to the lowest Slav peasant, will be presenzed in a nine-week serialization over the Public Broadcasting Service beginning Tuesday, Nov. 6th at 8 PM.

Three years in preparation, one year in the making, this BBC adaptation of what has been called "the greatest novel ever written", is the longest and costliest television dramatization of any single novel. The serial is equivalent in length to seven feature films. It was made possible for American audiences by a matching grant of $550,000 from Mobil Oil Corporation and the National Endowment for the Humanities to WGBH, Boston.

"War and Peace" was broadcast in England last year in 20 45-minute installments and won enthusiastic response from public and critics. On PBS, the first and last programs will be two-hour specials, and the remaining seven programs will be 90 minutes each. There will be a second complete network showing every Saturday night at 8:30 PM, and there will be one daytime showing each week for school-room audiences at the local station's option.

THE LARGE cast is portrayed by some of England's finest actors. Anthony Hopkins appears as Pierre, Natasha is played by Morag Hood, Prince Andrei Bolkonsky by Alan Dobie, Nikolai by Sylvester Morand, Maria by Angela Down, Count Rostov by Rupert Davies, Countess Rostova by Faith Brook.

A thousand men of the Yugoslav army were used in the reconstruction of the battles of Austerlitz, Brodino and the retreat from Moscow. The war scenes were filmed in Yugoslavia.

The monumental size of Tolstoy's story, its enormous number of characters, the variety of its actions and scenes, combine to make it an accurate portrait of the entire Russian nation, with an animation that conveys the movement of people and history.

The two main characters in the novel, Pierre and Andrei, represent contrasting approaches to life. Pierre's way, finding peace through the evolution to a simple philosophy instilled in him by the peasant Karateyev, seems to reflect the thinking of the novelist himself. Andrei, on the other hand, struggles through his intellect to find a meaning to his life, and ends by accepting death as a natural and necessary finale. Meanwhile both are caught in the vortex of war and their romantic attachment to Natasha Rostova.

THE STORY begins in Moscow in 1805, moves through the fateful years of the Napoleonic attack and the siege of Moscow, delineates the break-up of family life and the careless ways of the aristocracy and ends eventually in 1820 with family threads having been taken up again, deaths and marriages having occurred, and the timeless flow of the river of life moving on while Empires fall and new ones take their place.

The television dramatization was made by Jack Pulman, the director was John Davies and the producer, David Conroy, whose classic serial productions for BBC include "Vanity Fair", "The Portrait of a Lady", "Nana", Tolstoy's "Resurrection", and the 13 part dramatization of the Jean-Paul Sartre trilogy "The Roads to Freedom".

"War And Peace" is a BBC/Time-Life Films co-production.

FAITH BROOK and Rupert Davies join as the Countess and Count Rostova, major characters in "War and Peace," a nine-week series to start at 8 p.m. Nov. 6 on Channel 9.

BOB AND RAY are hosts and narrators when the "Go" show visits the annual Boy Scout Jamboree in Pennsylvania's Moraine State Park to be shown Saturday, Nov. 3, at 9:30 a.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

MORAG HOOD, a young British actress, portrays pivotal role of Natasha Rostova in "War and Peace," which will begin a nine-week series on Public Broadcasting Service stations, Channel 9 in San Francisco, at 8 p.m. Nov. 6.

CHANNEL 44 On Tower

Channel 44 has turned on San Francisco's most powerful transmitter complex, and viewers can now watch television signals beamed to them with 2 million watts of effective ratiated power according to Larry Pozzi, KBHK-TV Engineering Manager.

"Our Superpower significantly improves picture quality on both black and white and color TV sets," Pozzi said. "Many viewers with black and white sets will see brighter, clearer pictures while color TV set owners will notice sharper, more intense colors on Channel 44. Viewers who formerly saw a snowy KBHK-TV picture should notice the greatest improvemtn."

The key to the picture improvement is the installation of a second 60,000 watt transmitter at the new Mt. Sutro transmitter Site. The two transmitters in combination with the new antenna mounted atop the 977 foot Sutro Tower, will make Channel 44 one of the nation's most powerful television stations and will significantly improve picture reception in fringe areas, Pozzi said.

Star Trek From Scratch

If you want something created, a good man to see is Walter ("Matt") Jefferies, art director of "Star Trek" and special consultant to the new animated "Star Trek," premiering this fall on the NBC Television Network's Saturday morning schedule.

"I've designed everything from space outposts to complicated control panels," Jefferies says. "Most art directors can turn to a reference book when they run into difficulty. On 'Star Trek' we had to design and build everything from scratch. Where do you find a blue-print on an anti-matter engine capable of driving a ship the size of the Enterprise?"

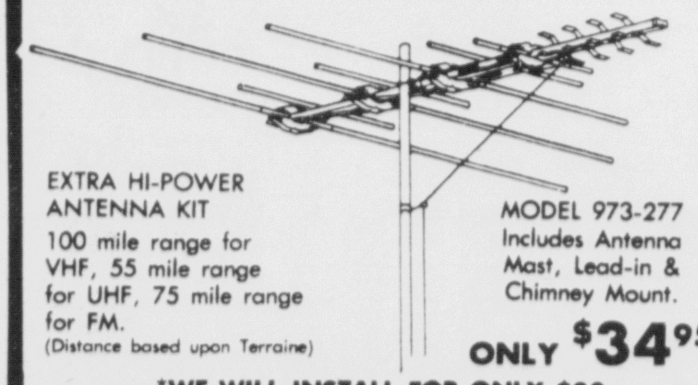

MATT EXPLAINED how the USS Enterprise was designed. "We hung drawings, sketches and photographs of current and projected space rockets and vehicles all over the office walls. Along with these we had clippings from Buck Rogers and Flash Gordon. We had to avoid duplicating either of these areas.

"Because of the public's acute awareness of the space program, we wanted to avoid something they had seen before. We spent better than four months building the model ship and interior sets. There wasn't a button or a panel in it that wasn't there for a logical, functional reason.

"Now Filmation Associates have taken our original footage of the ship, the bridge and other sets and through a process known as 'rotoscoping' have turned the film into animation, so the USS Enterprise will be represented as a scientific ship, not a cartoonist's fancy."

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR KURT VONNEGUT, JR., writer

In some of your novels you write about a science-fiction author, Kilgore Trout. Is he supposed to be you in real life?—Carol Sawicki, Linden, N.J.

● Kilgore Trout is the lonesome and unappreciated writer I thought I might become. There is still plenty of time for me to become him. So far, I have done a lot better than he has. I have had shoals of relatives around me, and I have been reasonably prosperous. In the worst year I ever had, I made $7,000. In the best year Trout ever had, 1953, he took in $209. He still speaks of 1953 as the year he hit the jackpot. He is modeled after a character in Mark Twain—a man who wrote secretly and hid his life's work in a trunk. The trunk and its contents were destroyed after the man died. Nobody ever read a word he wrote, and yet he was allowed to lead the parade of writers, Shakespeare and all the rest in Paradise.

FOR VALERIE HARPER
(Rhoda Morganstern of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show")

Do you mind being second banana to Mary Tyler Moore on her show?—F. A., Van Nuys, Calif.

● Not at all. First of all, Rhoda Morganstern is a marvelous part. She's funny, she has problems, she has a wide range of emotions. And I love playing her. Also, I see the pressures that Mary is under day after day, and I don't see how she does it. I don't think I would want that.

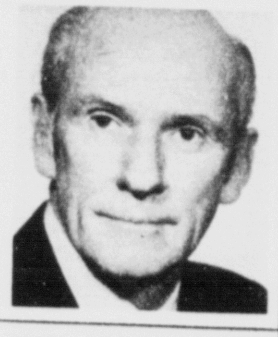

FOR KENT McCORD, Officer Jim Reed in "Adam-12"

You have such a clean-cut image on the "Adam-12" TV show. Do you really enjoy having your hair cut so short and clothes always neat?—B. Walters, Petersburg, Va.

● When I don't work on the set, like during summer layoff, I let my hair grow pretty long. The last time I even grew a beard. One of the reasons that's nice is because I can go around without anyone recognizing me.

FOR SEN. ALAN CRANSTON (D-Calif.)

Did Abe Lincoln have the same financial problems you folks cry about in running for Congress?—M. B., Hartford, Conn.

● Hardly. When Abraham Lincoln ran for Congress in 1846, his supporters raised $200 for his campaign. He won—and gave back $199.25, saying: "I did not need the money. I made the canvass on my own horse; my entertainment, being at the houses of friends, cost me nothing; and my only outlay was 75 cents for a barrel of cider, which some farm-hands insisted I should treat to."

FOR ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

How did you and your twin sister Ann Landers both get into the advice column business? What is your maiden name?—D. T., Ann Arbor, Mich.

● It's not surprising that Ann Landers and I should both pursue the same career since we are identical twins and were exposed to the same influences and had the same backgrounds and education. Our maiden name is Friedman.

FOR BOBBY RIGGS, tennis player

Aren't you exaggerating a little when you say you take over 400 vitamins a day?—Lynne Schaefer, Novato, Calif.

● I am a great believer in vitamins. I know over 400 seems like a lot to be taking in one day, but actually it isn't, because I take them three times a day, and package them ahead of time. It seems like very little to be doing for all the benefit I derive from them.

FOR SUSAN SAINT JAMES of "McMillan & Wife"

On your TV show, you sometimes wear a San Francisco 49ers shirt to bed. The shirt has Gene Washington's No. 18 on it. Any special reason?—Pam Lake, Willow Street, Pa.

● I asked for the No. 18 because Gene Washington is my favorite player, and the 49ers complied.

FOR BEATRICE ARTHUR, star of "Maude"

How do you feel about several critics' comments concerning the moral status of "Maude"? Do any of the lines in the script offend you in any way?—E. Adams, Greenville, N.C.

● No, I wouldn't say anything on the show offended me. We rehearse for a week before the show is taped, so we have all that time to express our feelings about the lines—and those feelings have always been respected.

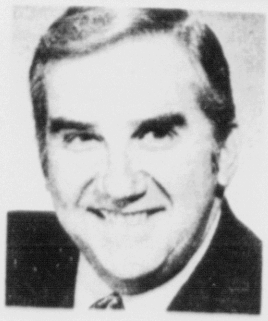

FOR SEN. BIRCH BAYH (D-Ind.)

Marijuana, heroin, sopers, LSD! Are young people staying away from liquor at least?—H.S., Medford, Ore.

● No, they certainly aren't. Recent studies show that alcoholism is escalating among young people. One study found that one teenager out of every 20 has a drinking problem. The National Council on Alcoholism reports that in 1972, the age of the youngest alcoholic who came to their attention dropped from 14 to 12.

FOR ED McMAHON of "The Tonight Show"

Is it true you and Johnny Carson hit it off the moment you met? Do you really get along as well as you seem to on camera?—Russell Smith, Durham, N.C.

● I first met Johnny about 14 years ago when he was looking for an MC-announcer for a game show. We didn't strike any sparks, and I thought I had bombed. A month later I got the word that I was hired. It's sometimes tough for me to convince people that Johnny and I get along so well, and so I often answer the question with another question: "Do you think we are such good actors we can give the impression that we like each other when we don't?" If we didn't like each other, we wouldn't have stayed together this long.

Can you spot the Camel Filters smoker?

At class reunions almost everybody has a gimmick. Try picking the one who doesn't go along.

1. Nope. He's Don Wand. Won school essay contest with "The Art of Pre-Marital Dancing." Gimmick: 200 mm holder to balance his 100 mm cigarette. 2. No. It's Rah-Rah Mendelson, ex-cheerleader. Gimmick: He's wearing it. Smokes whatever he finds in his pouch. 3. No. He's Moe Mentum, alias "Stone Hands" for dropping passes. Just dropped statue of school mascot. 4. T. Deious, school bore. Gimmick: His voice, off-key contralto. Smokes oval cigarettes (he sat on his soft-pack and liked it). 5. Curley Gilroy. His hair was voted "Most Likely to Recede." Gimmick: Staples toupee on. Also staples his roll-your-owns. 6. Right. He's still his own man. Likes his cigarette honest, no-nonsense, too. Camel Filters. Easy and good tasting. 6a. Kicky VIII, mascot. Has eyes only for Mendelson (see 2 above).

Mutts' Lib:

Yes, There Really Are Reasons Why This Group Is Setting Up a Howl For a Fair Shake. Read On.

By Alan D. Haas

Alan D. Haas

James Draper, champion of American mutts, with his wife Irene, son Kevin, and "mutt" Sandy.

And now, in this era of revolt, we give you Mutts' Liberation, perhaps the last great cause on behalf of a downtrodden minority. Some 30 million mongrel dogs have at last found a voice (or is it a growl?) and seek the same privileges as their pampered purebred counterparts.

Instead of wagging their way through life at the low end of the canine social scale, mixed breeds are demanding blue ribbons, dog shows of their own and free access to those snobbish grooming salons that discriminate in favor of poodles, Afghans and the privileged haute monde of dogdom.

Their champion and spokesman is James Draper, of Merrick, Long Island, who has formed the American Mixed Breed Association to give mutts "the status that has for so long been withheld by society."

The mixed-breed underprivileged according to Draper, are prepared to withhold love and affection from their masters until and unless their programs are given serious consideration. Their revolt is based on the claim that they outnumber purebreds 30-to-1 across the U.S., and in a democracy they are entitled to more goodies than they are getting. If they don't achieve their rights soon, Draper says, mutt-pack leaders are prepared to march on city halls around the country and leave behind unspeakable souvenirs of their discontent.

"Not only are mixed breeds more populous, but they are more lovable, more affectionate and more gentle than pedigreed dogs, and they don't need special diets or as much medication," says Draper, yapping for the country's largest canine constituency. The AMBA already has several hundred members, and is growing in numbers as fast as a pet-shop window at Christmas. A $3 membership fee brings a certificate acknowledging the dog's "exemplary devotion, obedience and love for mankind." A Mutt-of-the-Year contest and other status-raising activities are in the works for the near future, as the hybrids emerge from their hiding places in the social swamps.

"Instead of wagging their way through life at the low end of the canine social scale, mixed breeds are demanding blue ribbons, dog shows of their own and free access to snobbish grooming salons. . . ."

How does the establishment (the American Kennel Club) feel about this new militancy among second-class citizens of dogdom? "Any group can form any type of dog association that it likes," says R. H. Carlberg, AKC vice president, with indulgence seeping from every pore. "We can't control such things." However, it is clear from his tone that it will be like baying at the moon for mixed breeds to seek acceptance among the higher echelons of the dog world. The AKC lists 116 registered breeds, "with others knocking at the door." Mutts may have their snouts pressed against the window but they are not about to be admitted to those hallowed halls.

But Draper says the mixed-breed population doesn't care about full integration, only a bigger, fatter share of the horn of pet plenty.

The AMBA is fighting for better protection for mixed breeds from dog-napping, which has reached near-epidemic proportions. "We want state legislatures to raise penalties for such crimes," says Draper. "If mutts are to enjoy the benefits of democracy, then they should not be afraid to walk the streets at night – always leashed to their owners, of course. Too many dogs today live in fear, and that isn't even a dog's life." Draper wants it known that the clenched paw has been raised, and that in the future, mongrels will defend themselves and their homes from invasion by hostile forces.

Through Draper, mutts are also incensed about the death rate their brothers and sisters encounter on U.S. highways. They want more protection from their masters, who carelessly let them roam free on streets and roads. Another bone of contention is the way guard dogs are treated—often chained and left out in all kinds of weather, given inadequate food and water. "There is no such thing as a bad dog," says Draper, "only dogs that have been mistreated, abused or neglected." Dogs will continue to drop out and become wild unless their masters give them more tender, loving care.

The AMBA will rightfully be growling, too, about how pets are shipped to pet shops in glove-tight containers, without much food and water, or medical care.

Mixed-breed dogs are not inferior, agrees the Encyclopaedia Britannica. It says: "First-generation hybrids between pure breeds show a great deal of vigor and are usually more healthy and hardy than either parent breed. They sometimes become outstanding working or hunting dogs." Facts like these are well buried by the media, according to Draper. "Did you ever go into a pet shop and try to buy a booklet or pamphlet about the proper care and handling of a mutt?" he asks. Nothing there. Just racks of instructional material about cocker spaniels, terriers, dachshunds, etc.

All dogs, he continues, belong to a single species, Canis familiaris, part of a genus that includes wolves, coyotes and jackals. After they were domesticated, dogs were selected and bred for various traits of appearance and behavior. Thus did discrimination originate. Unable to choose their parentage, mutts have been considered nothing to bark about in canine circles. But all that may well be about to change.

Jim Draper, who is dedicated to delivering dogs from bondage, had his first mutt, Sidney, when he was a GI stationed in Germany. Sidney was run over and killed, but Draper, an ex-insurance company executive, replaced him with Gus back in the States. His present dog, Sandy, is a half-terrier of half-unknown origin. Sandy has a platform of his own; he is pushing for vacant lots to be set aside for dogs to romp in and for defecation purposes, when the need arises.

If you want to join the fight for canine equality and express undiluted praise for not-so-purebred dogs, write to James Draper, Box 202, Garden City, Long Island, N.Y. But write soon. Fido's patience is wearing thin.

Here's What Mutts Are Demanding

Some other things that dogs from the wrong side of the tracks want, according to Draper, who has owned three mutts of his own:

- meatier dog food;
- more homes for strays;
- laws protecting them from abandonment and from being locked in hot cars on beach days;
- better treatment from dog farms that sell to pet shops.

To build a new and better image for mixed breeds, the AMBA is planning to fight on many fronts: a quarterly newsletter telling about dog heroism and calling for needed new legislation; regional shows for mutts, including obedience demonstrations and the awarding of blue ribbons for outstanding mongrels; pressure for more adoptions and less slaughter of homeless dogs at the ASPCA's, etc.

"Men, and probably women, too, do experience a distinct psychological crisis at around age 40. It has nothing to do with menopause, and only a little to do with the physical effects of aging. But, for better or worse, it changes every man who passes through it."

What Hits a Man When He Hits 40?

By Don A. Schanche

The idea of a male menopause, or "climacteric" as doctors call it, has been around since antiquity, but until recently there was no scientific evidence to support it. Yet almost every man who has lived through his mid-40's has experienced some kind of climactic crisis at that time, and wondered why.

Even young men have come to view the prospect with uncertainty, at best, and dread, at worst. The heroic poet Lord Byron, for example, looked forward with loathing toward middle-age, which, as it turned out, he never reached. "The dreary frontier of age," he called it. ". . . That horrid equinox, that hateful section of human years, that halfway house."

Byron may have over-dramatized it, but psychologists are learning that there is more than a grain of truth in what he feared. Men, and probably women, too, do experience a distinct psychological crisis at around age 40. It has nothing to do with menopause, and only a little to do with the physical effects of aging. But, for better or worse, it changes every man who passes through it.

In fact, the mid-life crisis is but one in a long stairway of critical developmental periods that alter our lives, according to Dr. Daniel J. Levinson, a Yale psychologist who for the past four years has been leading a research team in the first systematic study of the phenomenon.

The earliest of these critical periods already has been charted punctiliously by child psychologists. They range from the so-called Terrible Two's of late infancy to the sexual growing pains of adolescence. But until Dr. Levinson and a few other psychologists and psychiatrists started investigating the matter, most people thought that these developmental stages ended with childhood. Life after adolescence was thought to be a winding, but largely uninterrupted, pathway toward old age.

Actually, according to the experts, the path of adulthood is probably more like a bumpy trail leading up the face of a precipice from which, at any of a number of way stations, one might fall off.

The most critical of these pauses along life's climb, they say, is the one that comes at around age 40, give or take a few years. Dr. Ken Rogers, another psychologist who has studied the problem in London, New York and at Cleveland State College in Ohio, believes it is to blame for many of our most upsetting problems. Statistics have long shown that the years between 35 and 45 are times of especially high risk for suicide, divorce, extramarital affairs, career dislocations and accidents, among other lamentable events.

That, Dr. Levinson says, may explain why some men of great youthful promise, such as the poet Dylan Thomas, kill themselves as they reach 40. He also believes it may explain why such towering geniuses as Picasso do some of their best work after 40, because, conversely, the mid-life crisis can help them to grow.

Mrs. Charlotte Darrow, sociologist member of the Yale team, which also includes two other psychologists and two psychiatrists, likens the mid-life crisis to a man's "horizon." "It is a kind of crest in life," she says, "from which he can look back as well as ahead, and the vista can be troubling."

As he reviews his successes and failures, and anticipates further challenges in the future, he pauses to size himself up. He may not do it consciously, but his subconscious mind will do it for him. He "feels" the weight of disparity between what he once fancied that life held in store for him and what it has produced.

The experience may be devastating, or it may be as exhilarating as a second wind to a long-distance runner. More often it will be something in between. In any case; it will change him, say Dr. Levinson and his colleagues.

One of the 40 human subjects in the four-year Yale study, for example, was a novelist who had often dreamed of fame and artistic success, yet had fallen short of achieving either. At about 39 he began to suffer from a dawning awareness of the disparity between what he had once hoped for and what he had achieved. The resulting emotional turmoil led to strange yearnings, including sexual fantasies. He considered radical changes in his life, but in the end he settled on only one—a complete change of attitude.

"I feel a weakening of the need to be a great man and an increased feeling of, 'Let's just get through this the best way we can. Never mind hitting any home runs; let's just get through the ball game without being beaned,'" was the way he expressed it.

Another subject was a successful corporation executive who tossed away a brilliant management career to work entirely on his own when the vague anxieties of mid-life reminded him that he had not found the independence of which he dreamed as a youth. Still another went off the deep end of self-despair, left his wife, and landed first in jail, then in a hospital.

Each of the subjects was between 35 and 45 when the Yale study began, and it was Dr. Levinson's intention to concentrate solely on how they weathered the then hypothetical mid-life crisis. But as depth interviews and analysis progressed, it became clear to the researchers that there had been several critical developmental stages in each life, not just one at the midpoint. Although the men's life-styles varied widely, from that of blue-collar laborer to prize-winning biologist, the patterns of crisis were similar.

At some time around age 28, the young man enters a period of transition that begins to prepare him for the second major stage of adulthood. He may move, change jobs, leave his wife, or find a wife, but in the end, at around 32, he enters the stage called "Settling Down." The phrase means what it says: He makes a firm adult commitment to his career and accepts the responsibilities of building his life, including home and family, around it. If he doesn't, says Dr. Levinson, "his chances of forming a reasonably satisfying life structure (and one that can evolve with his further development) are diminished."

What Hits a Man When He Hits 40?

Sometime between 36 and 39, he enters another transitional stage, one so profound that scientists have given it the disquieting name, BOOM, for "Becoming One's Own Man." It can be as explosive as it sounds. He is approaching the brink of Mrs. Darrow's "horizon" and the prospect is unsettling. Among other things, he begins to chafe at the constraints and dependencies that have become a part of his "Settling Down" period.

If he's a middle-management man, he feels lost in the company crowd. A factory worker is tired of being told what to do by his foreman. The writer is sick of his critics.

At home he rejects the "mothering" that he once welcomed, even invited, from his wife. He seeks more independence in all of his relationships.

Many married men choose this time to act out their feelings by having affairs with other women, usually young ones who do not have the maternal aura that makes the erring BOOM sufferer feel like a little boy. Others just think about it. Either way, the wife often senses that her husband's libido is searching elsewhere for gratification. Since she usually doesn't understand the crisis that he is undergoing – and may, in fact, be going through exactly the same kind of crisis–their marriage explodes.

"During the BOOM period a man wants desperately to be affirmed by society in the roles that he values most," says Dr. Levinson. "At about age 40–somewhere in the 39 to 42 interval–most of our subjects fixed on some key event in their careers as carrying the ultimate message of their affirmation or devaluation by society."

One of the Yale subjects, for example, wrote a best seller. Another was graduated from a blue-collar job to one that he expected to lead to middle management within two years. Both felt a sense of affirmation, but it was accompanied by uncertainty, because neither of these watershed events quite lived up to what the men had hoped.

At that point they had reached the fourth, and most critical, of adult developmental stages, the "Mid-Life Crisis." It was time to ask themselves, consciously or unconsciously, whether the affirming event, and all that went before it, was really uplifting, or if it was simply another of life's disappointing put-downs.

During this period, what one psychiatrist has called "the internal noise of private anxiety" often becomes so loud that a man gets a distorted sense of what is going on around him. His work may suffer. His intimate relationships may deteriorate. If he has been chafing under his wife's mothering through the BOOM period, he may choose the mid-life crisis to break away from her completely. Or he may just think about it and satisfy himself with fantasies. In any case, he has to find a way to live with the discomfort, or pain, of recognizing the disparity between what he has gotten out of life and what he hoped he would get. No matter what he does, however, he comes through the crisis, in a year or two, a changed man.

"The internal noise of private anxiety often becomes so loud that a man gets a distorted sense of what is going on around him. His work may suffer."

"Even if nothing in his external life changes, the man does," contends Dr. Levinson. "He cannot return to or simply remain in the earlier life structure. Even if the structure stays relatively intact externally, inevitably there are internal changes that give it a different meaning."

When this happens, the man is moving into the post-crisis stage, which the Yale research group calls "Restabilization and the End of the Mid-Life Decade." In effect, this is another and more durable period of settling down that begins at around 45 or so.

If he does what most of the men who reached it in the Yale study seemed to do, he will keep the same marriage, the same job and the same external way of life. But inside he will begin putting his emphasis on the parts of his life that are fulfilling and, like the novelist who didn't want to get "beaned," avoid or de-emphasize the ones that are not.

Thus many men, perhaps most of them, seem to use the "climacteric," or mid-life crisis, as an occasion for reappraisal, renewed commitment, renaissance and growth, rather than sad resignation. For them there is a silver lining on the other side of what appears, in the midst of it, to be a very dark cloud.

WHAT ARE LIMITED EDITIONS

Each year quality companies like those represented here, produce a limited number of a specifically chosen plate before destroying the mold. We've sold many in recent years that have increased in price by over 500%.

Plate collecting isn't a new hobby, either. Bing and Grondahl of Denmark produced their first dated Annual Plate in 1895 and have produced one every year since. More and more Americans are starting plate collecting not only because they make great decorations but because they are good investments and future antiques too.

Ann-Margret: "I can't bear to be separated from Roger."

"I Like Being Dependent on a Man"

"You won't see me going to many parties. It's hard for me to go among strangers. I have the same friends now that I had when I came to this country."

How does a beautiful star feel after a 25-foot fall that resulted in five facial fractures, a broken jaw and a broken left arm? How does it affect her physically and emotionally? At her Benedict Canyon home in Beverly Hills, I found Ann-Margret as attractive as ever, though a bit more made up than before—and a lot more nervous.

FAMILY WEEKLY: Do you have any after-effects from your accident?

ANN-MARGRET: Well, I'm a bit shaky. The left side of my face is still a bit numb, and once in a while I lisp a little. And when I smile, my right side smiles and my left side becomes a bit crooked.

FW: How long do you think it will take until you have recovered fully?

ANN-MARGRET: The doctor told me six months to a year.

FW: What do you remember most of the accident?

ANN-MARGRET: I still have nightmares of the floor coming up at me as I fell. I'll tell you one thing—you won't ever see me on any platforms any more. Never. Ever.

FW: Why did you go back to work so soon after it happened?

ANN-MARGRET: Roger [Ann-Margret's husband, Roger Smith] didn't want me to open so soon. Neither did my mother or dad. But it's like being in a plane crash or a motorcycle accident. You've got to do it as quickly as possible or you may never do it, and that's why I went to the Las Vegas Hilton last November—to prove to myself that I wasn't afraid to face an audience again.

FW: Did you ever have a motorcycle accident?

ANN-MARGRET: Yes. Four years ago. I smashed into a car. I didn't break anything—but I was sure bruised. Still, two days later I was back on my motorcycle.

FW: Do you ride motorcycles now?

ANN-MARGRET: No. The doctor grounded me for a year.

FW: You've been married to Roger quite a few years now. Are you surprised it has lasted so long?

ANN-MARGRET: I was the first person to say it wouldn't last! In fact, Wonderful, Magical Figures!

Designed by American artists, produced by American craftsmen, Magi-Glo designs embrace all the traditional, wonderful, magical figures of Christmas: Cuddly Santa Clauses! Darling Christmas angels! Sparklings stars! Delectable candy canes! Shimmering Christmas trees! Gleaming candles! Caroling bells! And many more!

Discovery is "Accidental"

A TV and motion picture producer accidentally discovered the secret process that makes this spectacular effect possible, while investigating special effects for a science-fiction movie.

Researching phosphorescent materials, he found the only known methods of application (hand painting and silk screening) were often unsatisfactory and always costly. However (because he didn't know that it "couldn't be done") he developed a new method using high speed lithography and injection moulding.

Then, inspiration! He realized that his secret process would make it possible to produce stunning Christmas ornaments. They'd glow in the dark, yet cost less than ordinary ornaments!

Shatterproof Ornaments!

Next, he ruled out breakable materials, so even the youngest member of the family could share the thrill of trimming the Christmas tree. The final choices included specially treated shatterproof materials (durable enough for outdoor display!) as well as metallic laminates on heavy stock.

Excited by the enthusiastic comments of his normally blase' movietown friends, he arranged for exclusive distribution by a reputable mail order firm.

Set of 72 Only $3.50!

The successful result is the availability of Magi-Glo ornaments that glow in the dark with radiant, luminescent color! And they are priced so low that you can decorate your tree lavishly, use them as stocking stuffers, table decorations, and party favors—or even trim Christmas packages you want to "outshine" the rest!

A deluxe assortment of more than 72 individual Magi-Glo ornaments, (averaging over 3 inches in height!), is bargain-priced at only $3.50. That's less than five cents apiece! And quantity discounts make Magi-Glo ornaments ideal for Christmas gifts. You save $1 on each additional set!

Magi-Glo ornaments are the perfect gift for the people who deserve "something more" than just a card!

Ann-Margret

Continued

"I am a very private person. It is hard for me to work with new people, although I enjoy meeting them."

both Roger and I said it wouldn't last.

FW: Then why did you get married?

ANN-MARGRET: We decided to try it because we had such a rough time traveling together when we were not married. You know, checking into hotels and things like that. So we decided we might as well give it a try.

FW: Roger is an actor, producer, writer, manager – what most of all?

ANN-MARGRET: Roger manages only me. But his prime function is writer first, then producer, then manager.

FW: What about his role as a husband?

ANN-MARGRET: Oh, naturally that comes first!

FW: In addition to Roger, you have a business manager, lawyer, agent, publicist—don't you feel like a machine that is being manipulated?

ANN-MARGRET: Not really. I like being properly looked after.

FW: Don't you mind having people run your life for you?

ANN-MARGRET: My father ran my life when I was a child, and then I had a manager named Bobby Rogers. There's always been a man in my life who has managed me.

FW: Do you like being completely dependent upon a man?

ANN-MARGRET: That's the way I want it! I've never tried it on my own. I don't want to. I hope I never have to.

FW: Do you ever get restless?

ANN-MARGRET: I used to. When I did, I'd leave Roger for a couple of days and wouldn't tell him or anyone else where I was going.

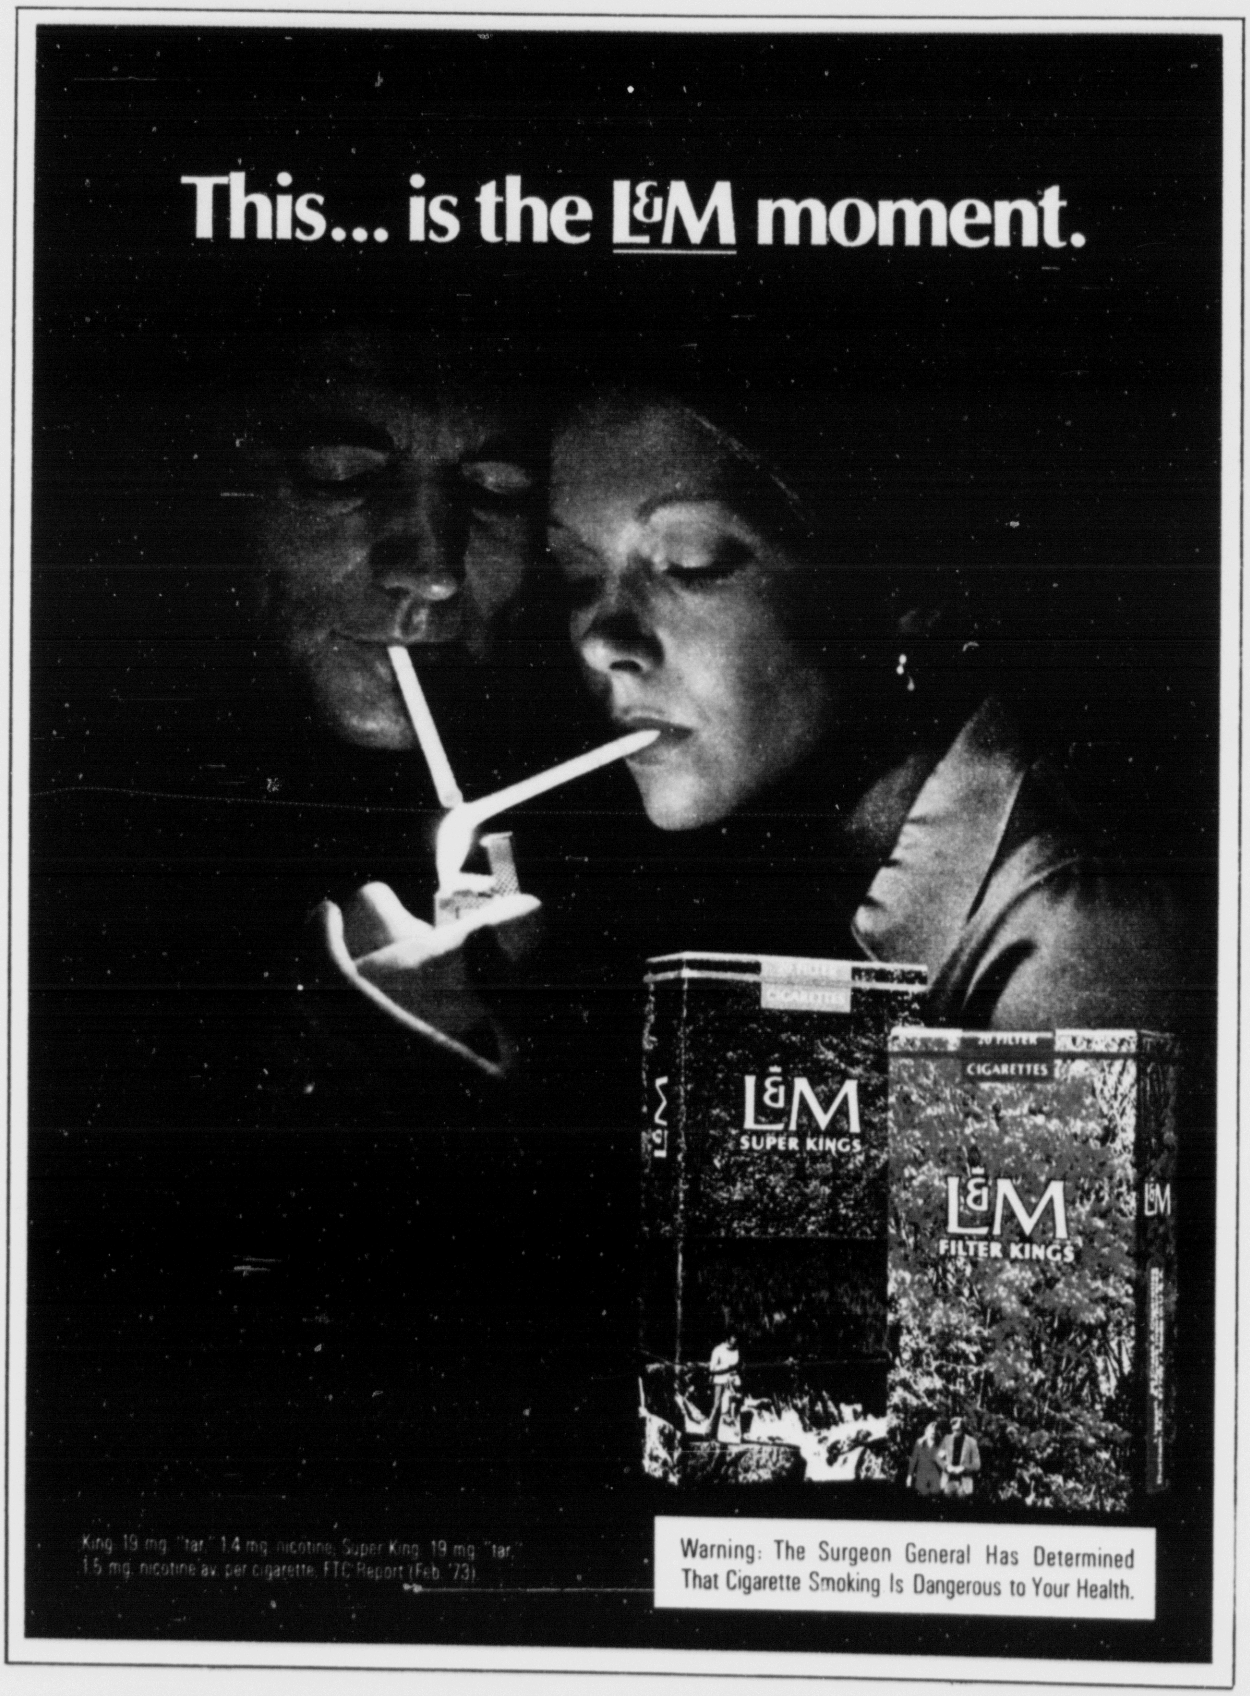

FW: Didn't Roger worry when you took off like that?

ANN-MARGRET: The first time I did it, he had the Los Angeles and Beverly Hills police looking for me! When I found out, I came back. After that I called him from wherever I went when I got there. Now, of course, I can't bear to be separated.

FW: Why did you take those sudden excursions?

ANN-MARGRET: Because I felt I needed a certain amount of independence. That's why I rebel every now and then.

FW: You have been quoted as saying you don't want any children. Why?

ANN-MARGRET: That's wrong. I'm dying to have a child, but I'm terribly afraid of dying.

FW: You are an only child. Did that affect your outlook on life?

ANN-MARGRET: I enjoyed being an only child. I got that much more attention. And I don't think I missed out on anything. No—I don't miss not having any brothers and sisters.

FW: You said your father ran your life for you. Did he or your mother talk you into show business?

ANN-MARGRET: My mom and dad knew I was interested in singing, and they wanted me to have singing and dancing lessons. But they didn't force them on me. They thought it was good for my shyness. It made me meet people. But my mother was never what you could call a stage mother.

FW: When you were little, what did you want to do when you grew up?

ANN-MARGRET: I always wanted to perform in nightclubs! I don't know where I got the idea.

FW: If you were so shy, how could you do the nude scenes in "Carnal Knowledge"?

ANN-MARGRET: Believe me, it was very, very rough on me to do it! I am very reserved. To me, nudeness is a sacred thing, something between a man and woman. But I am an actress, and it was an integral part of the story, and so I did it.

FW: Was that the first time you did a nude scene?

ANN-MARGRET: No. Roger wrote one into "C.C. and Co.," which was made before "Carnal Knowledge."

FW: And he talked you into doing it?

ANN-MARGRET: Yes, he did. Because he thought it was necessary for the film.

FW: If you are so shy, do you have a hard time showing emotion?

ANN-MARGRET: Yes. I am a very private person. It is hard for me to work with new people, although I enjoy meeting them. When I first came to the United States from Sweden when I was eight, I never spoke unless spoken to.

FW: How does your shyness show?

ANN-MARGRET: Well, you won't see me going to many parties. It's hard for me to go among strangers. I have the same friends now that I had when I came to this country. Of course, there are a few new ones, but not many.

FW: I can't help noticing that you wear such a big diamond. It might make Elizabeth Taylor jealous! When did you get it?

ANN-MARGRET: It's the engagement ring Roger gave me. He designed it.

FW: Do you like diamonds?

ANN-MARGRET: Do I! I love the way they sparkle! And to me they are a very special investment. That's where I put my money. I am like a child with diamonds and furs. They really turn me on!

FW: After all you have gone through, what do you want out of life?

ANN-MARGRET: To work. I like the feeling of making people happy. That's why I want to entertain.

What's Behind the Craze for Collecting Plates?

Haviland-Parlon's "Unicorn" plate has more than quadrupled in price, going from its original $35 to its present price of about $150.

"Collectors are a funny breed; though we may be offered a 1,000 percent profit on our treasure, we are very reluctant to part with it. I have yielded to the temptation to sell in the past—only to have to pay a much higher price later to reacquire the item I sold."

By Gordon Brantley

Although the collecting of china and porcelain plates is enjoying a boom market these days, it is by no means a new hobby.

In fact, it is several hundred years old.

Porcelain plates first came to Europe from China, and porcelain was so rare in earlier times that it was regarded more highly than precious metals—or even diamonds and emeralds. The inventive Germans "discovered" the formula for making porcelain in the 18th century and they set up several plants in Furstenburg and Dresden.

It was the custom in both the 18th and 19th centuries in Europe for friends and relatives to exchange plates filled with cookies and fruits at Christmastime as gifts commemorating the birth of Christ. These plates were kept or "collected" as mementos of a joyous season. Because of collectors, some of the earliest examples of European plates were saved from being lost.

But how did the collecting of limited-edition plates begin?

In 1895, the Bing and Grondahl Co. of Denmark had the bright idea of producing a dated Christmas plate showing a Danish Christmas scene.

These plates were handmade and hand-painted in the now-famous cobalt-blue-and-white sculpted design. They were underglazed and fired in kilns. And what a success story they turned out to be! They were so popular that every year since 1895 there has been a new plate each Christmas. The manufacturers intentionally produce a limited number each year and refuse to make any more after that—thus creating a low-supply and high-demand situation. If your great-grandparents had had the foresight to buy a few of those 1895 plates for 50 cents each, you could sell them today for about $2,500 apiece.

Royal Copenhagen, another well-known Danish porcelain maker, took a good look at the success Bing and Grondahl was having. Result: Royal Copenhagen decided to start its own series of Christmas plates in 1908. Although the first plate made by Royal Copenhagen brings around $1,400 today, their 1911 small Royal Copenhagen Christmas plate can bring as much as $5,000—that is, if you can find one for sale.

In recent years, other quality makers of porcelain and crystal have begun to manufacture annual or Christmas plates. The rise in prices paid for these plates has been spectacular—but nevertheless, it has happened. A well-known tennis-pro friend of mine bought a Lalique Annual Plate for his wife for $25 — back in 1965. Imagine her surprise when she saw this plate recently being offered for sale at $1,000!

The renewed interest in plates, and their current rise in popularity, began in 1969, when the Wedgwood Company of England offered a Christmas plate at $25 and the Bing and Grondahl company offered a Mother's Day plate at $9. They were sold out in no time and today command prices of $250 for the 1969 Bing and Grondahl Mother's Day and $200 for the Wedgwood Christmas plate.

You may well ask how realistic these prices are. Although the plates are commanding high prices today, will the upward trend continue? Just how safe an investment are plates, anyway? Of course, no one can predict the future. But let's look back 30 years at the 1943 Royal Copenhagen Christmas plate (up from $5 to $450) and the 1943 Bing and Grondahl Christmas plate (up to $175). It seems likely to me that the Bing and Grondahl or Royal Copenhagen Christmas plates you buy today will be worth much more in the future.

Collectors are a funny breed; though we may be offered a 1,000 percent profit on our treasure, we are very reluctant to part with it. I have yielded to the temptation to sell in the past—only to have to pay a much higher price later to reacquire the item I sold.

Goebel Hummel's Christmas plate, which sold for $25 in 1971, fetches $175 in today's market.

What advice would I give a budding collector looking for his first limited-edition collector plate? First and foremost, buy what appeals to you, buy what you think would look nice hanging on your wall or standing in your china cabinet. Most of my collector friends buy only what they like. If their plates increase in value, that's just an extra plus. Secondly, buy only from a reputable dealer who gives you return privileges if you're not satisfied with your purchase. A good dealer will only carry limited editions that he thinks have the necessary quality the collector will desire. The manufacturer of the plate should be well-known and should have a good reputation. You'll find plates of quality made by Goebel Hummel, Schmid Hummel, Haviland, Haviland-Parlon, Cristal D'Albret, Wedgwood, Gorham China, Hamilton Mint and Franklin Mint, among others.

Try to find out the number of plates that were made in an edition. An issue must not be too large, but enough plates must be produced to provide for a "secondary" market. Haviland-Parlon, for example, produced a "Unicorn" plate in a quantity of 12,000 pieces that sold out at $35 and now commands a price of $150 in the secondary market. (Their Christmas plate is even rarer; since only 5,000 plates were made, the edition is almost impossible to obtain.) Many collectors like plates by famous artists or commemorating famous people. Franklin Mint's Norman Rockwell Christmas plates have soared in value, as have the Hamilton Mint Picasso plates. You can still buy Gorham China's Rockwell offering of "Butter Girl" at less than $20.

Why the boom in plate collecting? First, it satisfies the human desire to collect things of beauty—and you don't have to be rich to take part. You can pay as little as $10 for a quality collector plate or as high as $1,400 for a work-of-art collector plate. Second, plates are excellent decorative accessories as wall hangings and represent a way to beautify a room in your house. Third, plate collectors find their hobby educational—they learn something about the plate-maker as well as the country from which the plate comes.

Many plates have been good investments and have been considered a hedge against inflation. Still, there is no guarantee that they will continue to double and triple in value every year. So there must be better reasons for collecting. There are. Many plate collectors now are forming clubs and buying plates because they enjoy their aesthetic beauty. And besides the joy of ownership, they have a new form of social activity and a chance to meet the other "plate nuts" of the world. FW

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

How People Really Feel About the Way They Live

True or False: Most people would rather have peace of mind than anything else. (See number 2)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Most Americans feel that they are caught up in social and economic pressures–the so-called "rat race"–that rob them of freedom to live the kind of lives they would like to.

2. Most people would rather have peace of mind than anything else.

3. Despite the frequently extolled joys of small-town and country living–with the slower pace, more tranquil and relaxed life-style–most people prefer the faster, more stimulating tempo of city life.

4. The happiest Americans tend to have one trait in common.

5. Most Americans feel that luck–knowing the right people, and being in the right place at the right time–is chiefly responsible for an individual's success.

ANSWERS

1. False–according to the findings of a nationwide Quality of American Life survey by the University of Michigan's Institute of Social Research, in which a cross section of men and women from all walks of life was interviewed. The results: "The vast majority of Americans say they are 'very free' (49 percent) or 'free enough' (40 percent) to live the kind of lives they want. About one person in eight, however, feels he lacks the freedom to live the life he would like, that society is treating him unfairly or placing him under unreasonable restraints."

2. False. A coast-to-coast survey of the attitudes and aspirations of Americans has shown that most people don't give peace of mind top priority. They rank such considerations as paying off their mortgages, moving to a better home, achieving a higher standard of living, staying healthy and the success of their children ahead of mental contentment.

3. False. In a nationwide poll that asked people where they would prefer to live, residence in a small town scored as the No. 1 choice, followed closely by suburban living. Farm life ranked next, polling almost twice as many votes as city living. A breakdown by occupations showed that white-collar workers evidenced the greatest partiality for life in a large metropolis, while business and professional people were among the most disenchanted.

4. True–as evidenced by a study of attitudes conducted by behavioral scientists from two universities. It was found that "closed-minded people (dogmatic, opinionated), in contrast to open-minded persons (persuadable, impressionable), tended to hold negative thoughts about themselves and others." In addition to their pessimistic outlook, they were found to hold conflicting and contradictory self-beliefs, and to think of themselves in terms of self-righteous martyrdom. The open-minded person, more optimistic about himself and the world around him, may be more gullible, more apt to "buy the Brooklyn Bridge," easier to sell some far-out theory, but he is a whole lot happier than his negative-minded opposite number.

5. False. Sociological surveys show that most Americans believe that, on the whole, people get what they deserve, that the chief ingredients in success and achievement are hard work, ability and the disposition to persevere in the face of obstacles, frustrations and disappointments. A two-year study of American attitudes sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health has shown that most people feel that failure to succeed in life is due in most cases to such personal shortcomings as lack of effort, absence of ambition and failure to take advantage of opportunities to further education.

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen makes "packet" dinners. "Once you fix these dishes in their individual foil wrappers, you can use them anytime. Right now—or after you freeze 'em, for Sunday, Monday or Tuesday dinner. They are handy to use also if family members are eating at different times."

CHICKEN-IN-SILVER

1 broiler-fryer (2¼ lbs.), cut in half
2 large carrots, cut into 1-inch pieces
2 medium potatoes, peeled and quartered
1 cup frozen peas, unthawed
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
½ teaspoon thyme leaves
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

1. Tear two pieces of heavy-duty foil, about 16x18 inches, off roll. Arrange chicken and vegetables, sprinkled with seasonings, in center of foil. Dot with butter.

2. Seal foil with double-fold drugstore wrap on top and sides.

3. To cook, place packages in shallow pan and bake in preheated 375°F. oven for 1 hour.

4. Or label foil-wrapped packages, date and freeze. To cook when frozen, bake in preheated 375°F. oven for 1½ hours. Makes 2-4 servings

MEATBALL-STEW-IN-A-PACKET

1 lb. ground chuck
½ cup quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked
Water
1 egg
1¼ teaspoons seasoned salt
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 bag (24 ozs.) frozen stew vegetables, unthawed
2 cans (8-oz. size) tomato sauce
1 envelope (¾ ozs.) brown-gravy mix
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 bay leaf, crumbled

1. In medium bowl combine chuck, oats, ⅓ cup water, egg, seasoned salt, garlic powder and ground black pepper. Blend with hands until thoroughly mixed.

4. Arrange stew vegetables around meatballs.

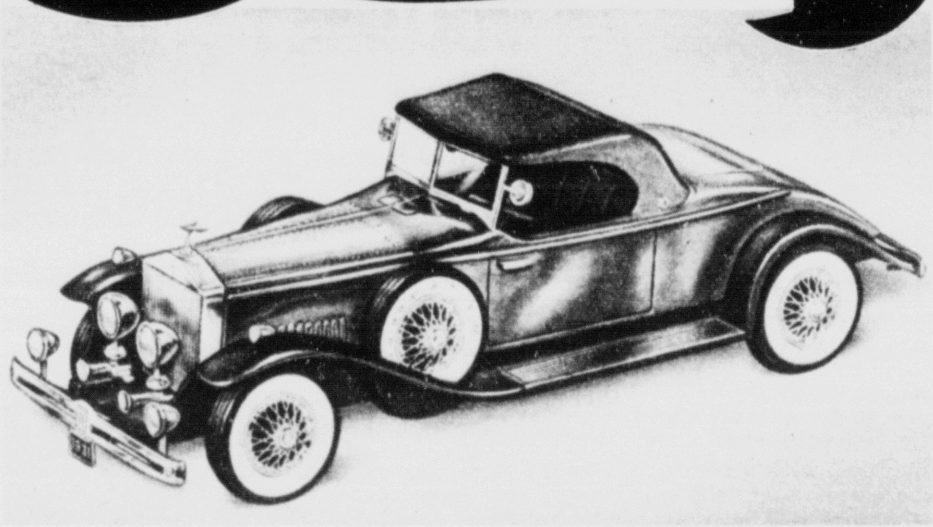

5. Make sauce: In small bowl combine tomato sauce, brown-gravy mix, Worcestershire, ⅓ cup water and bay leaf. Spoon sauce over meatballs and vegetables, dividing evenly.

6. Seal each packet with double-fold drugstore wrap at top and sides.

7. To cook immediately: Place wrapped foil packets in shallow pan and bake in preheated 350°F. oven for 50 minutes, or until vegetables are tender and meatballs are cooked through.

YOURS FREE

WHY WE OFFER THIS VOLUME FREE

Only by holding this superb volume in your hands, can you begin to experience the delight, wonder and excitement of owning The International Wildlife Encyclopedia. The International Wildlife Encyclopedia is a huge set of big, deluxe 8¾" x 12" volumes in handsome, durable, soil resistant bindings. It contains 2,688 pages, more than one and a half million words, more than 2,500 color illustrations, over 1,200 entries.

LAVISH IN BEAUTY AND INFORMATION!

For example, do you know how a Cicada makes his noise, and why this strange insect can be heard a quarter mile away? This Encyclopedia devotes an entire page of pictures and text to show you . . . while less specialized reference works cover the subject in a few sentences of text only. This desire to inform you fully puts this Encyclopedia in a class by itself.

Let your family taste the joy of owning The International Wildlife Encyclopedia! Send for your FREE Volume 1 today! There is no obligation to buy any further volumes. Yet merely by sending for your free Volume 1, you become privileged to acquire the remaining volumes (if you want them) at only $3.98 per volume (plus a small postage and handling charge).

Check Your Wildlife "I.Q."! See How Many of These Questions You and Your Children Can Answer Correctly!

Why can an Armadillo swim even though its armor makes it heavier than water?
Rivers are no obstacles to Armadillos, for although they are proportionately heavy because of their coats of armor, they gain added buoyancy by swallowing air to blow up the intestines.

Do Adélie Penguins run nursery schools for their infants?
Adélie Penguins do actually keep all their young chicks together in crèches, or public nurseries, but each parent can easily identify its own chick.

Why did sailors consider it unlucky to kill an Albatross?
The Albatross was considered by sailors to be harbingers of winds and storms. They were also considered the reincarnations of sailors who had been washed overboard, so it was extremely unlucky to kill them.

What is the only mammal that can really fly?
Members of the bat family are true flying mammals — the only ones in existence.

What fish carries its own "rod and reel"?
A strange fish that "shoots" a stream of water at insects resting on foliage close to the water is called the Archer fish.

What is the most numerous mammal on the face of the earth?
THE VOLE — a tiny mouse-like creature is more numerous than any other warm-blooded mammal. Untold millions inhabit the Northern Hemisphere. Voles may have a dozen litters of 6 or 8 babies — as many as 100 offspring — in a single year.

People and You

Do Troubles Really Come in Bunches?

Ever have a major problem facing your family and then have one member add to everyone's burdens by having an auto accident? Friends tell you, "Well, troubles come in twos and threes." But the auto mishap isn't just bad luck. When you're under great stress—especially (1) trouble with parents and/or inlaws; (2) job or financial pressure; (3) problems in school—you have to be extra careful with your driving. All these pressures significantly increase your chances of having an accident. Also, if you have drivers ages 16-24 in your family, it's important to know that certain types of problems make this age group especially auto-accident prone. If young people are hostile toward life and the world in general, or if they've dropped out of school or are receiving consistently poor grades, their chances of adding a car mishap to their troubles shoot upward. Many parents will sacrifice heavily to help an unhappy, hostile young person buy his own car. The parents hope that somehow owning the car will help him solve his problems and will make him happier. In some instances this may work. However, families should realize that 16-to-24-year-olds who are struggling with the emotional problems we mentioned have, per 100 drivers, an average of ten more accidents and 60 more warnings and violations a year than others in their age group with no emotional problems.

If you use a laxative more than once a week...

Here's real relief from constipation

If you've been taking magnesia, salts, oils or harsh chemical laxatives once a week or more and you're still not satisfied—here's a better way to end constipation worries. Take gentle, effective Serutan. It's different!

Unlike other laxatives that may cause irritation or griping, Serutan, taken daily, forms a soft gel which moistens food wastes and shapes them into a well-formed stool. Serutan produces the proper amount of bulk needed to help bring peristaltic stimulation to your sluggish colon. This is utterly different than forcing your system with harsh chemical laxatives which may dry you out. You can take gentle Serutan every day because it is a pure vegetable hydrogel and contains no harsh roughage, no chemical laxatives. Take Serutan every day to get regular—and keep regular.

Delicious Fruit Flavor

Serutan is available in delicious fruit flavor. Get Serutan fruit flavor or unflavored powder, or toasted granules. When you read Serutan backwards, it spells "natures." And nature's way is best.

TABARIN AND NODDY
His bark is worse than his hoot

Tabarin, a Belgian terrier, and Noddy, an owl, are fast friends. Marjorie Ansell adopted Noddy from the animal welfare center where she works and he and Tabarin have become constant companions. Mrs. Ansell says, "I came into the living room one day and saw the two of them parading round. Noddy was sitting on Tab's back, looking for all the world like a general reviewing his troops. Now Tabarin seems to like giving Noddy rides—and carries him all over the house." One of Noddy's many accomplishments is his ability to bark like a dog. Staying awake while others sleep, his guard-owl potential is great. "When the dog sleeps at night, the owl is awake. If Noddy gets worried about anything, he flies into our room, perches on the end of the bed—and barks!" said Mr. Ansell, a telephone engineer. Tabarin doesn't seem at all distressed by his pal's barking. And so far, he hasn't tried to mimic Noddy. Besides, dogs just don't hoot; but then again, owls don't bark either.

QUOTE: Rosalind Russell tells us, "It always shocks young people who want to go into the theater when I tell them, 'Talent is the last thing you need.' But it's true. You can buy talent. Get a fiddle, and if you take enough lessons, you'll learn to play. More important than talent is self-discipline. It throws them when I say that! But you have to have good health if you want to do anything particularly well. I've worked with actors who are far better than I—but you can't hear them from here to the chair. They lack vitality. And you have to learn how to fail—it's no good if you haven't learned how to pull yourself up from failure. In any field there are many who can't deal with failure—from the moment they experience it, they go downhill. Failure loves failure, so these people will tell you, 'Don't bother to get up and go to a job interview, don't move your not-so-dainty behind.' They're forever pulling you with them. You have to learn to be an individual, be more disciplined, get more energy behind you, learn more, study more. Then if there's a little talent too—it's a nice little asset to have." UNQUOTE.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

NOT GETTING THE POINT

Our house has full many a useful utensil,
But what I most need and can't find is a pencil.
I'll find one, I think, in a minute, somehow,
But it happens I've need of a pencil
right now.
I've a note to take down, and it simply won't wait,
Any time but right now will be slightly too late.
Could it be that the pencil I saw lying here
Just a minute ago could so fast disappear?
Perhaps some ecologist, loose in the head,
Has grabbed it, on hearing the thing contains lead.
There are times, I would say, and to say it I'm willin',
When a pencil's as vital as, say,
penicillin.

—Lane Olinghouse

In a hitherto unreported conversation, Chairman Mao, in a reflective mood, was asked how different he felt history would have been if President Kennedy had lived and Premier Khrushchev had been assassinated instead. Said Mao: "Well, I know one thing for sure. . . . Ari Onassis would never marry Mrs. Khrushchev!"

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

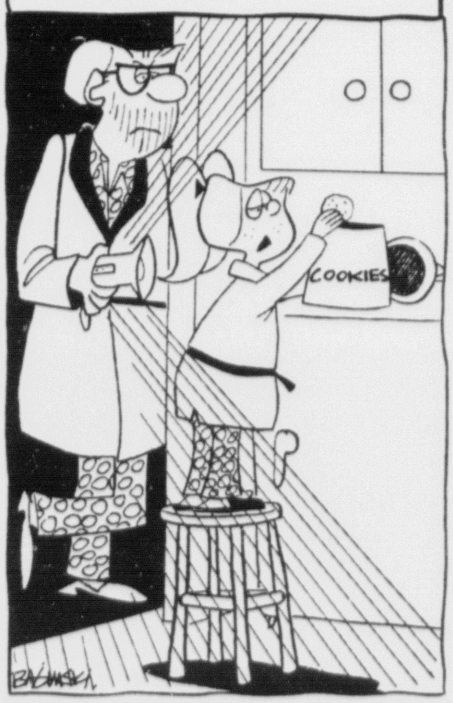

Kids see life differently. Send original contributions to "Child," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10022. $10 if used—none returned.

As an amateur magician, I have performed for large sales meetings, conventions and a wide variety of audiences throughout the United States. Recently, after performing for approximately 45 children at a birthday party, a little girl six years old came up to me and said, "You certainly had me fooled." Being happy that I had fooled her, I said, "Oh, I did?" She deflated me by saying, "Yes, I thought you were going to be good."

$1,200.00 A MONTH	$40.00 A DAY

both IN and OUT of the hospital

This basic kind of health insurance covers you when you're sick or hurt and can't work... in or out of the hospital. The little known fact is, your chances of being laid up at home are seven times as great as for hospital confinement. That's what our records show, and that's why we offer really wide-range protection like this that covers you during and after hospital confinement—covers you even if you never go to the hospital—that provides benefits over and above any hospital-surgical-medical benefits you may receive.

As the breadwinner, you can select the amount you qualify for (from $100.00 to $1,200.00 a month ...up to $40.00 a day) to help replace your paychecks when a covered sickness or accident keeps you from working. These monthly disability benefits are all yours to spend as you please for any purpose you choose... yours to use for every kind of bill.

THERE ARE SEVEN REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD CONSIDER THIS MUTUAL OF OMAHA PLAN:

1. You may qualify for up to $1,200.00 monthly income benefits (up to $40.00 a day) to spend as you see fit when you're sick or hurt and can't work!

2. These disability benefits are provided both IN and OUT of the hospital!

3. Your coverage becomes effective immediately for new sickness contracted or injury received after your policy is in force. Pre-existing conditions (old health problems) will not be covered for 12 months. This applies to such conditions shown on your application and not excluded from coverage.

4. Mental disorders are covered the same as any other sickness!

5. Your policy protects you as a passenger in any kind of aircraft—even a private plane!

6. Benefits are provided for disabilities incurred both on and off the job. They are available in addition to your Workmen's Compensation or Employer's Liability coverage!

7. You have this renewal agreement: no matter how often you may receive benefits, Mutual of Omaha guarantees to renew your policy as long as premiums are paid on time. Your premium can be changed only when changed for all policies of the same form and class in your state.

Please note that the amount of the benefit, the premium, and the deductible period vary with the plan you qualify for. And that benefits are not payable for losses caused by war or military service; narcotics, unless prescribed by a physician; childbirth, pregnancy, or resulting complications; disabilities that start after retirement or age 65, whichever comes first.

Get the full facts about this basic protection that can cover you both in and out of the hospital. They are yours for the asking, and you will also receive information about the fine plans to meet your life insurance needs now available from Mutual of Omaha's affiliate, United of Omaha. These facts are yours without cost or obligation if you write to Mutual of Omaha, Reader's Service, Department 1204, Omaha, Nebraska 68131.
